

Emergency ruling sought on unit vote

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only

Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Cook County Circuit Court Judge George Schaller two weeks ago denied Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit.

According to current state law, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

The unit district would combine 21 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Unit school plan becomes key issue in Dist. 21 race

by DIANE GRANAT

The course of action Wheeling Township Dist. 21 should take if a unit school district is formed in Elk Grove Township has cropped up as a key issue in the Dist. 21 board of education race.

The need for a "quick move" by Dist. 21 in the name of self-interest were reasons several board hopefuls said they would support the creation of a unit district in the Dist. 21 area if voters in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 decide to form a unit district with part of High School Dist. 214.

At a candidates' night Tuesday at Poe School, 2800 N. Highland Ave.,

Arlington Heights, residents quizzed candidates Xenophon Daniel Kafkas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein on the issue. The four newcomers are vying for two 3-year terms on the board.

DIST. 21 AND DIST. 59 are two of the seven elementary districts in Dist. 214. The proposed unit district would combine Dist. 59's 21 elementary and junior high schools with Forest View and Elk Grove high schools under one board and administration.

If voters in Dist. 59, the only persons now eligible to vote in the April 9 referendum, approve the unit proposal, (Continued on Page 5)

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alford Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

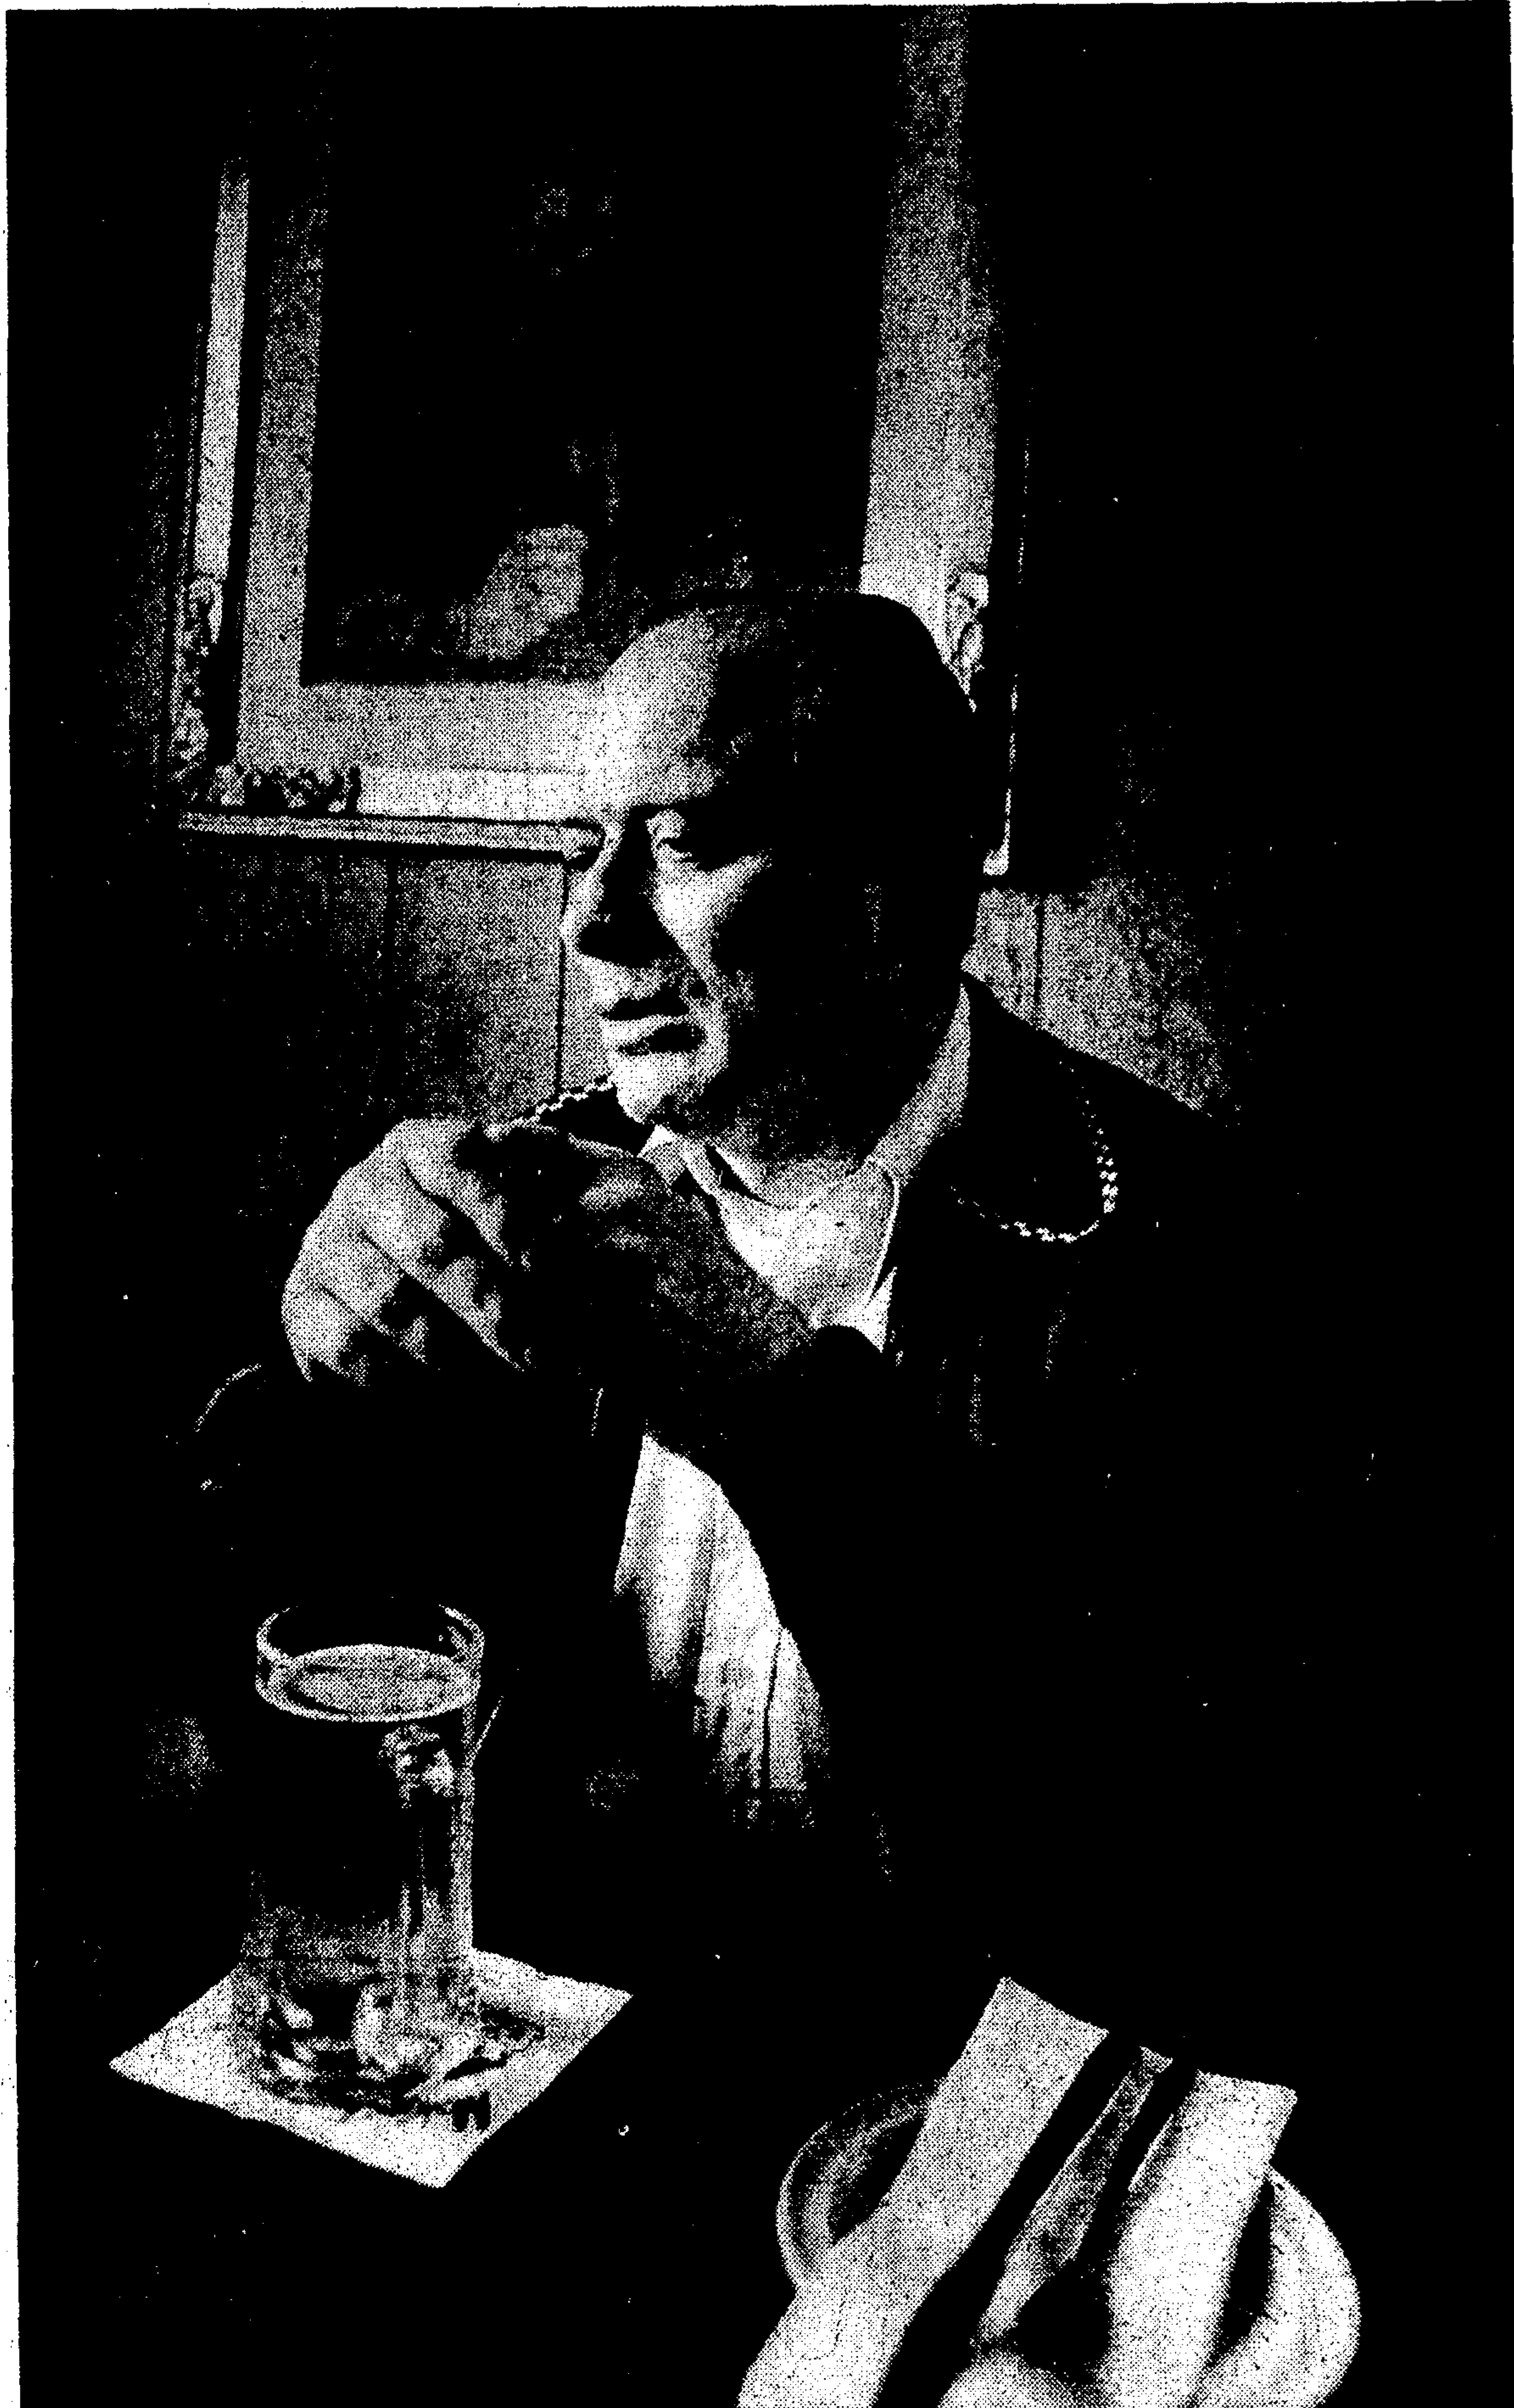

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

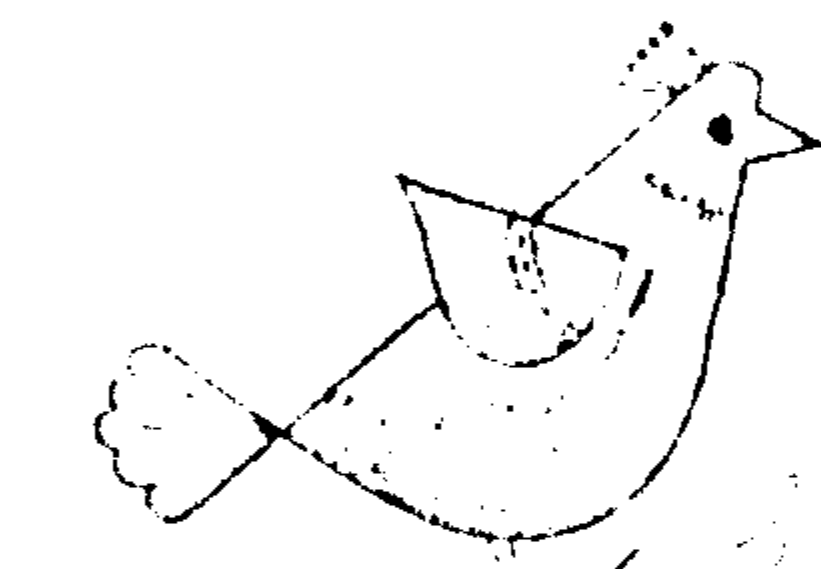

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

TIMOTHY KING

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnap-killings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkeley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying.

"We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

Horcher to retire as chief of police

Wheeling Police Chief M.O. ("Sykes") Horcher has decided to retire after a career in law enforcement that has spanned two decades. Horcher, 52, submitted his resignation to Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle Tuesday. The resignation is effective Sept. 16. Horcher said he has "no specific reasons" for resigning but added, "I think I've reached my peak. It's time to close up shop." Horcher, a life-long Wheeling resident, joined the village police force in 1948, was named chief in 1955 and served in that post until 1972 when he suffered a stroke. He served as village administrative assistant until 1975 when he was reappointed chief. Zerkle said he will meet with the village board to establish a procedure for replacing Horcher. He said candidates will be considered from within and outside the department.

Truck driver in fair condition

The driver of a truck that overturned Tuesday afternoon at Ill. Rte. 53 and Northwest Tollway was listed in fair condition Wednesday at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. Ralph E. Farris, 39, of Montrose, Iowa, was moved out of the hospital's intensive care unit Wednesday, a hospital official said. Farris had been pinned in the cab of his semitrailer truck after it overturned on an exit ramp to Northwest Highway at 4 p.m. Tuesday. He was freed by Rolling Meadows firefighters and was rushed to the hospital. He suffered multiple cuts and head injuries in the accident.

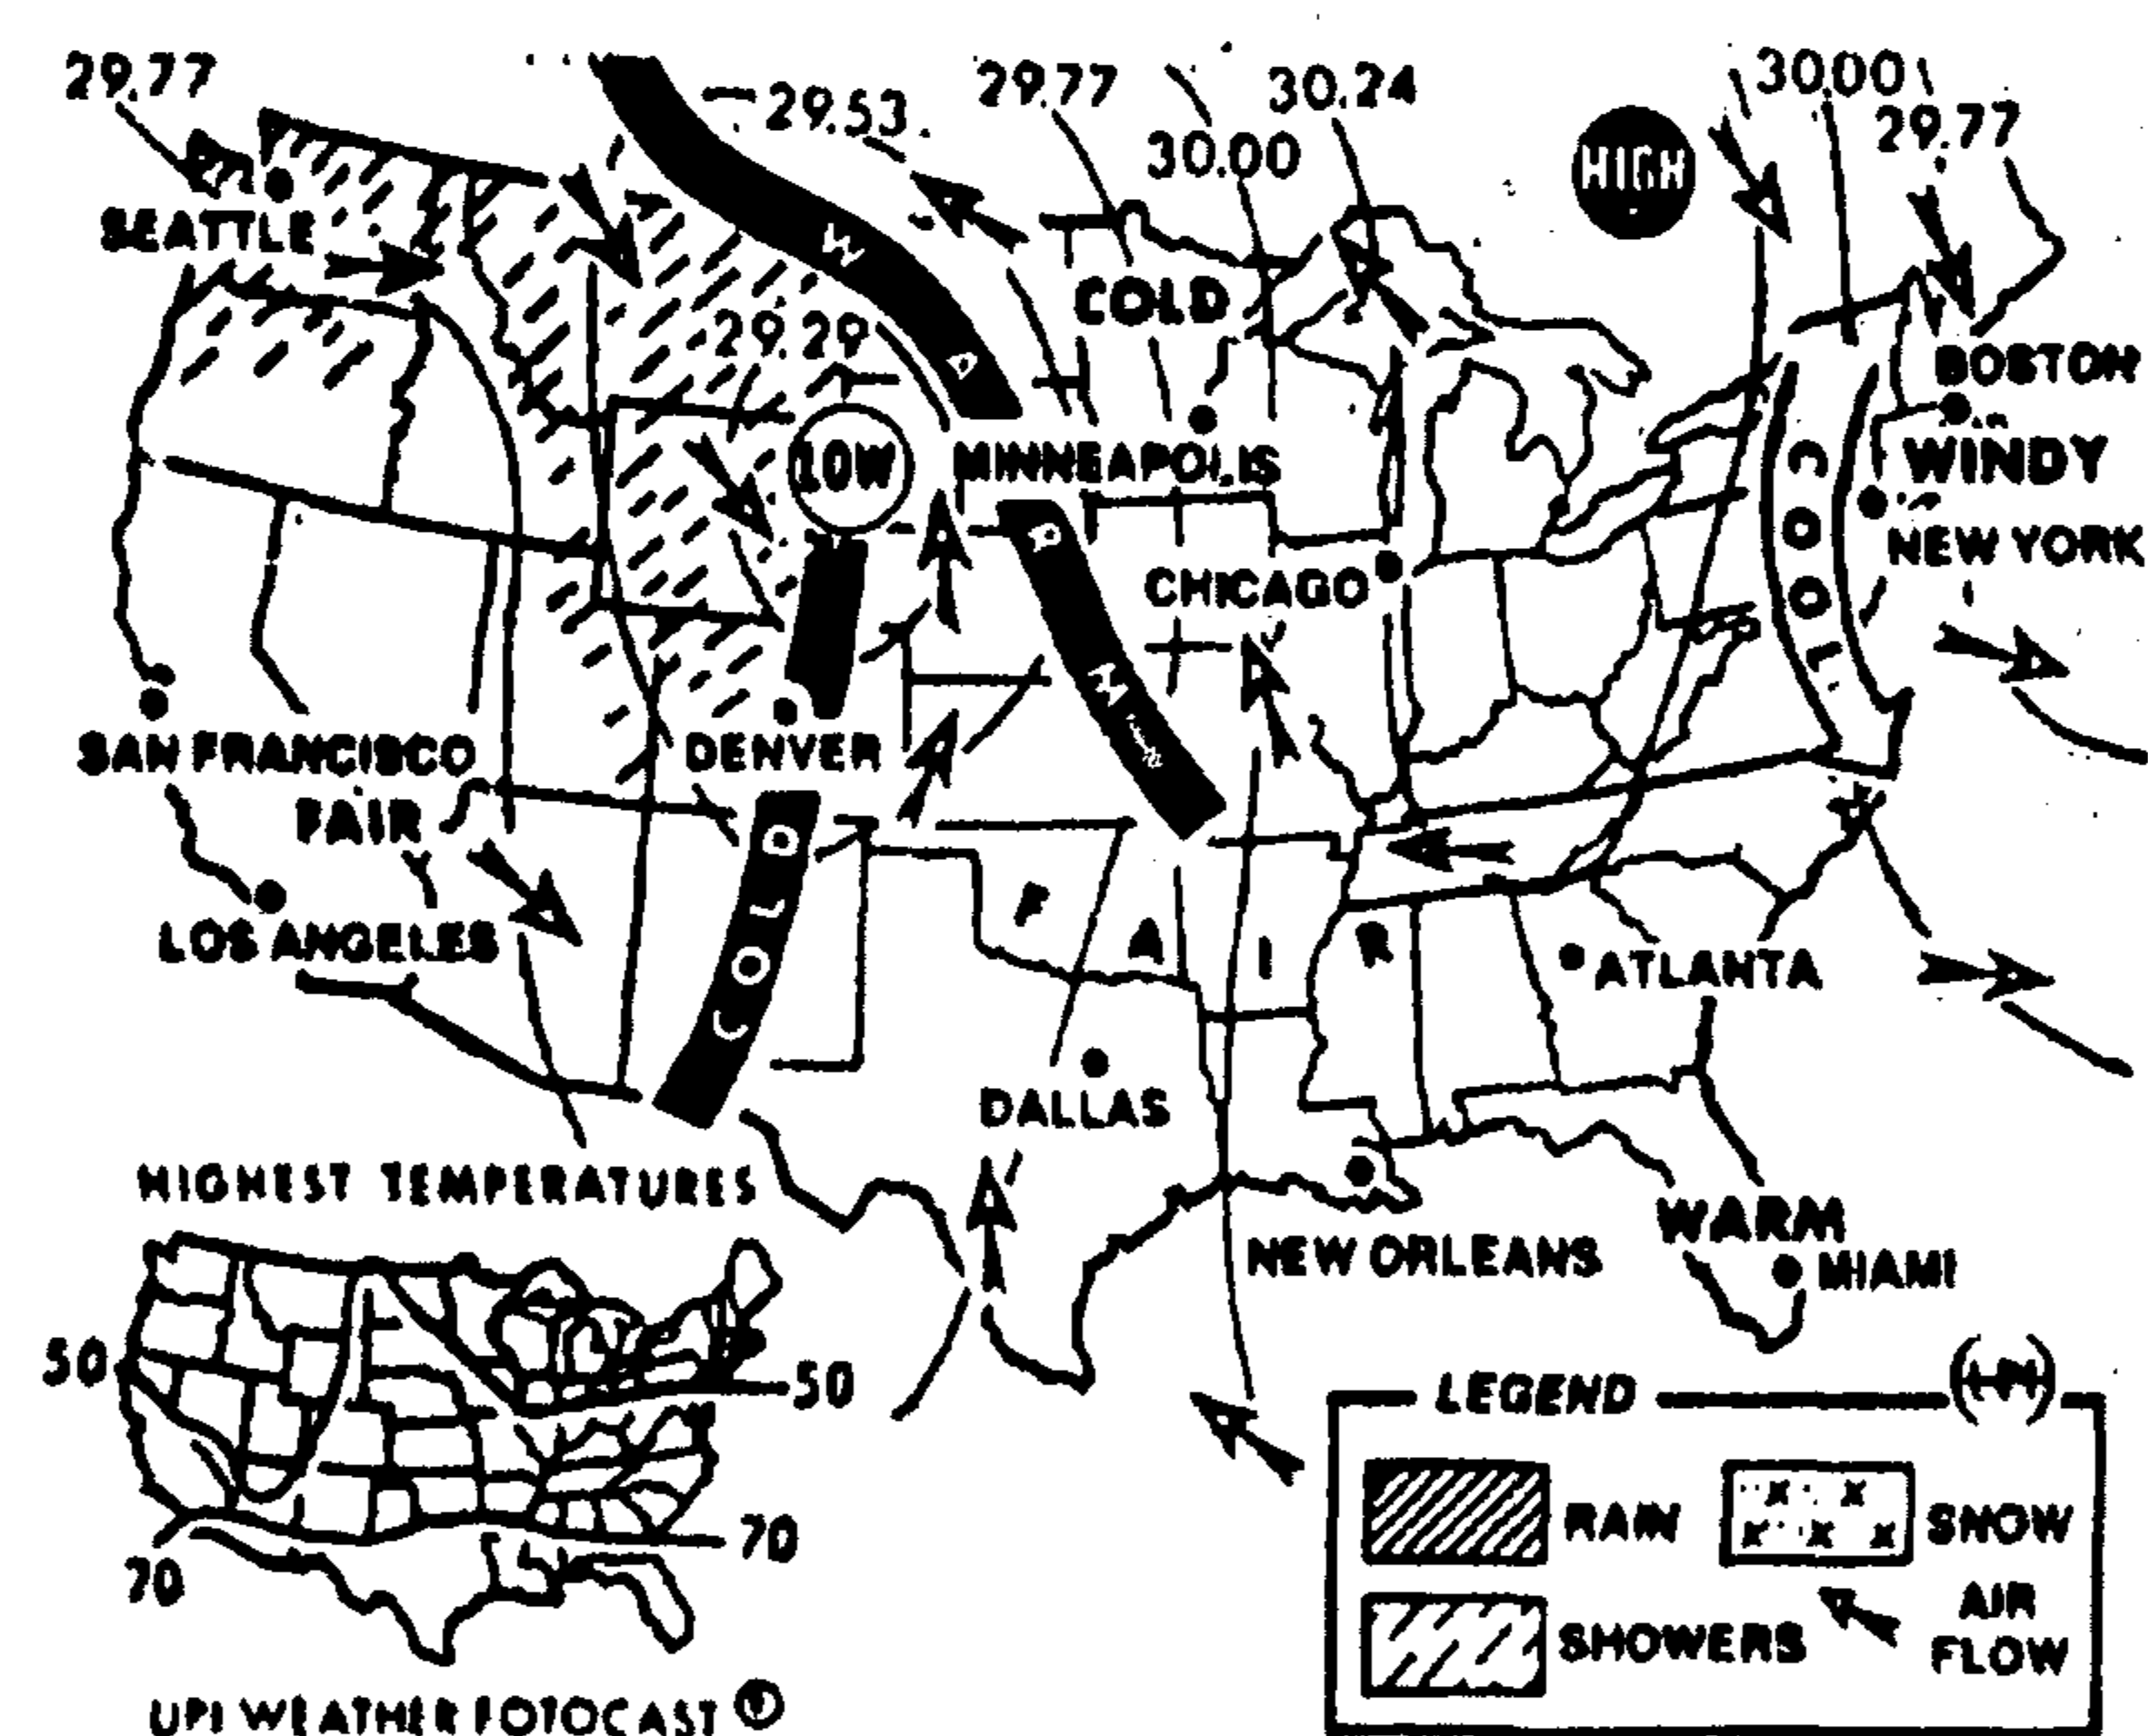

Seniors unit project to begin soon

Construction of a 119-unit senior citizens housing development will begin within 30 days in Arlington Heights, Victor Walchirk, executive director of the Cook County Highway Authority said Wednesday. The project will be built by A. J. Maggio Co., Mount Prospect, which submitted a bid of $2,246,500 for the work, lowest among 17 firms. Construction of the six-story building west of Highland Avenue between Wing and Miner streets, should take about 15 months, Walchirk said. The housing authority will begin taking applications from prospective tenants next winter, he said.

Barbs fly at hearing

Flaherty denies racist charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Peter Flaherty, nominated for deputy attorney general, denied Wednesday he has ever urged defiance of school busing laws, and sat silently as detractors and defenders roared through a shouting match over whether he is a "racist."

"I did oppose busing," Flaherty, Pittsburgh's mayor, said in rebuttal to charges he urged citizens to fight busing laws. "But at no time have I urged anyone to defy the law . . . I can assure you that I would never encourage anyone to defy the law."

Flaherty testified at his Senate confirmation hearings shortly after the dust had settled from an uproar of insults between Florence Bridges, a black Pittsburgher who called Flaherty "an expert racist" and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who charges Ms. Bridges herself might be the racist.

MS. BRIDGES charged in her Judiciary Committee testimony that Flaherty is "an expert racist" who is "antiblack, antipoor and technically not qualified" to be deputy attorney general.

"Peter Flaherty cares more for dogs than he does for poor children," she said, and said in Pennsylvania, "the whites always knew that Pete Flaherty was in their pocket."

Hatch, a friend of Flaherty's for 15 years, interrupted her angrily in Flaherty's defense, saying the nominee is "certainly not a racist" and adding "much of what you express indicates you may be a racist."

"You're precisely what causes the problem," Hatch said. "We ought to be ashamed as Americans if this is the kind of witness we have to listen to."

Ms. Bridges jumped to her feet, told Hatch "you have no right to call me names," refused to turn over materials she said documented her charges and stomped off in a huff.

FLAHERTY TOOK it all in from his hearing room seat, saying nothing.

The question of his position on the issue of school busing for racial integration was raised by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who said he was concerned about newspaper reports suggesting the mayor advocated defiance of a desegregation ruling by the state Human Relations Commission in 1972.

"I did not advocate defiance," Flaherty quietly told Metzenbaum.

He said the question then at issue was "not whether to comply, but how to comply" with the desegregation ruling.

"I said I thought busing would be counterproductive," he testified. "I favored that we look at the other alternatives. I never used the word 'defy.'"

Soviets endanger SALT: Ford

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former President Gerald R. Ford said Wednesday the forthcoming Strategic Arms Limitation Talks are endangered by Russia's "formidable military buildup."

"The Soviet Union, as we all recognize, over the last decade has embarked on a continuous and formidable military buildup that in the minds of many mocks the hope of peace and threatens the chance for a meaningful arms accord," Ford said.

Ford, looking tan and rested after a stay in Palm Springs, Calif., addressed about 100 members of the Eisenhower Exchange Fellowships at the Union Club. Ford is the newly appointed president of the group, which is devoted to promoting world peace through an international exchange of ideas.

"WE KNOW THE arms race has quickened in intensity and multiplied in danger," he told the group, which included 19 fellows from as many foreign countries, and the renewed SALT talks "will be difficult for the new administration."

Some observers viewed the address as Ford's first major foreign policy statement since leaving the White House, but one Ford aide said the former president did not consider the speech as such.

Citing his administration's efforts to control the arms race, Ford said, "For the first time, we agreed to put a 'cap' — a ceiling — on the number of strategic weapons . . . For the first time, we established mutually agreeable inspection procedures to ensure the integrity of the agreement."

"THIS WAS A giant step forward, unfortunately not totally concluded . . .

a giant step away from a rendezvous with nuclear destruction," he said.

Ford departed only once from his prepared text, omitting a section that said "The Soviet buildup has not escaped our attention, and the United States will not accept a treaty that leaves our national security in jeopardy."

He was referring to a warning the Senate delivered to Soviet leaders during confirmation debate on Paul Warnke as chief U. S. arms negotiator.

Assessments in Friday's Herald

Quadrennial property assessment lists for Wheeling and Palatine townships will be published in Friday editions of The Herald.

Photos of typical homes reassessed in the two townships, and information on how to file a formal complaint notice with the Cook County Board of Appeals will be included.

The complaint deadline for Wheeling Township property owners is 5 p.m. Monday. Palatine Township property owners have until April 4 to object to reassessments.

U.S.-Viet talks slated to set ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter announced Wednesday the United States and Vietnam will open talks in Paris "without delay" to start working toward establishment of normal diplomatic relations.

He said Hanoi suggested the breakthrough talks, with no preconditions for bargaining, as a follow-up to last week's negotiations with the visiting presidential commission on soldiers missing in action.

Carter praised the "good faith" Hanoi showed in dealing with that delegation and announced he is ready to start exploring possibilities for normal relations with the Communist regime that battled U. S. troops through a decade of war and toppled the American supported Saigon government.

"I WILL RESPOND immediately that we accept their invitation and these discussions will commence," he said in an unusual personal appearance in the White House press room. "There are no preconditions requested and there will certainly be no preconditions on our part."

There was no indication of a precise date on which the Paris talks might start. The United States, North and South Vietnam met for years in Paris, starting in 1968, to hammer out the peace agreement that eventually led the U. S. military withdrawal from the Vietnam war.

With members of the MIA commission standing behind him, Carter praised their efforts in Vietnam and Laos as "a superb mission."

"Every hope we had envisioned has been realized," he said, adding the commission had gone with the twofold objective of seeking an accounting of the 2,546 Americans missing or dead in Southeast Asia and laying the groundwork for future relations with the Communist Indochinese governments.

"The Vietnamese have not tied together the economic allocation of American funds to the MIA question," he said.

"They have acted in good faith. They have promised to set up a permanent study mechanism by which the United States government can provide information we have about the potential whereabouts of the servicemen who are lost and they have promised to cooperate."

THEN HE MADE his disclosure of Hanoi's request for further talks and his prompt acceptance, saying:

"They also suggested we reinstate our discussions in Paris without delay to resolve other issues that might be an obstacle to peace as between the two countries. Friendship between our two countries, normalization of relationships between our two countries."

Asked if the commission believed the remaining missing Americans were dead, Leonard Woodcock, commission chairman and president of the United Auto Workers, said: "That is the general conclusion of the commission."

Carter also said only 11 of the 12 bodies the Vietnamese gave to the commission proved, under medical identification procedures, to have been American servicemen. Remains of the 12th person, a Vietnamese, will be returned.

Carter called it "an honest mistake" by the Vietnamese.

JACK MATLICK the last person to have seen missing candy heiress Helen Voorhees Brach has lived with his family for several years on the 100-acre Brach family farm in Schaumburg Township. A private detective investigating the case says he doubts Matlick an employee of the family for 20 years, had anything to do with the disappearance and that Mrs. Brach is probably alive.

No foul play in Brach case: Rizzo

A private detective hired to find missing candy heiress Helen Voorhees Brach says he doubts a Schaumburg man who last saw her had anything to do with her disappearance.

Ernest Rizzo, who was hired by the family, also said he believes Mrs. Brach, 65, is alive and probably out of the country, possibly in Rio de Janeiro.

"I find absolutely no evidence that anything (bad) happened to the lady," he said. "I don't see any foul play anywhere."

RIZZO SAID that her houseman, Jack Matlick, who lives on the Brach family farm at the northwest corner of Meacham and Schaumburg roads in Schaumburg Township, had no reason to be involved in foul play.

Matlick was the last person reported to have seen Mrs. Brach. He told police in Glenview, where the heiress lives on a seven-acre estate, that he dropped her off at O'Hare Airport Feb. 21, the day she disappeared.

"No one's going to profit from her death, including Jack, and no one's going to profit if her body's not found," Rizzo said. "Disappearance to me does not represent foul play."

Referring to Matlick, Rizzo said the 20-year Brach family employee had no reason to do Mrs. Brach any harm.

"HE'S GOT LIFE made," Rizzo said. "He lives in her house (in Glenview), and he lives in her farm out in Schaumburg free."

The detective also said that if Matlick had been involved in any foul play, he would have had time to fabricate a story. Matlick told police he took Mrs. Brach to the airport at 6:50 a.m. on Feb. 21. If Matlick fabricated the story, Rizzo said, he wouldn't have said he dropped her off in the early morning.

Instead, Rizzo believes Mrs. Brach is probably incommunicado.

"SHE GOT UP at 5:30 in the morning. She had something definite planned to do," he said. "I wouldn't be surprised at all if she turned up. You're talking about a woman who is a millionaire who has absolutely no one to answer to."

MRS. BRACH is the widow of Frank Brach, who was board chairman of the E. J. Brach and Sons Inc. candy firm when he died in 1970.

"I've got a couple of things going," Rizzo said. "The last I heard, she was in Rio de Janeiro; there's a carnival starting there. I learned she was with a man in New York at the Waldorf New Year's Eve and they talked about going down there."

"She certainly can't be in the U.S., not with all this heat. She would have turned up by now. I don't buy that death theory, it certainly isn't a lovers' triangle. What would you kill a 65-year-old woman for?"

GLENVIEW POLICE have said she may have been the victim of foul play. They have discounted Rizzo's theory that she is well but wants no one to know her whereabouts.

Deputy Chief Robert Pfeister said if the heiress is alive on a lark, she hasn't been spending any money. She has not cashed checks, used credit cards or telephoned friends since she dropped out of sight, authorities said.

"She might not be spending money," said Rizzo, who said he has interviewed about 100 persons. "There was that fellow at the Waldorf. And it takes time for things (credit information) to filter back from another country."

"If there was foul play, someone would be in it for money. If she was killed by a mugger, a body would turn up somewhere. Muggers aren't hiding bodies."

RIZZO SAID he was hired by Mrs. Brach's brother, Charles Voorhees, Hopedale, Ohio, who first reported her disappearance March 9.

"He first hired me, but he couldn't afford my bill," Rizzo said. "Some other people who are millionaires are paying for this."

But police Tuesday expanded their search for the missing heiress in the Chicago area, saying there was no evidence she boarded the Florida-bound plane.

"She may have met with foul play," suburban Glenview Police Chief William Bartlett said.

Bartlett said there was no record of her purchasing a ticket for the Florida flight. Investigators said she seldom carried enough cash to make such a purchase and noted that bank records showed the last check written by Mrs. Brach was for transportation to and from the Mayo Clinic where she underwent a physical checkup in mid-February.

Stotts pleads not guilty in murder

Larry R. Stotts pleaded not guilty Wednesday to charges he stabbed and strangled to death Nargis Alvi, a 27-year-old grocery clerk in a Mount Prospect grocery store owned by her husband.

The plea was entered by Stotts' attorney, Thomas H. Hanlon, who filed a series of seven pretrial motions before Associate Circuit Court Judge Marvin J. Peters in the Des Plaines branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Stotts, 19, of 1701 Dennis Ln., Mount Prospect, smiled at his parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stotts, as he was led into the courtroom wearing a blue-gray set of coveralls with a "Have a nice day" emblem on the pocket.

Stotts, who is being held on $300,000 bond, was returned to Cermak Hospital in the Cook County Jail.

NISAR ALVI, husband of the murdered woman, appeared in court late, but had no comment on the proceedings. He said he will attend the next court date for Stotts April 5.

Stotts signed a confession to police after staying at the Mount Prospect police station for more than 24 hours voluntarily, police said. In the confession Stotts said he stabbed Mrs.

Alvi twice in the chest Feb. 20 in a walk-in cooler at the K & G Food Mart, 1760 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect.

Police said Stotts seems to be suffering from a dual personality because the suspect kept saying "Oscar killed (Mrs. Alvi)," and that he and Oscar "have been in conflict for a long time now, but I usually win."

A psychiatric examination by Cermak Hospital authorities, released in court March 9, said Stotts is "unstable, impulsive" and suffers from "aggressive fantasies."

HANLON'S MOTIONS ask the state to provide his client with a copy of any confessions Stotts may have made, a list of witnesses against him, a bill of particulars (details of the case), all evidence favorable to the client and a list of identifying witnesses.

Hanlon also filed motions asking to inspect physical evidence connected with the case and asked that any confession made by Stotts be suppressed.

Cook County Assistant State's Atty. Colin Simpson also filed motions asking for a discovery in the case, a list of witnesses, any defenses Stotts may use and copies of any mental or physical examinations made of Stotts.

The earliest time a ruling on these motions can be made is April 5, when Associate Circuit Judge Jerome A. Burke will take over the case for trial in Des Plaines.

"I got out of there. I like it up here, but I like to be out in the country," he said.

Jerry said he was questioned extensively by the FBI while his brother was being sought in the King killing, but they cleared Jerry of any involvement.

Since then, several writers have contended he helped his brother buy the rifle used in the killing.

"Some of them have tried to make me out as some kinda nut," he said. Jerry can name the writers and publications that have twisted the truth. "They are all dumped into the general category of 'dirty books' or 'dirty stories'."

Jerry visited his brother for two weeks earlier this month, while James was filming the first television interview he has given since being sentenced to a 99-year term. It was one of three or four trips Jerry is able to afford each year.

THE INTERVIEW AND offer to testify before the House assassinations committee has given some new signs that James might get a new trial.

"It is really hard to say," Jerry pauses and flicks a long ash off his cigarette. "He has agreed to go up before the committee and I have agreed to testify and take a lie detector test. If the committee is serious, then it might just show the frame-up and there may be a new trial."

But there's been so damn many times that we thought there would be a new trial and something has happened," he said.

Jerry said he believes the congressional committee may call his brother to testify soon, if the political squabbles that have stymied the investigation can be put aside.

HE ALSO IS looking forward to a new book by attorney Mark Lane that will be published in April as well as the start of a trial on a libel suit he filed in Knoxville, Tenn., over another "dirty story."

"James has never been perfect, he has escaped from prison and all that. He is just a professional crook and there is no way around that, but a new trial will get him out."

That hope still exists and Jerry keeps in touch with James and the rest of the family spread out in St. Louis and southern Illinois.

Whether the new trial or the congressional investigation will produce new evidence remains to be seen. But Jerry Ray believes his brother will be a free man again.

House unit to study child sexploitation

The Illinois House Wednesday voted to ask the legislature's investigative arm to look into all phases of sexual exploitation of children, including child prostitution and pornography featuring children. Under the resolution, passed 122-2, the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission would probe the ways and extent to which children are used sexually in Illinois. It would report to the General Assembly by Sept. 1. "Some writers say Illinois is the focal point for child sexual exploitation activities," said Rep. Peter Peters, R-Chicago, sponsor of the resolution. "Yet, our police agencies don't know much about it. I think it's time we find out."

In other action, a House committee rejected a bill to raise the drinking age for beer and wine from 18 to 21. The legislation would have reversed action taken in 1973 by the legislature when it lowered the state's drinking age, but the committee voted 8-5 to defeat the new measure.

Lincoln Towing socked for $625

Employees of the dreaded Lincoln Towing Service, Inc. might think twice before telling Gall Ornstein, "Sue us," again. Mrs. Ornstein, a court reporter who lives in the Lincoln Park area, won a $625 judgment Tuesday against the firm, the scourge of parkers in the Chicago neighborhood, in a three-hour jury trial. On her way home from work Nov. 22, Mrs. Ornstein stopped to pick up a sick cat at her veterinarian's office. She parked in the lot of a laundromat across from her apartment while she took the cat upstairs, and then forgot to move her car.

During the night, the "Lincoln Park Pirates," as they have come to be known, towed her car from the lot. When Mrs. Ornstein picked up her car, posting $50 to bail it out, she found the car leashed to the right. She later learned a steering wheel was bent and a tie rod broken. When she returned to Lincoln Towing with the $85.55 repair bill, her attorney said, an employee said simply, "Sue us." The jury that heard the case took 10 minutes to find the firm guilty of reckless conduct and negligence.

Man arrested after Loop chase

Chicago police finally caught a robbery suspect Wednesday after firing at him, chasing his car south on Lake Shore Drive where it crashed and then on foot along Michigan Avenue and up a fire escape. John Williamson, 24, Chicago, was charged with armed robbery, aggravated battery, unlawful restraint, negligent driving and possession of stolen property. Police said Williamson was accused of pulling a gun on a friend, Charles Douglas, 36, in his North Sheridan Road apartment early Wednesday, tying up Douglas, taking a television set, jewelry, and furs valued at $20,000, loading them into Douglas' car and driving off.

Douglas managed to free himself and call police. Williamson was stopped on Lake Shore Drive where he emerged from the car with the gun in his hand. Police fired three or four times at him and he drove off hitting speeds of more than 100 miles an hour before failing to make the curve at Oak Street. The car overturned but Williamson scrambled out and was chased to a building on East Walton Street where he was arrested on a fire escape.

Condition of blacks bad: study

The economic condition of the black community in Chicago has steadily deteriorated since 1970, and the situation is much more dismal than government statistics indicate, the Chicago Urban League reported Wednesday. James W. Compton, league president, said a three-month study financed by the Chicago Community Trust showed government figures are based on "inadequate and distorted information." The group's study showed black income declined much more than the earnings of whites, and the decline is much sharper than the national average.

Compton said, "In constant 1967 dollars, median black family income actually declined by $178 between 1969 and 1974, while median white family income grew by $123." The number of blacks employed also shrunk, even though the black population grew, the report said.

Dist. 21 union backs Kafkas and Weinstein

School board candidates Xenophon Daniel Kafkas and Stuart Weinstein have been endorsed by the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 teachers union.

The two newcomers were notified Tuesday that the union will support them in the April 9 election for two 3-year seats on the Dist. 21 Board. Kafkas and Weinstein both accepted the union's endorsement.

Linda Kurtzman, 463 Buckeye Rd., Wheeling, and Herbert Stein, 815 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights, also are seeking election to the board.

ALL FOUR CANDIDATES WERE interviewed by the union's political action committee, said Marilyn Beutin, the committee's co-chairman.

Beutin said the union will send letters to Dist. 21 teachers living in the district and residents who teach in other areas urging them to vote for Kafkas and Weinstein. She said the teachers also will make phone calls supporting the candidates during the week before the election.

Kafkas, 1108 S. Miller Ln., Buffalo Grove, said he was glad to receive the union's backing. "I think teachers are a school district's most valuable resource so I was very pleased," he said.

Weinstein, 3311 Carriage Way Dr., Arlington Heights, said he is "very pleased" the teachers endorsed him. He said because he did not decide to run in time to be interviewed by the Dist. 21 General Caucus for endorsement, he was glad the teachers "see me fitting and capable of being a board member."

KAFKAS ALSO WAS endorsed by the caucus, an independent citizens group representing several schools and community organizations in the district. The caucus also voted to support Stein.

In last year's school board election two union-supported newcomers unseated two incumbents. Elaine Bond and Linda Sprechman defeated former board members Steven Greenberg and Kenneth Rodeck for three-year terms. Incumbent Barbara Farr retained her seat in last year's election in which three seats were vacant. The Dist. 21 Caucus backed Farr, Bond and Fred Harms. Another teacher-backed newcomer, James Gallagher, lost his bid for the board.

This year incumbents Winfield Boyer and Jeremiah Crise are not seeking reelection when their terms expire in April.

Unit plan issue in Dist. 21 race

al, the new district would acquire 42 per cent of Dist. 21's tax base and 27 per cent of its students.

Kurtzman and Weinstein called for "quick action" by Dist. 21 if a unit district is formed in Elk Grove Township.

"If the referendum in Dist. 59 is allowed and if Dist. 59 approves it, we would have to take immediate action to go unit district for Dist. 21," said Weinstein, 3311 Carriage Way, Arlington Heights.

WEINSTEIN LATER said he only would vote for a unit district "if there are no other alternatives. I would feel obligated to vote for it, although it is selfish, to protect the interests of our children."

"We have to make a quick move if a Dist. 59 unit is formed," said Kurtzman, 463 Buckeye Rd., Wheeling. "It would be to our advantage to form a unit district so we are not left out in the cold."

Kurtzman said she is happy the current board is working on a contingency plan if Dist. 59's unit proposal is adopted. She said Dist. 21 must examine what kind of tax base will be left, exactly how many dollars will be available and if there are enough students in the area to fill two high schools.

Dist. 21 also must ask "are we taking something without looking at the other districts?" Kurtzman said.

Stein said he is cautious about whether Dist. 21 should become involved in a unit district. "I won't make any decisions without all the facts," he said.

BUT STEIN SAID IF the Elk Grove Township unit district is created, "just looking at the tax base around here it seems likely Dist. 21 would have to do this. If Dist. 59 does approve it, self-preservation is the name of the game."

Kafkas said he is opposed to the principle of unit districts. But "if it comes to pass that the economic imperatives are going to be such that we will have no alternative but to form a unit district," he said he would support a unit proposal.

"I think elementary education needs to have the highest priority in our educational system," Kafkas said. If a unit district is formed, he said, "I would make sure elementary education got its fair share on the new board."

About 70 residents attended Tuesday's meeting at Poe School. The candidates also will appear at forums Wednesday at Irving School, 1250 Radcliffe St., Buffalo Grove, and April 5 at Starkington School, 310 Scott St., Wheeling. Both meetings will begin at 8 p.m.

Frozen axle stops train; traffic tied up

A Chicago and North Western Ry. commuter train tied up rush-hour traffic Wednesday evening in Arlington Heights when it stalled.

Police said an axle on the locomotive froze.

Police said the crew of train No. 631 from Chicago noticed problems in one of the axles after the train pulled out of Mount Prospect shortly before 6 p.m. The train made it to Arlington Heights before the axle froze.

The train, which ran on the south track, blocked crossings at Vail, Dunton and Evergreen avenues. Commuters were transferred to another northwest-bound train. Other out-bound trains were rerouted on the center track.

Construction picket bill nixed in House

The House Wednesday night defeated a highly controversial construction picketing bill that was enacted by Congress in 1975 and vetoed by President Ford. The 205-217 vote was a major defeat for organized labor. Employers who lobbied heavily against the measure were overjoyed by their victory. The legislation, known as "common situs picketing," would have allowed striking building trade workers to picket an entire construction site, even in a dispute with a single subcontractor. President Carter had promised to sign the bill, but the White House refused to lobby for it.

Assassination unit cuts budget

The House assassination committee, in danger of lasting only one more week, approved a sharply reduced budget Wednesday in hopes the House will let it continue to investigate the deaths of President Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. After approving the budget, the panel met in private to hear from its investigators on Tuesday's prison interview with James Earl Ray, who is serving 99 years for killing King in 1968. Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, the committee chairman, told reporters no public report can yet be made on the "very lengthy" interview.

HEW hires chef for Califano

Despite President Carter's opposition to the more snooty aspects of government, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has hired a retired military man to fix meals for Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. An HEW spokesman today said the department has hired Wiley Barnes as a $12,763 a year chef, a civil service post created for Califano. Barnes, 40, recently retired from the Marine Corps where he managed the personal quarters of the commandant.

Soviets back black guerrillas

Soviet President Nikoli Podgorny Wednesday pledged continued support in Tanzania for black nationalist guerrillas and stressed the Communist bloc's support for "young African states." Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere at the same time chided certain unnamed Communist countries for not fully supporting attempts by Third World nations to achieve a "new international economic order." The two leaders spoke at a banquet in honor of Podgorny, at the start of a swing through Tanzania, Zambia and Mozambique — the so-called "frontline" countries against white-minority Rhodesia.

Planes bomb Zairean towns

Zairean bombers Wednesday pounded two towns held by former Katangan rebels with four tons of bombs and caused "very important damage," a government official said. The official also reported ground fighting between Zaire Army units and the invading force, which President Mobutu Sese Seko says are Katanga rebels led by Cuban officers attacking from Angola, on separate fronts in the copper belt now known as Shaba. The government official also said Dilolo was heavily bombed but he had no estimate of either human or material damage in either town.

ON AN OCEANFRONT not far from San Diego, Svetlana Alliluyeva, Stalin's daughter, lives quietly and raises her daughter, Olga, 5. Olga knows all about Colonel Sanders, but nothing about her grandfather, Josef Stalin. Ten years ago Svetlana came to the U.S. and her defection made headlines. Today the Americanization of the Kremlin princess is so complete she calls herself plain Lana Peters. ### Torture in Argentina cited

Amnesty International said in Condon Wednesday between 5,000 and 6,000 people are being held as political prisoners in Argentina, and that there are widespread incidents of torture and summary executions under the country's state of siege. A report by the organization's three-member mission also said that since the coup last March that ousted former President Isabel Peron, "between 2,000 and 5,000 people have disappeared without trace."

In Buenos Aires, the government of President Jorge Rafael Videla rejected the Amnesty International report. The military government said a careful reading of the report showed the cases it listed were based on hearsay evidence "which is not admissible as proof in the courts of justice of civilized nations."

Most of the political prisoners are detained under Argentina's state of siege and have not been charged or tried, said the private organization. The most commonly used torture, it said, are electric shock treatment, semi-asphyxiation by dunking the victim's head in water, beatings and kickings, cigarette burns, deprivation of food, drink and sleep, disorientation by hooding, and sexual abuse.

Carter trims fat in giving salary hikes to 48 aides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has raised the salaries of his 48 aides — 27 of them by at least $9,000 apiece — but no one got a raise as big as authorized under a new law, the White House said Wednesday.

Carter boosted the pay of nine top-level aides from $44,600 to $56,000, and the salaries of seven more staffers from $42,000 to $51,000. Eleven more were raised from $39,900 to $50,000.

Another 21 aides who had been making from $35,000 to $37,000 will have new salaries ranging from $40,000 to $45,000, with the average being $42,500.

CARTER WAS authorized to raise the salaries of White House aides up to 29 per cent under the new law permitting salary increases for members of Congress and officials of the executive branch.

However, Press Sec. Jody Powell said that at Carter's direction "a plan was devised to reduce the authorized salary increase for the White House staff."

"The President felt it was important for the White House to set an example in holding down increases in executive level salaries in the federal government," Powell said.

"He sees this action as complementary to the substantial reduction in total numbers of White House staff which took place at the beginning of the administration."

Powell had told reporters Tuesday that Carter had approved "substantial reductions" in the amounts permitted under the law.

CARTER'S NINE top aides would have received $57,000 if the automatic increase had gone through. After his review, $1,500 was shaved from that amount.

The same amount, $1,500, was sliced from the salary increases that could have gone to the 18 next ranking aides.

The $42,500 average salary Carter set for the 21 lowest ranking aides was $6,000 below what the new law authorized him to pay.

Powell said the President, by staying under the pay levels authorized in the law, was saving taxpayers $166,500 a year.

It was figured that the White House increases will total $396,700 a year, based on average salaries.

Callaghan wins confidence vote in party deal

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan, rescued from threatened defeat by a last minute deal with the small Liberal party, won a parliamentary confidence vote Wednesday, ensuring the survival of his minority Labor government.

The voting at the end of an often bitter and noisy six-hour debate was 322 for the government and 298 against it — a government majority of 24.

Callaghan ensured the government victory in a deal in which he promised to consult with the Liberals on government policies. In return, Liberal party leader David Steel swung his party's 13 votes to the government on the crucial confidence ballot.

The vote saved Callaghan's government from toppling after less than a year in office. It also rescued the Laborites from facing the nation's voters at once in a parliamentary general election which all recent opinion polls indicated would result in a landslide for the opposition Conservatives.

It was predicted an election at this time would probably bring Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher to power as Britain's first woman prime minister.

Parks want Cardinal; mull cost

The Rolling Meadows Park Board still wants to use the vacant Cardinal Drive School building, but commissioners say they don't know whether they can afford to buy or lease it.

Palatine Township Dist. 15 has rejected the board's offer of free ice time for students in exchange for use of the building at 2300 Cardinal Drive. School board members say they want to sell the building outright or lease it on a long-term basis.

Park Comr. Robert T. Byrnes, who has opposed the park district's plan, says he believes the school district's decision was a "wise and good" one. He says the park district cannot afford to buy or lease the building.

"That was the reason we went for the donation," he said. "I hope this will be the end of it."

BYRNES HAS SAID that even if the district obtained the school for free ice time, it could not afford the cost of renovating and maintaining the building.

Architects have estimated it would cost $82,000 to convert the building into administrative offices and recreational facilities. Operational costs are estimated at $20,000 per year.

Dist. 15 Board members could not estimate the price of the school because it must be sold at a public auction. The school was built for $385,630 in the late 1950s.

Park Board Pres. Jerry Hodlmair would not comment on whether the board would make another offer. "Any decision would have to be made by a majority of the commissioners," he said.

Hodlmair says he is disappointed in the school board's decision and believes the park district is the "logical user of the building." He also believes the ice-time offer was a good one.

"Considering the condition of the building, I think our offer was reasonable," he said. "We can't just walk in and use it; it needs a lot of remodeling."

Comr. Gregory Rose says he believes the park district still is interested in obtaining the building, but added, "I don't know if it's still feasible."

Rose, Hodlmair and Comr. Camille Fruzyan favored the original proposal. Fruzyan declined to comment.

BYRNES SAID the park district does not need the building.

"We have adequate office space, and we have access to gym space at public schools," he said. "I think the best thing for the school district is to try to sell the building and get some money in their pockets. Otherwise they'll have to tear it down."

Jim Fischer, recreation supervisor and assistant ice arena manager, said he is surprised at the school board's decision. "I think it was a good offer (the ice-time offer)," he said. "I think it would have been a learning experience for the kids."

"People are looking for more activities and we just don't have the space," Fischer said. "I think the people should be pushing for it too."

30% financial cutback for Omni-House urged

A 30 per cent cutback in financing for Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau is recommended in a report issued by the Arlington Heights village administration.

The report, written by Edward Geiss, human services coordinator, says the cutback from $29,000 to $20,300 is justified because the village should not pay for administrative costs of Omni-House and because of a duplication of services already available to residents through other agencies.

Peter Digre, executive director of Omni-House, objected to the financing recommendation, saying it would force cutting back one full-time staff person. Omni-House had requested an allocation of $43,600 for the 1977-78 fiscal year.

"THAT FUNDING proposal is completely unacceptable when you consider this is a town with over 10,000 young people. We have a very small and dedicated staff already functioning at full capacity at all times," Digre said. "The reality is that the village of Arlington Heights is not even paying for half of the cost of the programs given to them," he said.

The report also recommends Omni-House be required to have its clients sign release forms permitting the village administration to have the clients' names, addresses and phone numbers so "the village may contact them to verify their involvement."

The conflict between village officials and Omni-House over that request surfaced in February and has put village financing of the counseling bureau in jeopardy.

Digre said Tuesday he still opposes the village's request, saying the release of such "confidential" information would be unethical, illegal and harmful to Omni-House's effectiveness.

5 towns seek $1.5 million to speed fire, police calls

Five Northwest suburbs will seek approximately $1.5 million in funds to establish a central computer dispatching system for fire and police vehicles.

Buffalo Grove Fire Chief Wayne Winter said funds for the project are available from several federal agencies. The project also would establish a 911 emergency telephone number.

The five suburbs cooperating in the program are Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Rolling Meadows.

Winter said the main advantages of the computer system are speed and accuracy.

"IT IS FAR BETTER than the manual system. A computer will not make mistakes if it is fed the proper information," he said.

The proposed central dispatch center would be placed in the Arlington Heights Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Road, where the manually operated Northwest Suburban Central Dispatch Center is located.

The new system would computerize CDC and add fire departments to the system.

Winter said fire vehicles now are dispatched manually from each community's department.

"CENTRAL DISPATCHING is almost a must," he said. "We would provide non-jurisdictional response where the closest equipment would be sent. It will be a better and faster service."

Under the proposed system, citizens could report emergencies to an operator who would feed the information into a computer. The reports then would be made available on printout sheets from equipment that would be installed in fire and police vehicles.

Winter said the computer system would net a 50 per cent reduction in manpower costs.

"It would take twice as many dispatchers to do this manually on a centralized basis," he said.

Officials still are studying the plans for the system and do not know when the grant applications will be submitted. "It will be nice if we get it, but I don't believe it will be detrimental to the system if we don't," Winter said. "We will still try to sell it to the village boards."

No more coffee, tea or me

by LYNN ASINOF

Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Mr. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 28-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

Virginia and Kris Capling are grateful...

Rex is coming home to U.S. soil

VIRGINIA CAPLING after her husband's body was released by Vietnam: "I just try to believe this is a beginning of an accounting."

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND THE REMAINS OF 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubts that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she hears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners were released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over.

"What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering," Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

Ex-con tied to Ariz. fraud

by United Press International
In the eleventh copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said Ned Warren Sr., an ex-convict who arrived in Arizona in 1961, has been a dominant figure in Arizona's land boom and has participated in various land frauds.

The IRE article said:

• As puppet master of a maze of corporations, Warren refined land fraud into a multimillion dollar industry that spawned an army of imitators. He proved to have a shrewd eye for making friends, especially rising political stars, sometimes cutting them in on land deals.

• When real estate commissioner J. Fred Talley resigned under fire, Arizonans learned the sordid side of the land fraud business — the corruption of public officials with payoffs and bribes. Bribers apparently had little trouble finding takers.

• One source who partied with Talley, Warren and Associates said, "Anybody that could be bought, their name was brought up at the parties. They found so many people here at such low prices — I'm surprised how cheap some of these local people went. If they would have held off a little bit, they could have got some big money."

• Until recently, Warren operated with virtual impunity. While a few associates went to prison, Warren darted from one corporate entity to another like a broken field runner, several steps ahead of the prosecutors.

"I LIKE TO BUILD up companies for 18 months or so and then sell them and walk away from them," he told IRE reporters. That was his explanation for why he remained free while others were convicted: The projects that went bad, such as Cochise College Park, Lake Montezuma and Great Southwest Land & Cattle Co., were all projects he technically had sold to his colleagues, who then ran them into the ground.

But in most instances, he actually directed those companies in various consultant capacities.

The IRE is a group of 300 investigative journalists who sponsored nearly 10 journalists from 25 news organizations who spent six months probing crime in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

Columbo seeks separate trial

Defense attorneys for accused murderess Patricia Columbo are expected to request separate trials for her and Frank DeLuca at a court hearing Tuesday.

William Swano, assistant Cook County Public Defender for Miss Columbo, said among the motions he likely will submit in Cook County Circuit Court will be one requesting a separate trial for his client April 4.

Swano Wednesday refused to confirm or deny earlier reports that a separate trial for Miss Columbo will be requested so that she may testify as a defense witness at DeLuca's murder trial.

MICHAEL J. TOOMING, DeLuca's defense attorney, Wednesday said he has not decided whether he also will request a separate trial for his client.

The motions will be heard by Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham at the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

The Columbo-DeLuca case is in its final pretrial hearings, preparing for the April 4 trial in Pincham's courtroom.

Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 39, are charged in the May 4, 1976, murders of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca appeared in court Tuesday morning, where Pincham denied a defense motion for a bill of particulars to be turned over by prosecutors of the Cook County state's attorney's office.

THE BILL OF particulars would have enumerated dates and times of the crimes for which Miss Columbo and DeLuca are accused.

Still pending are defense motions to suppress statements collected by police from the defendants and requests to quash the defendants' arrests and suppress evidence.

Also pending in the Illinois Supreme Court is an appeal filed by prosecutors of a refusal by Pincham to order Miss Columbo and DeLuca to produce handwriting and blood samples.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, are collecting clippings of newspaper reports about the case to determine whether pretrial publicity has jeopardized Miss Columbo's and DeLuca's right to a fair trial.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each in the Cook County Jail, Chicago.

Do Not Pass Up Tax-Deferred Retirement Accounts

Make your retirement years more secure while you save on income taxes today! If you are not currently participating in a company-sponsored retirement, pension or profit-sharing plan, each year you may be eligible to set aside the lesser of $1500 or 15% of your annual wages in a Central Federal Savings Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Neither the funds you deposit nor the high interest you earn would be taxed until you withdraw them upon retirement (as early as age 59½).

Keogh Retirement Accounts are available for self-employed persons, too. For details call Central Federal today!

Our savers could fill a city

As we enter our 85th anniversary year, we're very pleased to see thousands of our friends and neighbors continue to place their trust and confidence in Central Federal Savings. We currently serve over 20,000 savers...and we serve them the best way we know how: with friendly service, special conveniences, high interest and insured safety on all savings accounts.

The loyalty of these customers has enabled us to reach assets of $120 million...and by helping us grow, our 20,000 savers have grown, too. During the past twelve months we've credited over $6 million in earnings.

20,000 savers...enough to fill a city! We'd like to make our family of savers include one more. Why not let that extra one be you? Centralize your savings today at Central Federal Savings!

Passbook accounts earn interest from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. Funds withdrawn from savings certificates before maturity are subject to a substantial interest penalty as required by federal regulations. Early withdrawal from Individual Retirement Accounts and Keogh Accounts is subject to income taxes and additional taxes under the Internal Revenue Code and Internal Revenue Regulations. No minimum balance is required by Central Federal on any IRA or Keogh account.

Higher rate for residents

City's tax right upheld, exemption OK too: court

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois Supreme Court Wednesday upheld the constitutionality of one Chicago tax but also upheld the legislature's right to grant exemptions from another of the city's levies.

The court ruled in favor of the city transactions tax, which applies to sale or lease of real estate and to lease or rental of certain types of personal property, including automobiles and trucks. Residents of the city pay at a higher rate than nonresidents.

The appeals court had invalidated the tax by upholding two challenges filed by Richard B. Williams and Patrick E. Gorman. The Supreme Court reversed that finding.

IT REJECTED arguments that the classification of transactions being taxed lacked a rational basis and bore no relationship to the object of the tax. The justices also rejected arguments that establishment of different rates for residents and nonresidents is unreasonable and discriminatory.

The justices approved an exemption to the Chicago employer head tax.

That ordinance requires every employer with 15 or more full-time employees to pay a tax of $3 per month per employee. The court already has upheld the basic constitutionality of that ordinance.

The legislature, however, passed a law in 1975 exempting insurance companies from the head tax and other similar levies. The 1970 constitution permits the legislature to limit cities' exercise of home-rule powers under which the tax was authorized.

THE CITY ARGUED the wording of the exemption prohibited only imposition of taxes directly related to the insurance business. Since the head tax is not directly related to the conduct of the insurance business, it should not be affected by the 1975 law, the city argued.

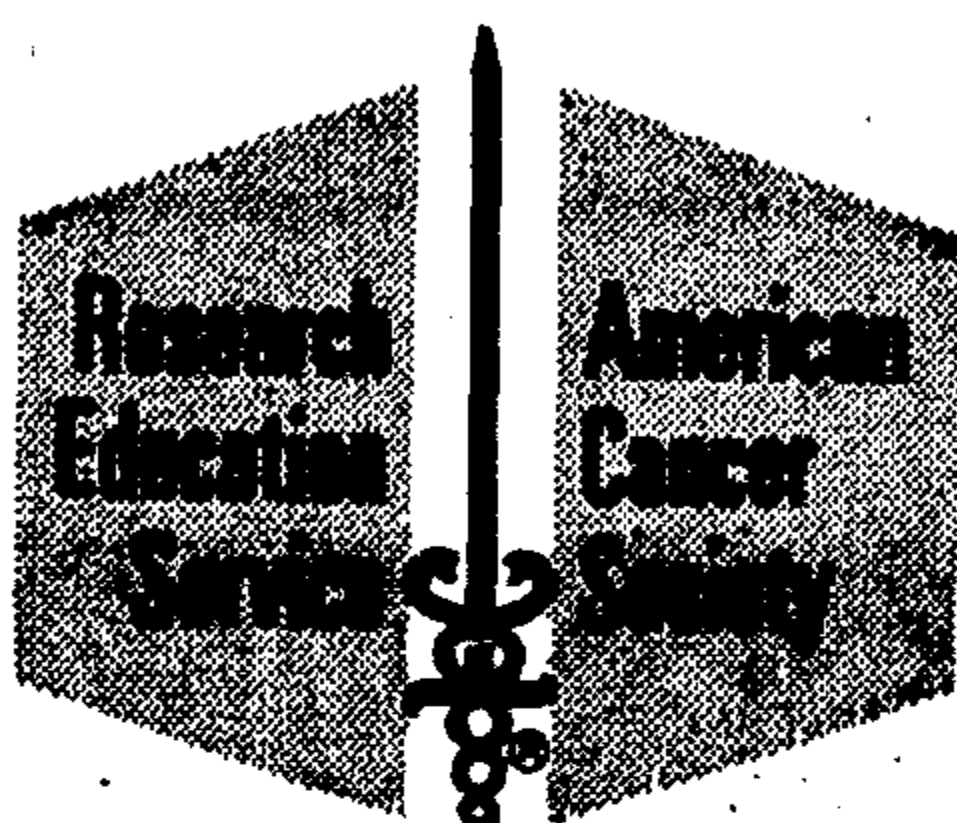

The court disagreed and said when the entire statute is considered, "the legislature's intent to prohibit all taxes and fees is plain."

In other action, the court:

• Reversed a Peoria County burglary conviction because the public defender who represented the suspect had earlier appeared in court on the other side of the same case as an assistant state's attorney. The Supreme Court ordered the case back to Circuit Court for a new trial.

• Upheld the constitutionality of a law which prohibits real estate agents from soliciting a property owner to sell his property after the owner has served notice he does not want to be contacted for that purpose. The law is designed to prevent "blockbusting" and similar racially motivated real estate tactics. The Cook County Circuit Court had held the law unconstitutional.

INTRODUCING "The Unique Iron"

The Conventional Iron

The Unique Iron

What causes the Unique Performance of this iron?

1. The basic dominant principle of the Unique Iron is a dramatic redistribution of the overall weight in the clubhead, which based on previous design technology and traditionally accepted design concepts for irons was not previously possible. Because of the large cavity directly behind the clubface as shown in the drawing, we are able to concentrate more weight below the striking point of the ball on the clubface than ever before. It is precisely this feature that causes the long and middle iron to "iron through" the ball to be so easy to play, even for those players who have not been able to give long irons "sufficiently in the past." It is also this exact same feature which gives the Unique Iron its tremendous forgiveness, thereby causing the ball to perform unbelievably well, even though the shot was played poorly.
2. The offset, that is what you see when you look at the clubhead sitting behind the ball at the address position, are completely different from any other iron now available (as present). The offset of the Unique Iron, particularly with the long and middle irons (2 iron through 6 iron) have the effect of creating confidence at the address position. This is a direct result of the fact that it is possible to see the back of the clubhead at the address position with the 2 iron through the 5 iron. These offsets are similar to those which you would experience with a wood, which may explain why more and more players prefer to play 5 and 7 woods instead of 2, 3 and 4 irons.
3. The double flange sole, which is a feature of all Unique Irons (1 iron through wedges), also is a contributing factor to the forgiveness previously mentioned. It has a definite minimizing effect on preventing the clubhead from entering the turf too deeply. This of course tends to reduce significantly the possibilities of hitting a shot fat.

★ WE CUSTOM FIT THE "UNIQUE IRONS" ON OUR ELECTRONIC SWING RECORDER!

The drawing on the top is a profile of the Unique No. 4 iron. The drawing on the bottom shows some profile with the overlaid outline in red being that of a traditional No. 4 iron. The traditional No. 4 iron is substantially the same as 95% of all irons on the market today. (A) is the cavity in the back of the Unique previously referred to (B) is the area in the back of the traditional iron which would normally be solid. (C) is the area in the Unique iron to which the weight has been relocated from (B) in the traditional iron.

Pope condemns slaying of young African cardinal

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI Wednesday condemned the slaying of Cardinal Emile Biayenda, at 50 the youngest black prince of the Roman Catholic Church. He said his death was further "tribute of pain and blood" the church pays to spread the Gospel.

Biayenda was killed Wednesday in Brazzaville in Africa in what the ruling military junta called a "family vendetta" by three relatives of assassinated Pres. Marien Ngouabi.

Vatican officials could not recall the last occasion on which a Roman Catholic cardinal had been killed but said no such event had occurred in this century.

CARDINAL BIAYENDA was created a cardinal by Pope Paul in his last consistory in 1973 and was the youngest of the 12 African cardinals.

The last Pope believed to have died a violent death was Leo X, who was said to have been poisoned in 1521. The last pontiff known to have been killed was Lucius II, fatally wounded while besieging Rome in 1145.

Pope Paul himself survived a knife attack when he visited the Philippines in 1970.

The 79-year-old pontiff told his weekly general audience that "with its most worthy and generous men, the church is continuing to pay a tribute of pain and blood which its founder, Christ Jesus, linked to the mission of peace and love (and) which it pursues throughout the world."

"THE VERY SAD news of the killing (of Biayenda) arrived this morning."

"He was 50. He was killed. Before that they killed the president of the republic, and then, we do not know under quite what circumstances, this best and brave cardinal was killed."

The Pope led pilgrims at the audience in prayers for Biayenda at the end of the meeting.

Biayenda's killing reduces the number of cardinals to 133, of which 115 are below 80 years of age and could take part in the election of the next pope.

Biayenda was, according to an official Vatican biography, "unjustly sentenced to house arrest" in Brazzaville in 1964, six years after he was ordained. The biography adds that this was "only for a few months because the civil authorities soon recognized his innocence" on the unspecified charges.

CARDINAL EMILE BIAYENDA

The detention was during the regime of Pres. Alphonse Massamba - Debat who was ousted in a coup in 1968 by Pres. Ngouabi, assassinated last Friday.

Cardinal killed in vendetta by kin of slain Congo chief

by United Press International

Cardinal Emile Biayenda, youngest black prince of the Roman Catholic church, was murdered Wednesday, three relatives of slain Congo President Marien Ngouabi in a "family vendetta," the military junta in Brazzaville said.

The 11-member Military Council, who took over the government after Ngouabi's assassination Friday, called for a "double national mourning" for the deaths of Biayenda and Ngouabi. At 50, Biayenda was the youngest of the 12 African cardinals.

A government spokesman said the three members of Ngouabi's family kidnapped Biayenda, the archbishop of Brazzaville, from his residence and "summarily killed him." The spokesman said the killers had acted out of a "family vendetta."

Officials did not explain what family or possible tribal rivalry pitted the Ngouabi family against Biayenda and his family circle.

Ngouabi was a Roman Catholic before he seized power in a military coup in 1968 and aligned the former French Congo with the Soviet Union. The Vatican said Biayenda had no quarrels with the Ngouabi regime.

The Foreign Ministry said the cardinal met Ngouabi for a talk about the country's problems only 30 minutes before Ngouabi's assassination.

The Military Council said the cardinal's assassins "will be punished in exemplary fashion just like the assassins of President Ngouabi."

The Council, in its statement on Biayenda's death, said it "cannot accept such acts which stem from blind passion and banditism and issues a stern warning to all persons who disturb public order."

Boy's death linked to 3 other slayings

file distributed by a special police task force described the type of person who might be responsible for the earlier deaths as a fanatic on cleanliness.

The only known lead in Timothy's disappearance was a report that the boy was seen outside the drug store that night talking to a man between 25 and 35 years old who was white, with dark brown hair cut in a shag style, muttonchop sideburns, a fair complexion and a husky build.

Timothy died just hours before his body was found, police said.

"We're confident that this killer has approached other children unsuccessfully," Birmingham Police Chief Rollin G. Tobin said. "If parents would only take the time to talk to their children, I'm sure they could bring new evidence to our attention."

TOBIN SAID police manpower in the investigation of the unsolved killings was being doubled because of "the very bad mistake" made by Timothy's abductor — dumping his body just 359 feet outside Oakland County, where all but one of the earlier killings occurred.

This means that officers from many more police agencies will join the hunt, with a total of about 2200 detectives working fulltime on the case, Tobin said.

Timothy's mother, Miriam King, identified her son at the Wayne County Morgue.

Mrs. King had appealed for the safe return of her son in an emotional letter published Sunday by the Detroit News. Tobin issued a similar appeal only hours before Timothy was slain, expressing the belief Tuesday afternoon that the boy still was alive.

"Leave him at a phone booth with a quarter," Tobin begged the kidnaper. "We want him home with his parents."

POLICE ARE seeking this medium-sized, huskily-built white man with brown hair and bushy sideburns in connection with the Timothy King case.

MRS. MARIAN KING is comforted by a Birmingham, Mich., policeman Wednesday after she identified the body of her son, Timothy, 11. Timothy, found late Tuesday in a roadside ditch, is the seventh victim in a series of unsolved child slayings in the Detroit area since 1975.

Ships fight icy water at Soo Locks

SAULT STE. MARIE (UPI) — Two U.S. Steel freighters battled the ice-clogged waters of the St. Mary's River and the Soo Locks Wednesday as they made their way back from Two Harbors, Minn.

Coast Guard officials said the Cason J. Callaway and Arthur M. Anderson had trouble clearing the locks because strong winds kept pushing heavy ice into their paths.

The Coast Guard cutter Westwind accompanied the ships through the locks and was breaking a path for them in the lower St. Mary's River. The 767-foot ships, carrying taconite pellets, are headed for mills in Chicago and Indiana.

Two other ships, the John G. Munson and Phillip R. Clarke, were reported still in Lake Superior and heading for the locks. A spokesman said the ships would be getting a Coast Guard escort sometime early tomorrow morning.

It was slow going for the freighters since they left Milwaukee last week to officially open the Great Lakes shipping season. The lakes had been closed to shipping traffic since January because of the severe winter weather.

The vessels and their ice-breaker escort ran into ice several feet thick in Lake Michigan. Ice again plagued the freighters once they reached the Soo Locks and it took three days for all four ships to make it into Lake Superior.

Responsibility.

Around here, that's more than just a word. It's the stuff our business is made of. A bank must be responsible, not only to its customers, but to its community. It must be responsible for the financial well being of its community. By reinvesting in the area, to the tune of $50 million in loans, First Arlington has taken its rightful place as a business leader in Arlington Heights. The bank's new management is aware of its place and has vowed to improve it. Our stated policy is to take on even greater responsibility for the healthy growth of this community. It's a challenge we eagerly accept, as we look forward to an exciting future for Arlington Heights and for the bank.

Voters deserve initiative right

The Coalition for Political Honesty aroused fear and animosity in many politicians last year when it collected 630,000 signatures in a grass-roots petition drive aimed at political ethics laws.

Now the coalition is back with a proposal that would give real meaning to such grass-roots efforts. The group has found legislative sponsors for an amendment to the state constitution to allow voters to pass laws by popular vote.

The proposal would allow initiative petitions to place measures on the ballot. Up to three initiatives could be voted on in each election. A petition would need 374,000 signatures to win a measure a place on the ballot.

The proposal is a sound, moderate approach toward granting the public more direct power over the shape of state government. There are enough limits built into it to prevent frivolous initiatives while ensuring the public the clear direct voice in legislation that it now lacks.

To many persons, the phrase "initiative petition" brings to mind the California system, where almost any proposal can be placed on the ballot. The system, while it has the strength of encouraging citizen participation, has the disadvantage of causing confusion and unwieldy ballots.

The sponsors of the coalition proposal, including State Rep. John Friedland, R-South Elgin, Roger Keats, R-Wilmette, and Roger Stanley, R-Streamwood, say their proposal limits the initiative power enough to avoid the bad elements of the California system, while giving the public more authority.

It may be that once the initiative is a fact in Illinois, some of the limits in the coalition proposal may be too restrictive. A requirement for 375,000 signatures on a petition certainly will discourage frivolous proposals, but a lower requirement might accomplish the same purpose.

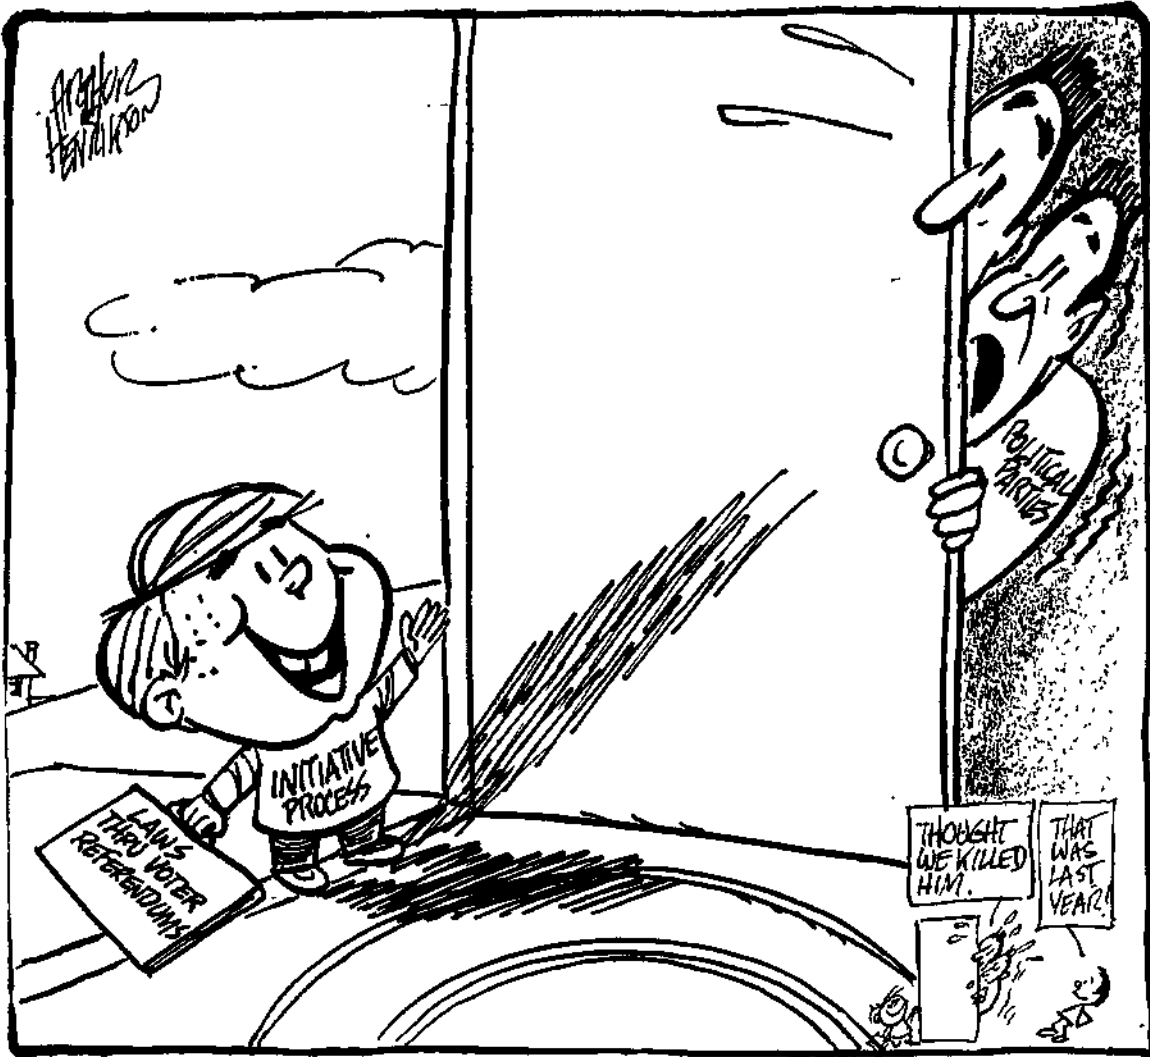

Experience in states with limited initiatives, including Arkansas and Missouri, shows that the system is practical.

The Illinois General Assembly must take the first step in providing for citizen initiatives by passing the coalition proposal by three fifths majorities in both Houses.

Once that is accomplished, the voters must approve the change in the 1978 election.

Those interested in increasing the voice of the public in Illinois government should urge their legislators to act favorably on the proposal.

Illinois voters have much to gain by the change.

safety benefit derived from the use of these tires. These findings were considered by the General Assembly when it decided to ban the use of studded snow tires in Illinois. While not all the research on studded tires is conclusive, enough evidence does exist to support our belief that the disadvantages of these tires outweigh the advantages.

The use of salt on highways in Illinois has actually not increased as mentioned in your letter. In fact, the use of road salt has decreased. In Fiscal Year (FY) 1972 this Department used a high of 281,000 tons of salt on our highways. Since that time the usage has decreased.

The Siplis incorrectly stated that only five states have banned the use of studded tires. In fact, 11 states have done so, many of which experience heavy snowfall and icy conditions each winter — Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, California, Texas, West Virginia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida and Hawaii. The Province of Ontario has also banned the use of these tires.

They're against unit district proposal

I have been a part of High School Dist. 214 for the past 22 years, as a student, teacher and taxpayer. The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit district issue has made me sad. Certainly the eight schools in the district are not identical, but each has a unique and wonderful personality. The halls of the older schools are dark; they lack carpeting. Some towns' park districts have helped to provide swimming pools. Forest View High School has a radio station.

Certainly the residents of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect did not benefit from the building of Elk Grove High School, and the residents of Elk Grove Village did not benefit from the building of Buffalo Grove High School. Or did they? In the past we have worked together to build a model high school district in the state of Illinois and the nation. I really believe that each and every high school was built to be the best at the time. There has never been an intentional step-child.

Elk Grove residents bear the burden of the industrial complex, as do the residents of Wheeling. Arlington residents watch their streets jam with race track goers, and Mount Prospect and Arlington residents also put up with the commuters.

All of the residents of Dist. 214 pay the same rate of tax. Some families send many children to a High School Dist. 214 school; some send a few; and some send none. Regardless, together we have built a superior school system.

I sincerely hope it is true in the future, as it has been in the past, that all the residents of High School Dist. 214 will continue to work in cooperation to maintain the optimum standards in all eight schools.

Polly Brothers Knudsen
Mount Prospect

In our modern day, quality is a value which appears to be of increasing importance to many people. We are concerned about quality in the products we buy, in the food we eat, in the political leaders we elect, in the air we breathe. We want quality in our lives, but sometimes it seems very difficult to come by — or perhaps to recognize.

We have in our Northwest suburban area a high school district, composed of eight schools, which has long enjoyed a fine reputation for educational excellence. High School Dist. 214 is large enough to offer a wide variety of courses and opportunities to its students and individualized enough to offer alternative modes of education for students who have difficulty functioning in a regular classroom situation. Teaching standards and quality are high. For a student who has had an inferior, inadequate elementary education in particular, the opportunity available in a Dist. 214 high school can literally be a life saver. Dist. 214 is widely known and respected and is a major attraction for families with children moving into this area. A fine adult education program is also provided for the communities served by this high school district.

It seems ironic, considering the problems we are experiencing with so many of our institutions, that serious consideration is being given to dismantling a school district which has a proven record of sound management and educational excellence. The responsibility resting on the shoulders of the voters eligible to vote on this issue is surely a heavy one.

Mary Jo Graham
Mount Prospect

It's unfortunate that the unit district debates have focused so much on taxes and financial advantages. Little attention has been paid to the most important issue — the quality of the education children will receive. The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 board and administration could cut taxes and reduce spending any time, if that's what counts. But schools exist to educate, not to provide a base for financial shenanigans or satisfy political ambitions.

The unit district proposal makes two assumptions. First, that Dist. 59 provides quality education. Second, that it is competent to run a high school system. Both assumptions are wrong. If they are not, Dist. 59 should flaunt its success and credentials. Let them address their ranking, their Iowa scores for the past 10 years in relation to their spending record. Have them explain how they'll achieve improved articulation from junior high to high school if they haven't achieved it from grade school to junior high. Ask them how their on-again, off-again educational program policies will benefit the high schools. Let them explain the low ratio of experienced teachers. And then challenge them to compare their incompetence with High School Dist. 214's professionalism.

As the father of six children who have attended both school districts, I can compare the difference. We finally gave up on 59 and transferred the three youngest to a parochial school. Their education was at stake.

Dist. 59 should clean up its own act before it cops out for more money. By promising new swimming pools and field houses from their new-found wealth, they are proving their priorities are as confused as ever.

If someone could guarantee that the Dist. 59 board and administration would be replaced by their Dist. 214 counterparts, I'd eagerly vote for the unit district. Then I'd feel confident to return my children to Dist. 59.

Words of praise

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Marsha Bosley, the staff of The Herald, and all the wonderful people who responded to the article regarding my financial plight. My personal financial plight in the total concept is very unimportant, but what is important, is the plight of the starving animals roaming the streets. They are the ones that are truly helpless and I am not. I must somehow in my lifetime change their plight.

Jake, the German Shepherd, is slipping fast, but in a last chance effort we are taking him to the University of Illinois Veterinary Clinic in Champaign, in the hope that they will find some way to save him. We would appreciate it if the readers of The Herald would say a little prayer for his recovery. Somewhere out there is his owner and I hope they too will pray for him.

The Palatine Junior Woman's Club held their seventh annual Antique Show and Sale on February 25 and 26 at the Plum Grove Club in Palatine.

This show was the most successful we have thus far sponsored. This success was due to the dealers who participated, and the members who assisted in so many different ways.

May I offer my heartfelt thanks to all those who made this show a success, especially to everyone who helped to support our organization's fund raiser. And best wishes to next year's committee for the same good luck in their endeavors.

Emotion not major issue with Warnke

I suppose he meant well, and it was a college audience, and he may have wanted to make up for a not very effective display on the floor of the Senate earlier, but the junior senator from Arkansas was a little more junior than he had to be in a barn-burner of a speech he gave down home the other day.

Its highlight was the charge that those of his colleagues who had opposed the confirmation of Paul Warnke as this country's chief arms negotiator "really don't consider Warnke as the issue at all, but rather any arms limitation agreement," and an accusation of moral inconsistency as well: "They are vitally concerned about Solzhenitsyn, Bukovsky, Ginzburg, et cetera, but they fought every Civil Rights Act passed in this country..."

If Dale Bumpers has had a chance to think about those words by now, the clearest conclusion he might draw from them is that he owes an apology at least to Senator Henry Jackson of Washington. Senator Jackson voted for just about every civil rights bill that came down the pike, he has voted for his share of arms treaties, and he led the fight against Paul Warnke's confirmation.

SEN. BUMPERS'S own standing in this kind of comparison is not unclouded. His handling of the busing issue when he was governor of Arkansas scarcely qualifies him as a moral exemplar. What he did about the moral issue then was mainly avoid it.

Just before appearing back home, Sen. Bumpers tried to reason out a defense of Warnke on the Senate floor, but the challenge proved too much for him. His first thesis seemed to be that, since the United States had enjoyed superiority in arms for so long after the Second World War and not done very much with it, the Soviets could be trusted to do the same when they achieved it. To state that argument is to pretty well refute it.

Secondly, Sen. Bumpers argued that nuclear parity was enough to assure the peace: "If the Soviet Union had 8,000 warheads as accurate as our 8,000 warheads, does this give them superiority? If it does, I want someone in this chamber to describe the scenario by which either side could win..."

Whereupon, Sam Nunn of Georgia described it in a few words and, even more evocatively, the words were those of The New Paul Warnke in congressional testimony: "If we were in a position in which they, by striking first, could take out so much of our missile force as to make it unlikely that we would be willing to respond for fear that their counterstrike would be devastating, then we would be deterred; they would not be deterred." That is what James Schlesinger used to warn against and what Paul Warnke used to dismiss — before Warnke was converted on the road to his new appointment.

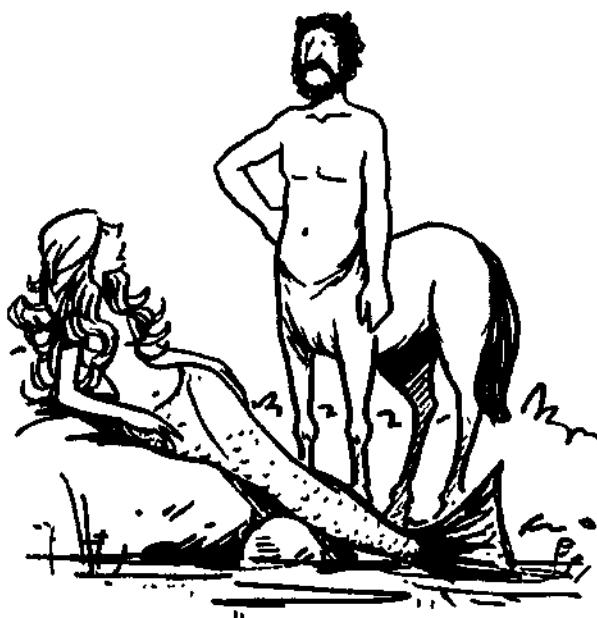

AFTER THAT, Sen. Bumpers was reduced to arguing that nuclear superiority in terms of numbers has no meaning. ("More is not necessarily better when it comes to this particular field.") Which left him open to Scoop Jackson. The senator from Washington wondered why, if the number of nuclear weapons is meaningless, the nuclear force of France and Britain are not taken very seriously by the Soviets or anyone else, including the French and British.

And so Sen. Bumpers, understandably, turned to the usual alternative when reason does not seem to afford sufficient advantage: The emotional appeal. "As a matter of fact," the senator said in what was the high point of his appeal, "Paul Warnke said everything I like to hear any decent, sensible man say who does not want to see his children and grandchildren incinerated." Meaning that those who oppose Paul Warnke do?

RECITING THE horrors of atomic warfare ("children and grandchildren incinerated") to justify Paul Warnke is on a par with reciting the hydra-headed horrors of Communism to oppose Paul Warnke. Both tactics tend to avoid the more relevant issue of Warnke's own record, with its long somnolent years and its sudden awakening attendant upon seeking high office.

Sen. Bumpers seemed taken with that phrase about "incineration," repeating it in his speech back home. But man is not incinerated by nuclear weapons alone. Decades before The Bomb, there were those who reasoned, and orated, on behalf of American initiatives in disarmament, explaining that numbers didn't matter so much, that new weapons led to new wars, that a totalitarian state could be depended on to act with restraint, that the burden of armaments would crush American society, that those who opposed making these reasonable concessions to the dictators were leading the world to cataclysm... Looking back, it might be argued that those who succeeded with such arguments were the ones who led the world to a war that incinerated millions. But I suppose they meant well. # Vachon leads L.A. past Hawks, 3-1

Bob Murdoch scored twice and goalie Rogie Vachon set a club record Wednesday night with his 29th win of the year to lead the Los Angeles Kings to a 3-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks.

Murdoch's first goal midway in the third period broke a 1-1 tie and his second eight minutes later iced the contest for Los Angeles. The Kings beat Chicago goalie Tony Esposito for only the 11th time in 33 games since the Kings entered the National Hockey League.

Chicago jumped to a 1-0 lead on Alain Daigle's 12th goal of the year 12 seconds into the game. Los Angeles' Marcel Dionne scored a power play goal, his 44th of the season, which extended the Kings' league lead in power play conversions to 64.

GREGG SHEPPARD scored one goal and assisted on three others and Gerry Cheevers registered his third shutout of the season Wednesday night as the Boston Bruins blanked the Detroit Red Wings, 6-0.

Jean Ratelle opened the scoring for Boston at 8:51 of the first period and Doug Halward made it 2-0 with his goal at the 16:34 mark.

Sheppard counted his tally at the 18:44 mark of the second period and Terry O'Reilly put Boston up, 4-0, with his goal 63 seconds later.

DAVE FORBES connected on a shorthanded goal at 6:30 of the final period and Rick Middleton added the last Boston goal at the midway point to give the Bruins their 13th win in their last 14 games.

Second-period goals by Rod Gilbert, Greg Polis and Ken Hodge enabled the New York Rangers to rally Wednesday night and score an important 5-3 National Hockey League victory over the Colorado Rockies.

The win moved the Rangers to within three points of the idle Atlanta Flames in their battle for the third and last playoff berth in the Patrick Division.

Gilbert scored his 25th goal of the season at 2:48 of the second period, tying the score at 3-3. Polis followed at 13:03 with the tie-breaker and Hodge tallied his 19th goal of the season at 18:03.

BRIAN SPENCER scored his career-high 14th goal of the season and Jerry Korab tied his club record for a defenseman with his 13th goal as the Buffalo Sabres defeated the Cleveland Barons 4-2 Wednesday night.

Spencer opened the scoring at 11:49 of the first period when he rammed in a trucking shot from Fred Stanfield. The Sabres took a 3-0 lead in the second period on Rick Martin's 36th goal of the season during a power play and Don Luce's 22nd of the season. Korab made it 4-0 at 3:48 of the final period when he slapped in a rebound from 10 feet.

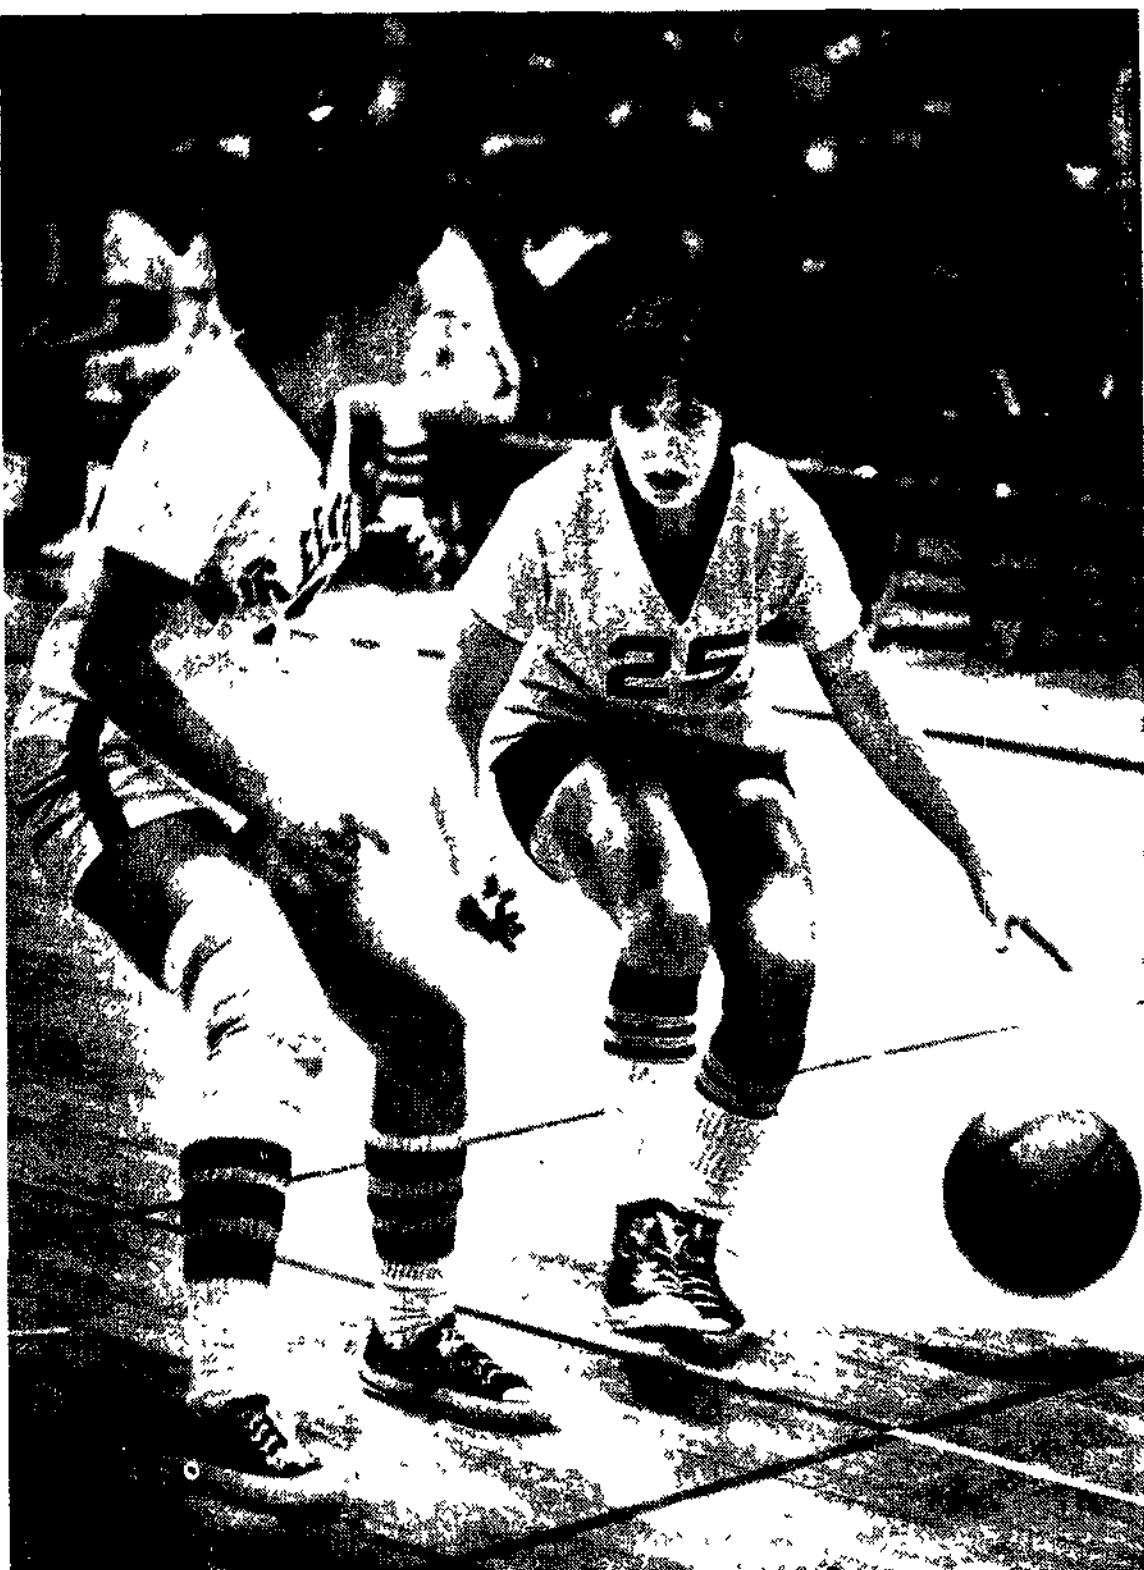

A power-play goal at 8:32 of the third period by center Stan Weir Wednesday night enabled the Toronto Maple Leafs to gain a 1-1 tie with the New York Islanders.

Weir's 11th goal of the season came off a goalmouth backhand between the pads of Islanders goalie Glenn Resch.

The Islanders scored early in the second period on a goal by J. P. Parise. Parise's slapshot carried off Toronto goalie Wayne Thomas's pad into the net.

If a player could accumulate a couple more than five fouls before leaving the game, then Wheeling's girls basketball team may have had a good chance at beating Fremd at the Fremd Sectional Tournament Wednesday night.

But as it was, the Vikings were able to overcome an 11-point third quarter Wheeling lead to surge ahead of the foul-troubled Wildcats and win 72-59.

The victory, Fremd's third in four meetings this season with Wheeling, advances the Vikings (18-1) into the sectional final game against Forest View (16-2) Friday at 7:30 p.m. The winner will be among the first-ever girls' "Sweet 16."

WHEELING'S PRESS, which was responsible for giving the Wildcats their third-quarter lead, also was instrumental in sending Fremd to the line 42 times in the game. Wheeling committed a whopping 28 fouls to Fremd's 13.

"It was discipline that helped us come back," winning coach Carol Plodzien said afterward. "I think we were too nervous there at the beginning. We didn't want to make any mistakes."

"We weren't cutting into the lane early," she said. "But fouls played a big part in this game. Last time it was foul trouble that hurt us."

Fouls forced two of Wheeling's top scorers, Sandy Rainey and Gena Neri, to the bench for nearly half the third quarter. Both returned in the final period only to foul out.

IT WAS MIDWAY through the third quarter when Fremd began its rally with a bang. Down 45-34 with just over four minutes to play in the period, Fremd scored the next 11 straight points to knot the score.

The game's high scorer with 23 points, junior forward Donelda Danz, pulled down 12 rebounds Wednesday night as the Washington Bullets snapped Cleveland's four-game winning streak with a 95-90 victory over the Cavaliers. Dick Snyder led Cleveland with 16 points followed by Austin Carr with 15. Kupchak added 17 points for the Bullets, while Wes Unseld had 17 rebounds.

Wheeling (15-7) momentarily recovered from its tailspin by trading baskets with the Vikings to end the third quarter deadlocked 49-49.

But as the final period began, Fremd started once more to outscore Wheeling, despite the re-appearance of Rainey and Neri. The Vikings went to the free throw line 14 times in the final quarter alone, converting nine of those attempts into points.

DANZ AND TEAMMATE senior guard Colleen Cannon played one of their best games of the season, pacing the winners from the outside and the inside in scoring.

Danz was devastating under the basket both in rebounding and scoring, while Cannon proved to be a sharp-shooter from the perimeter, finishing the night with 20 points.

Senior guard Connie Bruns tossed in 12 points, and junior center Peggy Hammill added 14. Fremd's fifth starter and only other scorer (the Vikings substituted very little) was sophomore forward Kathy Pfander, and she had three points.

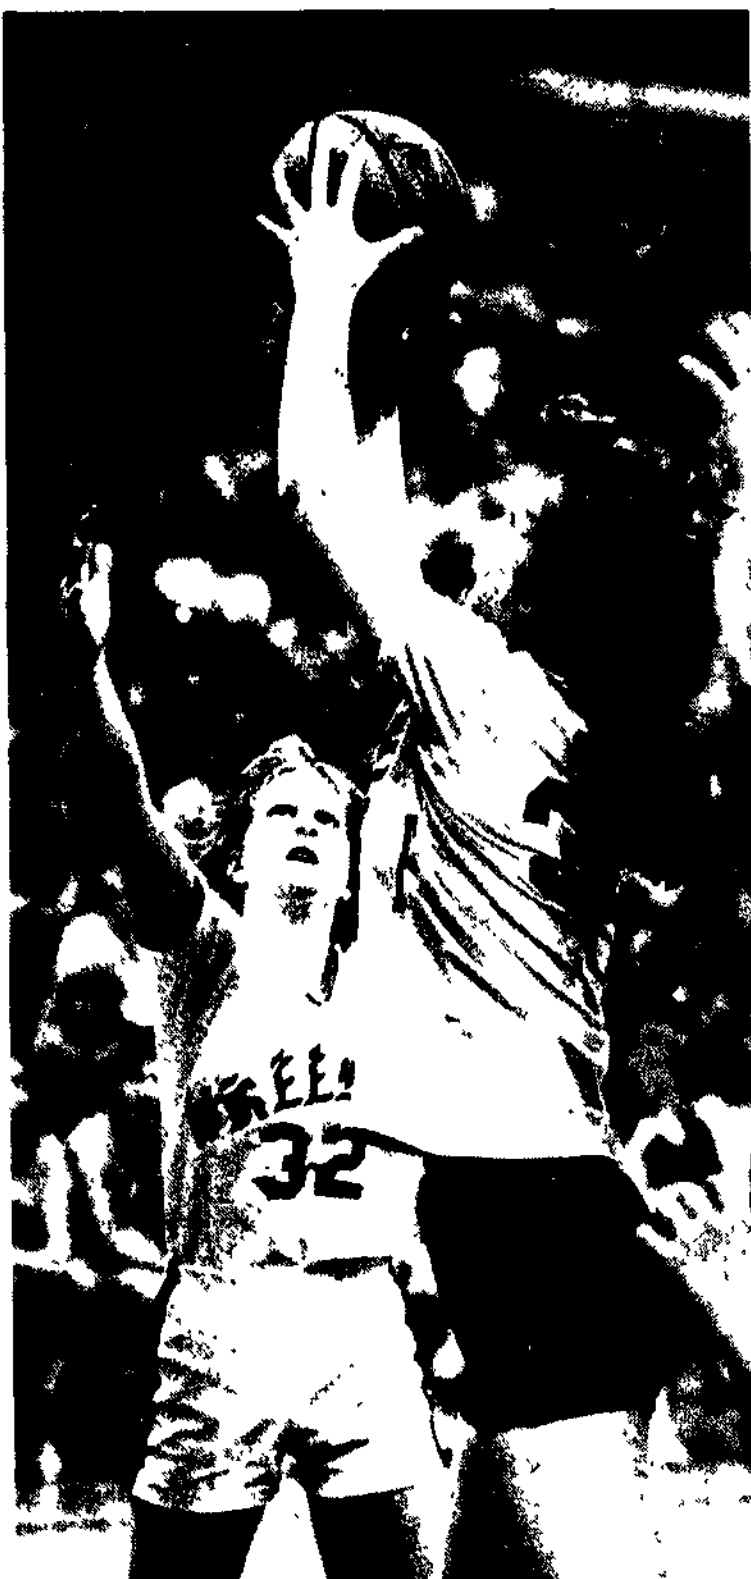

Though Neri was not hitting as well from the outside as she has in previous games, teammate junior center Rainey was excellent outside and inside. Before fouling out, Rainey scored 22 points. Teammate Denise Bergroicz tallied 10.

"If Neri had been hitting it would have been more difficult," Plodzien said. "But she has been inconsistent most of the season. Some games she hits well, but in others she is cold."

Plodzien had hoped to slow the pace of the game down, knowing Wheeling could outrun her squad. But Friday she will try and speed things up, realizing Forest View's biggest asset is size and a deliberate offense.

"Forest View plays a good zone defense," Plodzien said. "We've got to play our game again Friday."

Taylor's 29 juices Kings to 107-96 win over Nets

Brian Taylor scored a game-high 29 points and reserve center Jim Eakins added 14, all in the final period Wednesday night, as the pair of ex-Nets led Kansas City to a 107-96 victory over New York, moving the Kings a step closer in their drive towards the NBA playoffs.

The Kings, locked in a three-way battle with the Bulls and Seattle for the remaining Western Conference playoff spot, outscored the Nets 39-24 in the final quarter to put away the game.

Moses Malone drew Bill Walton into a sixth foul with 1:15 left to play Wednesday night and Mike Newlin took charge in the remaining time to score two baskets and help the Houston Rockets clinch an NBA playoff berth with a tense 109-104 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

WALTON PLAYED the entire fourth quarter with five fouls, but he was not slowed in the least as he scored 10 points to bring Portland to within one point with 2:39 remaining.

Pete Maravich, who finished with 31 points, and James McElroy led a closing spurt Wednesday night that enabled the New Orleans Jazz to hand the Detroit Pistons their fourth straight loss, 95-89.

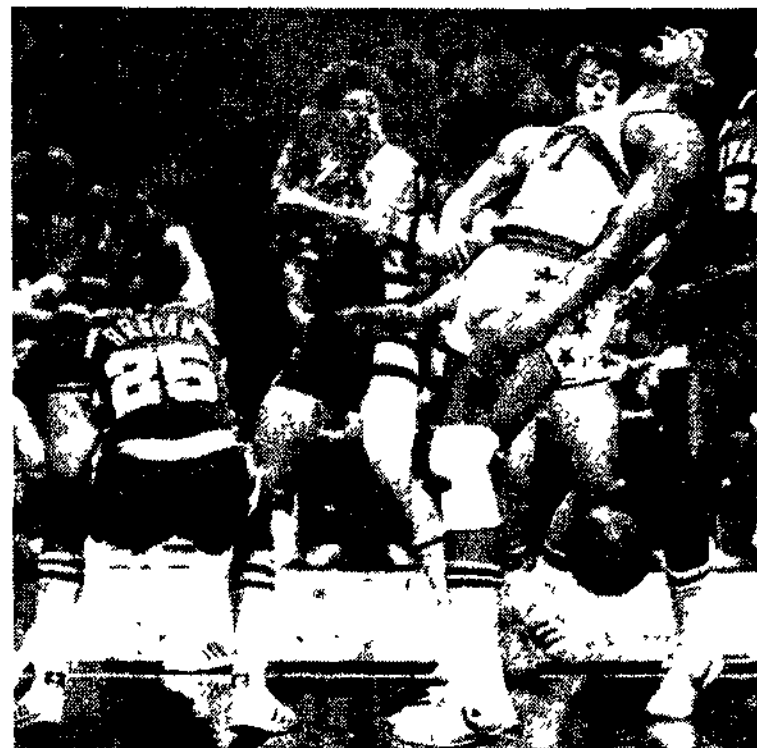

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Cazzie Russell 25 to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 105-97 NBA win over Indiana.

Rick Barry scored 16 of his game-high 37 points in the final quarter Wednesday night to lead the Golden State Warriors to a 128-120 victory over Philadelphia, snapping the 76ers' four-game winning streak.

Boston forward Sidney Wicks' 19 points, including his 10,000th career point, led a balanced Celtics attack in a second half comeback to a 103-96 victory over the Atlanta Hawks Wednesday night.

DAVE COWENS and Curtis Rowe each had 17 for the Celtics. Truck Robinson led Atlanta with 32 and John Drew added 19. It was the Celtics' fourth consecutive victory.

Elvin Hayes scored 22 points and pulled down 12 rebounds Wednesday night as the Washington Bullets snapped Cleveland's four-game winning streak with a 95-90 victory over the Cavaliers. Dick Snyder led Cleveland with 16 points followed by Austin Carr with 15. Kupchak added 17 points for the Bullets, while Wes Unseld had 17 rebounds.

Sox trade Carroll for Lerrin LaGrow

ST PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday acquired veteran relief pitcher Clay Carroll from the White Sox in exchange for pitcher Lerrin LaGrow.

Carroll, 35, was 4-4 in 29 games with the White Sox last year. He had six saves and an earned run average of 2.56.

The 11-year veteran spent all of his career with the Reds and Braves in the National League before being traded to the White Sox prior to the 1976 season.

LaGrow, 28, was acquired last year from the Detroit Tigers, where he had spent parts of several seasons in the majors and had a career big league record of 16-40. He spent most of last year with the Cardinals' Tulsa farm team and was 0-1 with an ERA of 1.50 in eight games in the majors.

WORLD heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali (center) is uncharacteristically silent as he leaves a Chicago court room Wednesday after a $4 million dollar breach of contract suit was filed against him by the Madison Square Garden Boxing Inc.

Ali in town to hear $4 million lawsuit

Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali appeared in a U.S. District Court in Chicago packed with autograph-seekers Wednesday for a $4 million lawsuit filed against him on a breach of contract charge.

Madison Square Garden Boxing Inc., in a suit filed March 16, charged the heavyweight boxing champion signed a $25 million contract last Nov. 24 to meet Duane Bobick in a title bout sometime last month.

Ali announced his retirement from the ring on Nov. 30, contending that freed him of his contract obligation.

During Wednesday's hearing, Ali's attorney Henry R. Mason said the contract to fight Bobick and a letter of intent signed by Ali were not valid because they were not signed by Herbert Muhammad, the fighter's business manager.

Hey, hey! Cubs, Sox post triumphs

Dave Rosello's bases loaded two-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday capped a three-run rally to give the Chicago Cubs a 9-8 victory over the Oakland A's.

Gene Cline opened the ninth with a triple off losing pitcher Dick Bosman. Larry Bittner then reached on an error, scoring Cline. Joe Wallace followed with a single and Steve Ontiveros was intentionally walked, loading the bases. Rosello followed with a double down the right field line.

The A's, trailing 6-5, took a 7-6 lead in the eighth inning on a two-run inside the park home run by Tony Armas, recently acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates. Oakland scored another run in the ninth on a sacrifice fly by Ed Crosby.

Brian Downing drove in five runs with a three-run homer in the second inning and a two-run double in the third Wednesday to power the Chicago White Sox to a 14-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Third baseman Kevin Bell contributed a three-run homer in the fourth inning for Chicago, which led 10-0 after the fourth.

Chicago starter Wilbur Wood pitched four innings of hitless ball before giving up two runs on two hits in the fifth.

Trevino withdraws from Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Lee Trevino, confessing he had tried "to play too much too soon" after last fall's back operation, withdrew Wednesday from next month's Masters golf tournament.

Trevino sent a telegram to the Masters expressing his regrets over having to withdraw. He said his doctors advised him "a few weeks of light exercise and whirlpool will put me back in playing shape."

Harris leads Delta State rout

MINNEAPOLIS — Senior center Lucy Harris scored 31 points Wednesday to lead favored Delta State to an 87-43 victory over host Minnesota in the first game of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women basketball tournament.

The 6-foot-3 Harris, who sparked the U.S. women's team to a silver medal in the Olympics at Montreal last summer, has led Delta State to two straight AIAW national titles.

Hartman backs out of coaching post

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Jack Hartman, acknowledging a "hasty and rash decision," Wednesday announced he had quit after one day as the basketball coach at Oklahoma State and would be returning for his eighth year at Kansas State.

Hartman said at a news conference Monday night he had accepted the job at Oklahoma State and would be returning to his alma mater. He flew to Stillwater Tuesday and met with the press there, saying "deep down in everybody is the desire to go back to their school."

Other news in the sports world...

Jim McCallig signed with the Chicago Sting soccer team Wednesday. McCallig, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, has been a world class midfielder for 10 years.

Baseball writers of the Los Angeles-Anaheim chapter have voted their annual Civic Award to former Cub outfielder Rick Monday. Monday traded to the Los Angeles Dodgers in the offseason, gained national attention for saving an American flag from a pair of protesters last season.

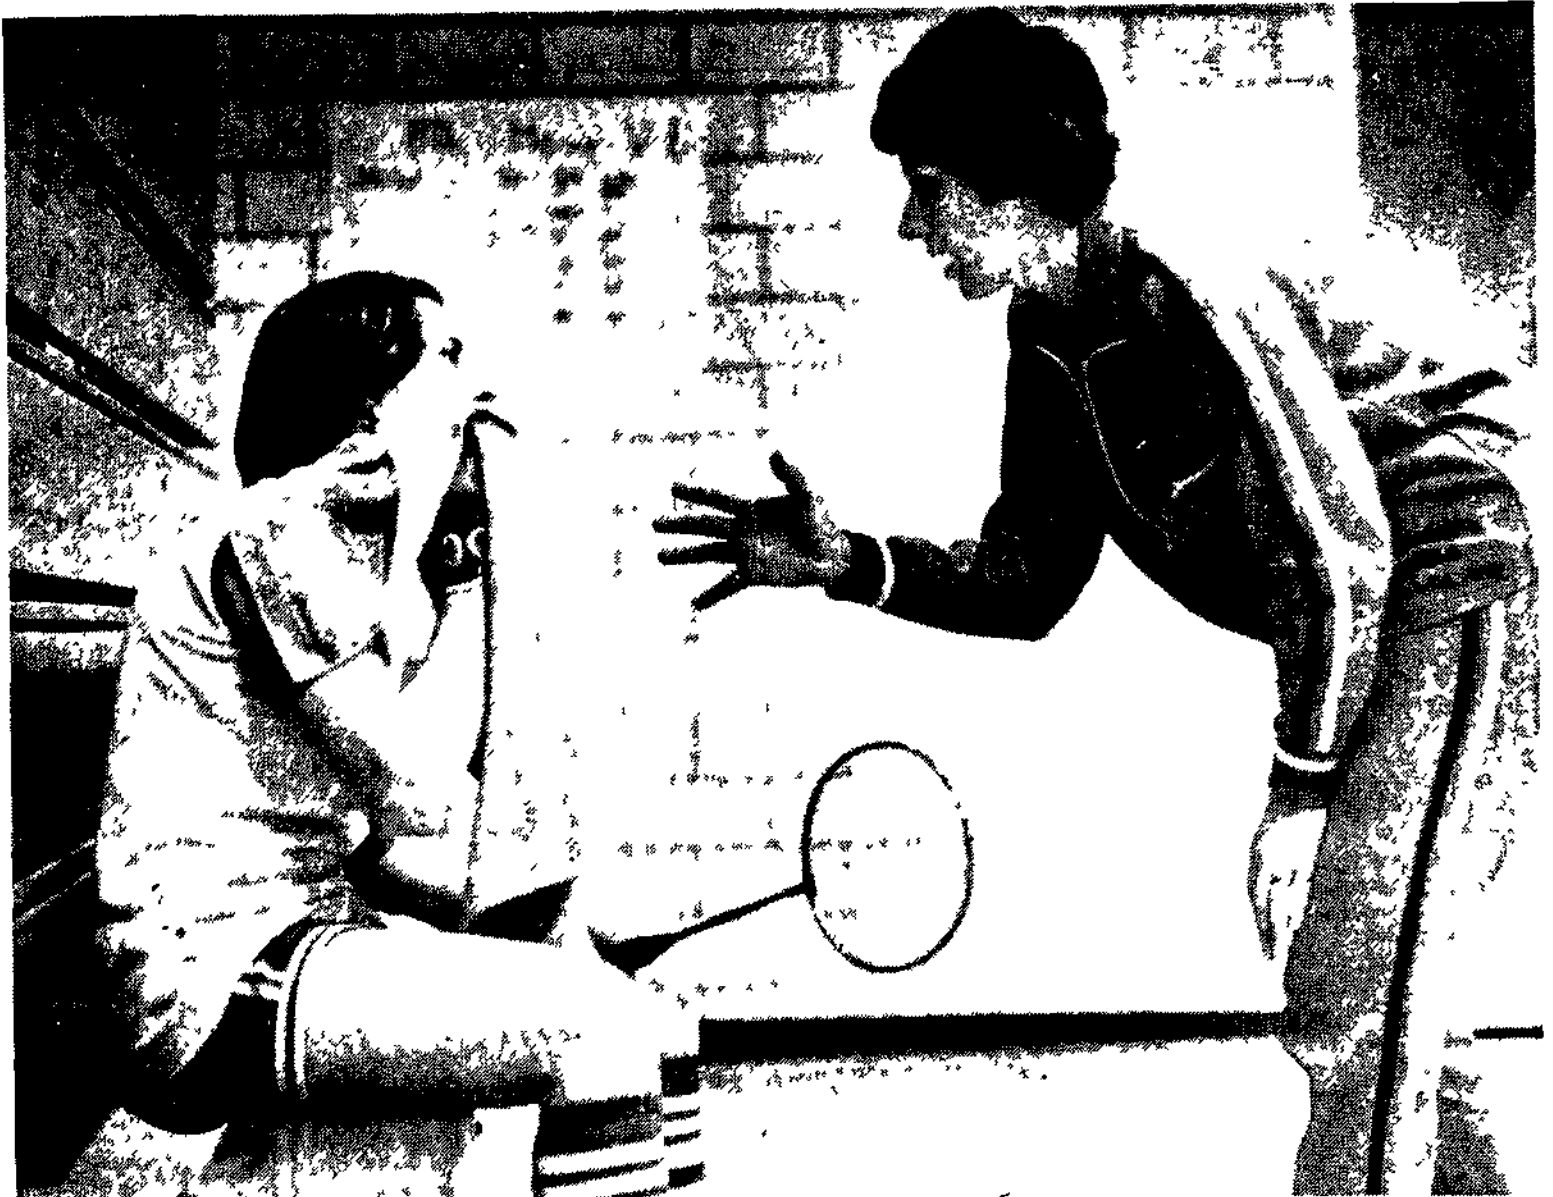

The Kansas City Kings, fighting the Bulls for the remaining NBA playoff berth, awarded head coach Phil Johnson a two-year contract extension and a salary increase for next season.

At the other end of the NBA spectrum, the New Orleans Jazz, a team going nowhere, fired general manager Barry Mendelson Wednesday. The move was believed to be in response to Mendelson's trading three No. 1 draft picks for guard Gail Goodrich, who has missed much of the season with an ankle injury.

Third-seeded Brian Gottfried defeated South Africa's Byron Bertram 6-4, 6-2 Wednesday in the La Costa International Tennis Classic.

Trailing 3-0 in each game, six-time Wimbledon champion Billie Jean King rallied Wednesday to a 6-4, 6-4 win over Carol Balby of Denver in second round play of the $20,000 Lionell-McFarlin Tennis Cup. It is the first tournament in seven months for the No. 1 seeded King.

Veteran Dave Davis continued to dominate the $100,000 U.S. Open bowling tournament Wednesday at Greensboro, N.C., with an early third-round lead of 386 pins.

Look out for Chris who? Half-miler is ready to go

Quick. Who finished second to Steve Schellenberger in last year's state Class AA 880-yard run?

If you answered, "Somebody named Chris Heroux," you'd be right on the button. If the question threw you, that's all right too because few people had heard of Heroux before May of 1976.

Heroux, from Maine North High, has been running in the shadow of the two-time state champ from Forest View the past two track seasons. Schellenberger, now at the University of Illinois, has left the state half-mile field up for grabs in 1977.

HEROUX, A 5-11, 140-pound senior, came the closest to Schellenberger in last year's state meet when he was runnerup in 1:51.2, his fastest time ever. Any other day it would have won the meet, but Schellenberger ran 1:49.9.

In his first meet this year, at Maine East's fieldhouse, Heroux clipped off a 1:57.3 in the 880. At that time, it was the fastest indoor prep half-mile in the nation. It still ranks right up there.

Maine North coach Lloyd Schlegel remembers it well.

"It was Jan. 27, our first meet," recalled the seven-year Norseman veteran.

THE REASON Schlegel's memory is so vivid is that the 1:57 was Heroux's last half-mile until last Saturday when the Norsemen ran in their conference meet.

"Chris was feeling sick around the end of January," said Schlegel, who once finished fourth in the state 880 himself. "He only ran a couple of 440s after his 1:57 and he was running off and on for about a week and a half.

"Then he went to the doctor and found out he had mono," the coach said.

Heroux didn't run in competition again until March 12 at the Naperville Relays when he doubled in the two-mile relay and the mile run. He was timed in the equivalent of 2:00 half, then came back with a disappointing 4:56 mile.

"HE MISSED about a month," said Schlegel. "But his bout with mono

Byline report

Art Mugalian

wasn't as bad as some other cases I've seen."

So when Heroux returned to his specialty in the O'Hare Suburban indoor championships at Maine East Saturday, he was ready to clock a 1:58.3 — running against just token opposition. Chris also won the 440 in 52.9 and took second in the 300 in 34.1.

"Chris is really versatile," said his coach. "I don't know where he gets his speed from. But he's just the kind of kid who tells you what he's going to do — and then he goes out and does it."

Heroux surprised his coach once before, during the 1976 cross-country season. After missing the entire summer running season because of a foot ailment, Chris took a stab at the hills and dales.

"HE WENT TO see Dr. Durkin (Olympic miler Mike's dad) about his foot," said Schlegel. "It was bothering him quite a bit, especially running on hills. But he still qualified in the district meet."

"For a while we were ready to kiss the season goodbye," Schlegel admitted.

The foot problem and the mono behind him, Heroux is ready to mount the 880 state-meet challenge. Two other Illinois preps, David Ayoub of Peoria Central and Marvin Townsend of East St. Louis, are back this year after placing behind Schellenberger in 1976.

"I don't know if Chris is the favorite," Schlegel mused. "Right now I think he's capable of running in the 1:55s, and of course he's just coming off mono."

HEROUX WAS A slow starter last year, too. He was little more than a name in Timely Times when he first ran against Schellenberger at the Falcon Invite in early May.

"Chris wasn't very well known at the time," said Schlegel. "But he was very impressive that night."

The Maine North runner finished second behind Schellenberger in 1:55.5 and then came back with little rest to win the mile in 4:28, outkicking Forest View junior Darryl Robinson.

Until Heroux came along, Maine North had never scored in the state track meet in seven years of trying — unless you count Coach Schlegel, who did his running at Maine West.

Now that Heroux is out from under the Steve Schellenberger shadow, the Norsemen might have a champion.

DEBBIE DUNCAN (14) of Forest View scans the court in search of a friendly jersey, while Julie Foley of Regina Dominican closes at the Fremd Sectional Tournament. Regina lost, its second setback in 18 games this season.

Strike hits track stars

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — About 35 high school track stars from the Kansas City area who qualified for the Missouri state track meet won't be able to compete. They have become unwitting losers in a teachers' strike.

About a dozen members of high school track teams gathered Wednesday, seeking in vain permission to compete.

Russ Collins, a hurdler, suggested parents could take the athletes to the meet at Columbia, Mo., but a spokesman for the school district said that would not be permitted.

"As long as it is a school-district sanctioned activity, the district is the sponsor, and state law requires a school district employee there to supervise," the spokesman said. "We cannot guarantee adequate supervision for these activities."

Elk Grove holds baseball meeting

The Elk Grove Village Boys Baseball program will conduct its annual draft of Pony and Organizational leagues on Friday at 7 p.m. at the VFW Hall on Devon Avenue.

The Pony League will draft first and will follow a short business meeting.

The meeting is open to all managers, coaches and the general public.

Four squads place two on cage list

Fremd trio tops MSL all-conference girls choices

by JEFF NORDLUND

It was no surprise Fremd's girls basketball team, the Mid-Suburban League champion for the fourth straight year, contributed the most names to the all-conference team released this week.

Three Fremd girls, Connie Bruns, Colleen Cannon and Peggy Hamill, made the 16-player list, while two girls from Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Forest View and Elk Grove were also named.

Wheeling, the runner-up in the North Division behind Fremd, placed Sandra Rainey and Denise Begrowicz, while third-place Buffalo Grove added Joyce Gallagher and Bev Torahn to the all-conference roster.

SOUTH DIVISION leader Forest View had Debbie Brinkman and Cathy Suchecki named, and Carole Pollitz and Kim Richardson of Elk Grove were also honored.

Rounding out the select list were Helga Daniels of Hersey, Kim Wallner of Schaumburg, Julie Ruh of Hoffman Estates, Cheryl Eyerman of Conant and Jeannine Hahn of Prospect.

Play-maker Bruns led the Fremd all-conference selections in scoring with an 11.8 average in MSL play. The exciting senior was named to the squad last season, as well.

Junior Hamill also sported a double-figure scoring average (10.5) for the Vikings, while senior Cannon, a two-time all-conference pick, had a 9.6 mark in 10 games.

WHEELING'S RAINEY made it three years straight in which she had been named all-conference. The scrappy junior Wildcat again provided plenty of firepower for Wheeling with a 14.7 average. Teammate Begrowicz should provide Wheeling with a solid nucleus next season, since the junior averaged 6.4 points a game this year.

Buffalo Grove's Gallagher led both divisions in scoring, getting named to the all-conference squad for her second time. The junior averaged 16.0 points per game. Teammate Torahn, another junior, was a strong player under the basket where she had a 10.2 points per game average.

Forest View's Brinkman was a repeat performer on the all-conference list this season. The senior had an 11.2 scoring average and helped the Falcons to their second South Division title in four years. Suchecki, a junior, provided the Falcons with strong ball-handling skills, averaging 9.8 points a contest.

Elk Grove's Pollitz proved to be one of the strongest centers in the league, as the junior averaged 13.7 points per game. Junior teammate Richardson made many of her points from outside with an 11.3 average. The Grenadiers were the South Division second-placer.

SCHAUMBURG'S Walner sported a strong 12.6 scoring average, although only a freshman. Another high-scorer in the South Division was Prospect's Hahn. The junior scored at an 11.3 clip in her 12 conference games.

Hersey's Daniels, a senior, had an 11.0 scoring average, as the Huskies placed fourth in the North Division. Another senior choice was Conant's Eyerman, who had an 8.1 point average.

Junior Ruh of Hoffman Estates was just shy of two-figure scoring with a 9.3 average.

Major league meeting opens today in Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Realignment, inter-league play and the nagging San Francisco Bay Area problem will be the chief topics of discussion today when officials from all the major league baseball teams gather for their annual spring meeting.

The American League, seeking a solution to its unwieldy 14-team schedule, favors realignment into three divisions of five, five and four teams which would also bring about revision of the post-season playoff format.

"I think there is considerable sentiment for three divisions among our people," said American League President Lee MacPhail. "However, you never know how that sentiment might change once we begin discussing it. A lot depends on whether or not the National League goes along with it, too, and then there's the 13-13 proposal which will have a lot of bearing on what we ultimately decide."

Oakland A's, into the National League, thus creating two 13-club circuits and the inevitability of inter-league play.

"I wouldn't think all of that would be approved at these meetings," MacPhail conceded. "We would first have to get one of our clubs to consent to move into the other league and there would also have to be votes from both leagues. I think most of the clubs will want more time to evaluate that proposal."

"But it will be discussed and will most likely have some bearing on what direction we take in regard to division realignment."

If there is one point both leagues are agreed upon, it's the overcrowded San Francisco area where both the National League Giants and American League A's are fighting for survival.

That's why the National League was receptive to the American League's suggestion that the A's be purchased from Finley and shifted to Washington, D.C., and the NL. Finley, however, has resisted all previous offers from the American League to buy the A's.

Men's amateur golf group releases summer schedule

The 1977 Northern Illinois Men's Amateur Golf Assn. (NIMAGA) Junior Open Division summer golf tournament schedule was released recently.

Several events were expanded for 1977. An additional tournament has been included in the B Division for the younger players, and the field size has been expanded in the State Junior event.

Azain in 1977, NIMAGA will sponsor its Junior Team Golf Classic at Walt Disney World in Lake Buena Vista, Fla. The four top NIMAGA junior golfers will qualify for the event, an all-expenses paid trip in December. The four Walt Disney World qualifiers will be determined by the NIMAGA Junior Division Board of Directors.

The complete NIMAGA junior tour includes a series of Junior Opens to be held at White Pines G.C. (June 17), Buffalo Grove G.C. (June 20), Indian Lakes (June 27), Rob Roy G.C. (July 8), Lake Bluff G.C. (July 18), Wedgewood G.C. (July 22), Silver Lake G.C. (Aug. 1), and St. Andrews C.C. (Aug. 8).

Other events are the Junior Open Championship at Village Green G.C. (Aug. 19), the State Junior Amateur at Wedgewood G.C. (July 11-13), NIMAGA Junior Match Play Championship at Indian Lakes C.C. (July 25-26), NIMAGA B Division Program to be held at five different locations June through August, NIMAGA Junior Mixed at St. Andrews C.C. (Aug. 12) and finally the NIMAGA Fall Junior Open at Buffalo Grove G.C. (Nov. 25).

Last year was another record year for the expanding NIMAGA junior program which is in its 11th year, serving boys and girls 10-19 years old. All those who applied or participated last year, plus Northern Illinois area golf course and high school players will automatically receive entry forms for this year's tour about April 1.

New interested juniors can write to NIMAGA at P.O. Box 162, Golf, Ill., 60029, for applications. It is suggested that contestants submit their applications early since the tournaments fill up in a hurry.

Ford shows improvement

Good news for Tar Heels

by WALT SMITH

ATLANTA (UPI) — North Carolina coach Dean Smith said Wednesday Phil Ford's injured elbow is much improved but the star guard will not be at full strength for the NCAA semi-final battle Saturday with Nevada-Las Vegas.

"We had a meeting yesterday and Phil Ford said his elbow was three times as good as it was Sunday," Smith told a telephone news conference featuring coaches of the four semifinal teams.

"We would expect Phil to be able to play Saturday. There is no undue swelling. But it's not as good as new."

HE SAID Ford would resume shooting Thursday.

The NCAA's final four begin arriving here today and have workouts scheduled at the Omni Friday. Marquette meets North Carolina-Charlotte in the opening game Saturday afternoon followed by the North Carolina-Nevada-Las Vegas battle.

The 3rd-ranked Tar Heels have been snakebit with injuries. Center Tom LaGarde will miss the finals with a knee injury and forward Walter Davis, an Olympian along with Ford and LaGarde, is still bothered by a broken finger on his shooting hand.

Davis played in the East Regionals last week but Smith said Wednesday, "I can't say he's 100 per cent when he has a broken right index finger with three screws in there to hold it in place. But even when he's not 100 per cent, he's still a fine ballplayer as was shown by the games against Notre Dame and Kentucky."

NEVADA-LAS Vegas coach Jerry Tarkanian said playmaking guard Robert Smith had been hospitalized after running a 102-degree fever but was to be dismissed Wednesday and should be at full strength against North Carolina.

Marquette coach Al McGuire said his Warriors and North Carolina might have a slight edge by having played tougher schedules. "I think a tough schedule is an asset," said McGuire. "I think it makes a team tournament-hardened."

"It should help you unless you're emotionally drained," agreed Smith.

North Carolina-Charlotte coach Lee Rose admitted his team's schedule was "probably the most suspect," but pointed out he had tried to schedule tougher teams — including North Carolina.

HE SAID Smith told him North Carolina has a policy not to play other schools within the state, except those in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Rose said center Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell can do it all for the Cinderella 49ers. "Against the press, against Michigan, we had him bringing the ball up the floor," said Rose. "He can dribble like a guard. I think he will go in the first round of the draft."

McGuire, hit by technical fouls in the past in key tournament games, said he will do nothing this weekend to jeopardize the Warriors' chances.

"I got blindsided in the Kansas State game (in the Midwest Regionals)," said McGuire. "I will never let that happen to me again. There is no way I will get off the bench. I did not get off the bench against Wake Forest."

"THE GAME will be won or lost against Charlotte by the ballplayers."

Tarkanian was questioned whether he thought the NCAA leaked reports of an investigation of Nevada-Las Vegas to hurt his team's chances.

"I've got a lot of thoughts on that but it's best I don't express any of them," he replied. He added he did not think the reported investigation would hurt his team's chances.

Smith appeared a little defensive of the "four corners offense" which North Carolina uses late in the game to protect a lead.

"TOO MUCH attention has been placed on the four corners," said Smith. "We generally use it in the last four or five minutes of the game. But we have averaged 85-88 points per game. We also believe in the fast break."

Smith said high-scoring Nevada-Las Vegas is "truly the best team in the West, including UCLA and San Francisco."

Betting down at Sportsman's for six days

Betting was down more than $1 million during the first six days of racing at Sportsman's Park, apparently due to off-track betting, the Illinois Racing board reported Wednesday.

William Masterson, racing board executive secretary, said the handle for racing from March 15 to 21 amounted to $7,758,921 compared to $8,850,839 for the same period and number of racing days in 1976. He said the loss cost the state $100,000 in revenue.

"The big dip is wagering and state tax money is blamed primarily on the betting messenger shops," Masterson said.

He said last year there were only a few of the off-track messenger services in operation. "There are said to be more than 350 of them scattered throughout the city and suburbs now," Masterson said.

Masterson said betting was off 12.34 per cent, state income off 13.30 per cent and attendance down 20.02 per cent.

Old Orchard is seeking golfers

The Old Orchard Scratch League has a few openings for good golfers who can carry a 43-stroke average or better. The OOSL is a group of golfers who enjoy friendly competition and still play the game according to the rules. The league plays Friday nights at Old Orchard in Mount Prospect. Membership dues are $25.

Anyone interested in more information should attend a special meeting on Sunday, Mar. 27 at 2 p.m. at the Old Orchard Country Club, or contact Marty Kolar at 467-8350 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. You also can write the league at PO Box 348, Prospect Heights, Ill. 60070.

Carew holds solo honor

Since "Rookie of the Year" honors were started in 1947, only one American League second baseman was won the honor. Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins snared the title in 1967.

Interference at high level

What happens when someone really interferes with Blackwood by sticking in a defensive bid at the six or possibly the seven level?

Here you can't use the double to show no aces, the pass to show one and the bid to show more because there are lots of hands where responder will hold two aces and he won't be sure that they are enough for a slam.

Here we recommend that the double say: "Partner, I don't want to bid any more." The pass say: "Partner, go ahead."

And the bid say: "Partner, I really like my hand."

North didn't want to bid six with only one ace and two potential losers in diamonds. On the other hand, he did have full values plus, in spite of holding just one ace, and therefore passed to show this good hand.

Now South did a little thinking on his own. He said to himself: "My partner has opened the bidding with only one ace and does not want to discourage him. He must have the right three kings so South went all the way to seven hearts."

It is interesting to note that West's desperate bid boomeranged against him. Left to themselves it is doubtful if North and South would have gone past six.

Air resistance to boomerang makes it return

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Jon Anderson, 13, of Duluth, Minn., for his question:

WHAT MAKES A BOOMERANG RETURN?

Many stories are told in Australia about the working of the boomerang. A complete fable, unfortunately, is the one about an aborigine being able to throw a boomerang so it hits an enemy hiding behind a tree, and then having the weapon return to the thrower. Also untrue is the story of the native who throws the boomerang with his back to the object he wishes to hit.

Many strange stories told about boomerang throwing in Australia sound as if they are fiction but are actually true. For example, it is possible for a native to be so expert he can make his boomerang pass behind him after a short preliminary flight in front.

If a boomerang is expected to hit an object, this happens during the first part of the weapon's flight path - when it is going straight and has just been thrown by the expert. It turns for a return flight only if the object is missed.

Because the boomerang is flying through air, right from the start of its flight, it is meeting resistance and is being slowed down. It is shaped so that the air resists one part of it more than another, so that it has to travel in a curved path after its speed has slowed down below a certain rate. As it travels in this curve, it returns near the place from which it was launched.

Studies have been made in attempts to find out why boomerangs must always be a certain shape and why they must have a certain weight and size. The difficult questions have never been completely answered.

There are different types and sizes of boomerangs in Australia, although all follow the same basic pattern. There are some which are heavy and used for fighting at close quarters, while others are light and designed for hurling at game at a great distance.

Boomerangs that return to the thrower - the kind that are best known throughout the world - are actually often called play boomerangs. The Australian aborigines who use them well are skilled in the art of having them do lots of tricks. It's almost like show business.

Weapons very similar to the boomerang, but unable to make a return flight, were used in ancient Egypt and by the Hopi Indians in Arizona.

The Australian play boomerangs have special curved blades and are usually quite flat on one side and slightly rounded on the other. The power of return seems to be associated with a very slight twist in the weapon.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Monty Hopper, 12, of Visalia, Calif., for his question:

HOW DOES THE ZIPPER WORK?

Zipper is a trademark but the word is generally used today to mean all types of slide fasteners. Made of either metal or plastic, the gadget works by interlocking parallel rows of teeth on the open part of clothing. As a slide tab moves up, the teeth are joined and the opening is closed.

The clever fastener was invented by Whitcomb L. Judson of Chicago in 1893. In 1913 a man named Gideon Sundback invented a new type of slide fastener and also a machine to make it. Then in 1924 an overshoe company named its fastener Zipper.

It would be hard to get along without the slide fastener today. It's a sealing device, in many cases, that is much better than buttons and bows.

He's counting on sun to heat home

by JOE FRANZ

Victor Kay thinks he's found a way to at least partially beat rising home heating costs and continuing fuel shortages.

His solution — construction of a solar-heated home that he believes will provide 50 to 60 per cent of his family's energy needs.

The home, at 1505 W. Greendale Ave., Park Ridge, is one of the few solar-heated homes in the Chicago area. It is about 95 per cent complete.

Kay, who is the owner of Kay Realty Inc., Park Ridge, said the rising cost of oil and natural gas prompted his decision to build a solar-heated home.

"I STARTED TO SEE where the cost of oil and gas was going so I became interested in solar energy," he said. "I took a course on it and did a lot of reading about it."

"After seeing how solar energy worked I was convinced it was the only way to go," he said. "I was going to build a home anyway, and figured it might as well use solar energy."

The energy to heat Kay's home is gathered by two solar collectors on the roof of the seven-room house.

The heat generated by the solar collectors is carried by ducts to an area beneath the living room where it is stored among 80 tons of rocks until needed.

"We hope to get three to four days storage in that area so we will continue to get heat if the sun doesn't shine for a while," Kay said.

ALTHOUGH KAY SAID he hopes to get the majority of his energy from the sun's rays, he has equipped the home with a backup electrical heating system.

"In this area you can't heat a home 100 per cent from solar energy," he said. "We hope to get 50 to 60 per cent from the sun with the remainder coming from the backup system."

In addition to heating the home, Kay said the solar energy gathered by the collectors should be sufficient to provide hot water for his family during the summer months.

"IN THE WINTER THERE probably won't be enough heat left over to heat the water, but in the summer it should be no problem," he said.

Commonwealth Edison Co. is installing a monitoring system in Kay's home to determine how much of his energy needs are being met by the solar energy system.

Most of the differences in the appearance of Kay's home and that of a home with a conventional heating system are subtle.

About the only difference that is readily visible from the outside of the house is that one of the solar collectors faces toward the backyard. The collector at the front of the house is hidden in back of the mansard roof — a roof with two slopes on each of the four sides.

"THE ONE THING I wanted to avoid was a home that looked ugly," Kay said. "I think I have accomplished that."

Kay said the shingles on the house must be white to reflect the sun's light to the solar collectors. The collectors are black so they absorb more light.

The collectors can face in any direction but north, although a southern exposure produces the most efficient solar heating system.

"Both of my collectors face south which is the most ideal," he said. "But if necessary they can face east or west."

KAY, WHO LIVES in the three-bedroom home with his wife and daughter, estimates the solar heating system and increased insulation added about $4,000 to $6,000 to the price of the home.

VICTOR KAY INSPECTS one of two solar collectors on the roof of his recently constructed home. He expects the solar heating system to provide from 50 to 60 per cent of his energy needs with remainder coming from a backup electrical system.

"It was expensive, just like anything else that's relatively new," he said. "But with the cost of fuel I think the solar heating system will pay for itself in the long run."

Perry Silvetti, the heating contractor who installed the heating system at Kay's home, said he expects the cost of solar energy systems to drop as they gain in popularity.

"A LOT OF PEOPLE are questioning solar energy and you're going to see a lot more people using it to supply some of their needs," he said. "And when that happens the cost of it should drop."

Silvetti said in addition to Kay's home, he is installing solar heating systems in two other homes in the Chicago area.

Kay said that while solar energy is gaining recognition, he believes it will be a while before it wins total acceptance. Before having the home constructed, Kay solicited bids from six heating contractors, but only four responded.

"It's like anything else that's new," he said. "It will take time before it gains acceptance. But I do think the cost of fuel and the shortages will help bring about its acceptance a little faster."

Mobile home parks

A place for friendly folks

Mobile home parks in the Midwest have grown rapidly because they offer the same advantages that old-fashioned city neighborhoods once provided, according to a Memphis anthropologist.

Stanley E. Hyland, professor of anthropology at Memphis State University, said the chief reason people choose to live in mobile home parks is the opportunity the parks offer to live with neighbors who have similar interests and backgrounds.

He interviewed more than 250 residents and park owners and managers in 10 Illinois mobile home parks to collect information for a doctoral thesis. His research was supervised by Demetri Shimkin, professor of anthropology at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and was supported by a grant from the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

"In 1973 alone, 567,000 new mobile homes were produced, fully 22 per cent of the nation's total housing starts and 33 per cent of single-family starts," Hyland said.

"THE STATES OF Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania rank in the top 10 states most populated by people living in mobile homes," he said.

Hyland gave credit to low cost and increases in the size of mobile homes for their growing popularity, but said the community life and "town hall" style of local government they offered were equally important.

He designed the doctoral research project "to find out if the growth of mobile home park living was a temporary change in residential preferences and lifestyles or if it is a result of a fundamental reorientation of values in our society."

"The popularity of mobile home living, I believe, is caused in large part by a reassertion of basic residential needs in our complex society — needs for economical housing, effective residential social controls and flexibility in residential decision making," he said.

HYLAND CHOSE a variety of parks — small, large, urban, rural, low cost and expensive. He did not reveal the names of the parks but he did say where they were located. He studied parks in Urbana, Champaign County, Peoria, Waukegan, Springfield, Melrose Park, Carbondale and a rural area in north central Illinois.

Interviews revealed that each park served a homogeneous population. Some were almost exclusively for "empty nesters," couples without children. Others had rather affluent blue collar families and a few were slums populated by the very poor and petty criminals, he said.

"Some parks supported police patrols which discouraged crime and juvenile delinquency. Many park residents were engaged in social and political activities both in the surrounding community and in their own park," Hyland said.

"In many parks, the manager had a key role in generating enthusiasm in activities, imposing social controls and selecting residents. The manager acted as a mayor, friend, family counselor, local political boss and sometimes as a policeman. The managers could effectively control who rented spaces and they were quite important in determining local rule and in providing services," he said.

"In most parks, residents participated actively in setting goals for their community. Because each park had a group of similar people, each park had different goals. Some devoted more time and energy to political goals, others to social goals and still others to recreational goals," Hyland said.

In the future, he said, problems of zoning, taxing and regional planning for mobile home parks must be faced.

Energy shortage panel created

A special committee to assess the impact the nation's continuing energy shortages will have on the housing industry and the mortgage lending institutions that support it has been created by the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

The committee is expected to make recommendations that can be incorporated into the federal energy program. The Carter administration plans to unveil its energy proposals April 20.

The U.S. League is the primary trade association serving the $390 billion savings and loan business. Savings associations are the nation's No. 1 providers of some mortgage financing.

CHAIRMAN OF the league's special energy committee will be Richard L. Bryan, president of Des Moines, Iowa, Savings.

Staff associate for the new committee will be Harold Olin, the U.S. League's director of architectural and construction research.

"There is little doubt that energy conservation will be an important part of everyone's future," said league Pres. John A. Hardin in announcing the committee appointments.

"We expect to see more stringent energy standards for new housing, and there are broad indications that the Carter Administration hopes to encourage owners of existing homes to improve the energy efficiency of those homes," Hardin said.

"But we must be certain that energy conservation programs are carried out in such a way as to be equitable to all people," he said.

MORTGAGE LENDERS are concerned about ways to help owners of existing homes upgrade the energy efficiency of their buildings, Hardin said. "Certainly savings associations will be able to help with some home homeowner apparently will have little improvement programs in which the choice in the manner of financing of those improvements," he said.

Hardin said that the savings and loan business' concern about energy dates back to 1973, when the U.S. League adopted policy standards for new buildings and advocated the "thermal upgrading of existing buildings through improved attic insulation, double glazing of windows and effective weatherstripping."

Single family home not best investment for all

Real estate and investment pretty well go hand in hand. The differences in opinion that arise center principally on what kind of real estate for what kind of an investment for what kind of an individual.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I refer to a column you wrote some time ago about the undesirability of buying a single-family residence (rental) by a 27-year-old man. At present, I teach a real estate investment course and one of my students questioned your answer. Please note that a 10 per cent down payment on a $27,000 home four years ago, today would yield the owner $15,955 in cash toward another home. Where else (including mutual funds) could anyone gain such a percentage of profit?

As far as single-family homes being a bad investment — I vehemently disagree. The profit does not come from the "no vacancy." The true profit is from equity build up which is a result of inflation and amortization of mortgage payments. Mr. T.L.D. (Boston, Mass.)

A. You certainly are entitled to your opinion, and since you're in the real estate business, it comes as no great surprise to see which side of this matter you are going to support. In this case, I said I thought the single-family rental was a bad deal "for someone your age and in your financial position." The young man had an income of $16,000 and only $2,000 in savings. He proposed to sell $7,000 worth of stock that he owned to buy a rental. I didn't think then, and I don't think now, that a $2,000 cushion for such a venture was enough.

And, unless you are awfully handy and love this sort of work, I still think that a single-family residence is a cloddy investment for a 27-year-old who gave no indication of being all that enraptured with maintenance — he was counting entirely on appreciation in the value of the house.

"Where else could anyone gain such a percentage of profit?" Sure beats me, because I haven't the foggiest idea of how you arrived at the $15,955 cash figure after having paid 10 per cent down on a $27,000 home four years before. An 8 per cent a year growth would be about $9,000.

I agree wholeheartedly that "the profit does not come from the No vacancy." The LOSS, however, certainly comes with the "vacancy."

For a 27-year-old in his position, the first order of business should be the establishment of a long-range, systematic investment program in equities (stocks). Later on, when he's better established, why not real estate, indeed?

Dear Mr. Campbell: I sold my home to my son on a land contract.

The sign of the times!

Look for this sign... it stands for satisfaction

LET'S TALK IT OVER

JERRY BOUSCHARD

Remodeling your home to make it suit your needs or taste should not be done in haste or without careful analysis and planning. Home improvement remodeling generally costs from half again to twice as much as if the work had been done when the house was built.

This is because the remodeling contracts are for smaller amounts and the contractor is seldom sure what problems in the form of hidden pipes, electrical wiring or masonry he may encounter, so his bids reflect these contingencies. Furthermore, the cost of the improvement seldom shows up in full in the resale value of your property.

Before you do extensive remodeling, let us tell you how you might be able to sell your home and buy just what you want. Come in and "Talk It Over."

About real estate

He didn't keep it up (in repair) as he promised in writing. So I asked him to borrow the money from a bank and finish the payments. Do I have to pay capital gains interest on the money he borrowed to pay me off? Mrs. E. K. (Phoenix, Ariz.)

A. I feel I'm missing something here, but I'm a little baffled as to what it might be. If you profited on the sale of the property, of course, then you would have a capital gains tax liability. But, whatever business your son had with the bank is between him and the bank.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I feel sure we are like many people holding trust deeds on our homes which we have sold. The people who bought our home paid only two payments on time. Each month the payments get later and later.

Since we are carrying the first trust deed on our property, isn't there some way to force these people to make payments on time, or is there at least someone we can seek advice from? We are retired and just don't know where to turn for help. Mrs. C. A. (San Diego, Calif.)

A. You need a good lawyer. I don't think you actually have a deed of trust, because in these situations, three parties are involved: the borrower (the trustor), the lender (the beneficiary) and a third party called a trustee to whom legal title of the property is conveyed. In such a case it would be the trustee's job to ride herd on the buyers and, if necessary, sell the property out from under them if they fail to meet their obligations. I think what you're doing instead is selling this property on contract which leaves you with the burden of collecting. Life is too short for this sort of thing. In retirement you have much better things to do than hassle with a slow-paying buyer.

I'd turn the whole thing over to a lawyer, sell the property conventionally and invest the proceeds in something (corporate bonds, perhaps) where the yield may be a bit lower, but where the headaches are nil.

Clapboard siding repair easy

Dear House Doctor: A section of the clapboard siding on my home is badly damaged. A wide crack is open and the condition of the wood is too bad to attempt to fill the opening. I am concerned about the method for removing this section without causing more damage. F.M.

A. This job is not difficult, although it does require care. Usually, a home is covered with diagonal sheathing placed over the framing. Tar paper is placed over this, and then the clapboard siding forms the outer surface. Try not to damage the tar paper.

per, although it can be patched.

The best tool for cutting the damaged clapboard is a back saw. Mark the line with a square and cut on this line as close as possible to the overlapping board above. If you stop sawing before cutting completely through the board, you can use a wood chisel to remove the damaged piece in sections and then clean up the edges of the cut board with the chisel.

You will now need two or more wood wedges, depending upon the length of the piece removed. Drive these up beneath the overlapping board so as to lift it enough to permit you to get a hacksaw in place to cut the nails along the lower edge of this piece.

If you have been leading a good life and late smiles on you, perhaps you can use a nailset and drive the nails completely through the two boards,

Herman Baum

The house doctor

but attempt it only if finishing nails were used.

Now, use a small wood chisel and cut out the remaining section of the damaged siding that is beneath the overlapping section above. If you have damaged the tar paper, patch it with roofing cement.

You are now ready to install the new siding section, which, of course, must match the original. Prime the edges of this new piece and the edges of the old siding. Allow this to dry, then insert it in place.

Try to cut this section so as to make a very close fit. Fasten it with galvanized siding nails and set the nails slightly below the surface. Fill the holes and any cracks between the new and old siding with caulking and the job is complete except for painting.

OUTPATIENTS' CLINIC

J.A. — The problem of condensation forming on the outside of your freezer is due to insufficient insulation built into the freezer and not to its location in your carport.

G.W.K. — To reduce the dust inside the house while you are using the power saw to cut the concrete block wall, have an assistant hold the hose nozzle of a shop vacuum cleaner close to the saw blade as it is moved along the wall.

Dr. M.C. — There should be a damper located above the fireplace opening. If this is closing properly, it will prevent a downdraft which is bringing the odor into the house.

CLEANING FIREPLACE

Dear House Doctor: Please tell me how to clean the bricks around the outside of my fireplace. C.M.

A. The best material for cleaning the bricks is the paste mechanics' hand soap that contains sand and smells like sassafras. Use this with a little water and a scrubbing brush.

Trisodium-phosphate is also good. Use three rounded tablespoons to a gallon of warm water. Wear rubber gloves. After the surface is cleaned, paint with floor seal. Wipe dry after 15 minutes.

A second application may be desirable after the first coat is dry. Floor seal is intended for wood floors but does a good job here also.

HUMIDITY DAMAGE

Dear House Doctor: We have a terrible problem with everything stored in the cellar being damaged by mildew. Books and clothing have been ruined. How can we prevent this? Mrs. G.A.

A. Every year at this time we receive many letters from readers who have this problem, not only with goods stored in the cellar, but with mildew and humidity damage everywhere in the house.

The trouble is due to the house being tightly closed in winter to conserve heat. Humidity builds up from many sources, such as hot showers, cooking and drying clothes indoors.

We have prepared a bulletin that explains corrective measures in detail. A copy is available by sending 20 cents in coin (no stamps or checks please) and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The House Doctor in care of this newspaper. Ask for Bulletin No. C-257. We must have the stamped, return envelope to fill your order.

Solar heating plan rejected as too expensive

Experts have long known that solar collectors on a roof of a skyscraper will not heat the entire building.

The reason: A rule of thumb has established that solar collectors will usually heat floor space about twice the size of the collectors.

On skyscrapers there just isn't enough roof.

Now the federal government has spent $186,000 to find out what the rule of thumb would have told them: There isn't enough roof on the seventh tallest building in the world to heat it with solar energy.

Applying the rule of thumb to the headquarters of Citicorp, the nation's second largest bank, would have shown that the 20,000-square-foot roof would supply about 4 per cent of the heat for the 1.25-million-square-foot building.

BUT THE government paid the Massachusetts Institute of Technology $186,000 to estimate just how much of the building solar energy could heat. The answer: about 5 per cent.

The project was abandoned and it leaves a peculiar looking shadow on New York's skyline: a roofline at a 45-degree angle 905 feet above Lexington Avenue.

The bank originally did not plan a solar roof. But the city rejected a plan to allow condominium apartments in the building.

So someone came up with the idea to put solar collectors on the roof.

A Washington firm estimated solar panels would save the top half of the building 50 per cent of its energy costs.

The energy agency in Washington doubted the roof was large enough but approved the study.

THE MIT STUDY showed an annual savings of 5 per cent, or $50,000 a year, and could pay for itself in 10 years.

But other changes in the existing non-solar system would save part of that anyway. And maintenance and operation lowered the savings even more, so that it would take 20 years to pay back the investment.

The bank thought that was too long and scrapped the project.

"Cost of installation and maintenance exceeded the planned 10-year payback on the complex," a spokesman said.

The 45-degree roof line is still there and a spokesman said a solar energy system might still be used "if sometime in the future it is found to be cost effective."

"We were kind of optimistic when the study began," he said, "but disappointed with the final result."

Real estate class to start April 4

The Gladstone School of Real Estate's spring session begins April 4. A division of Gladstone, Realtors, the school prepares students for the State of Illinois real estate salesman's license exam.

Classes are held in two locations: the firm's headquarters at 390 E. Higgins Rd., Elk Grove Village, and their recently opened office at 330 E. Roosevelt Rd., Lombard.

Gladstone also has offices in Des Plaines, Franklin Park, Villa Park, LaGrange, Berkeley and Westchester.

Sessions are held from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays. However, students may start the course at any class in the first four weeks. Those who start April 4 or April 7 may file for the exam in time to meet the June 1 deadline for the July 13, 14 or 15 test in Chicago.

Since the state requires 30 class hours, students who start later can still cover the entire curriculum. Videotapes of the classes are available for making up missed lessons or adjusting to the individual's schedule.

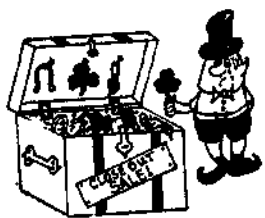

Additional information and a free pass to one class may be obtained by contacting Robert A. Poltzer at 439-1100.

Standard tells energy-saving plan

An energy-saving, heat-recovery system will be installed in the nation's fourth tallest building, the Chicago corporate headquarters of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Standard has appropriated nearly $1 million for the system which will significantly reduce energy use in the 1,136-foot, 80-story structure, according to Edward R. Carmody, building manager.

"Heat will be reclaimed from offices, used to warm water and recycled back through the building's heating system," Carmody said. Engineering work will begin immediately.

diately, so the system can be used during the next fall-winter heating season.

According to Carmody, the Standard Oil Building now has a heating, ventilating, and air-conditioning system similar to that used in most office skyscrapers.

"Water, heated by natural gas or oil, is circulated through piping around the perimeter of each floor," Carmody said. "Heat, carried by forced air, warms a zone extending only about 15 feet from the windows, the area most affected by outside temperatures."

"High intensity fluorescent lighting, heat from office equipment and body heat warm the interior zones of each floor," Carmody said. "However, keeping the interior zones cool is a problem even during cold weather," he noted.

"The warm exhaust air is taken from the interior zones through the ceilings and sent back to return fans," Carmody said. "Heat is lost when a portion of the warm air is exhausted to the outside."

"Under the new system, heat normally lost will be captured by heat recovery machines and recycled to building spaces requiring heat, reducing boiler energy use," Carmody said.

Only the heat in the lower two-thirds of the building will be recycled because of mechanical restraints, Carmody said. However, installation of a similar system to serve the upper one-third of the building is now under study.

According to Carmody, two heat recovery machines and the new piping will account for much of the cost of the system.

Real estate course to start in April

The Illinois Assn. of Realtors and Real Estate Education Co. will co-sponsor a real estate license training course in Palatine beginning April 5.

According to state law, anyone interested in becoming a real estate salesperson must successfully complete 30 hours of accredited classroom instruction before registering for the real estate license exam.

"Basic Real Estate Transactions" is scheduled to begin April 5 at the Howard Johnson's at Ill. Rte. 53 and the Northwest Highway. The course will be taught from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. two evenings per week.

Area residents who are interested in entering the real estate field and want additional information or counseling can call the Real Estate Education Co. at its toll-free number, (800) 972-8303, or write to 500 N. Dearborn, Chicago 60610. Pre-registration is required for the course.

SIGNS OF SUCCESS

BOLINGBROOK
Opened June 1975

SCHAUMBURG
Opened February 1976

ST. CHARLES
Opened April 1976

A record of success is the Thorsen Realtors' story. The last three offices opened by Thorsen Realtors have become instant successes. In less than one year's time, Thorsen's Bolingbrook and St. Charles offices have become pace setters in these markets. Schaumburg is in the top 25% of brokerage firms of over 100 serving the Northwest Suburban area of Chicagoland.

Our statistics show that the average sales associate's income earned with the company tops $25,000 annually. Licensed salesmen and unlicensed prospective salesmen have an immediate opportunity for instant success in Thorsen Realtors' new Arlington Heights/Mt. Prospect branch office. A few key sales opportunities are still available in Thorsen's Schaumburg/Hoffman Estates office. Management positions are also open in the Northwestern Suburban area offices. The Thorsen management team is dedicated to the success of each and every Thorsen sales associate.

Opportunities await you, so for a confidential interview call Joyce Anderson at Thorsen Realtors' Oak Brook headquarters, 887-5980.

Fixing house defects takes prior planning

Many readers contact me about new houses they are purchasing. Very often these new houses have minor defects, and they don't know how they should be handled.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Six months of searching, we have found a new house which we love. We would sign an agreement immediately, except there are various defects in the property.

For example, the bathroom door doesn't close properly. The bedroom walls are painted two shades of white. The dishwasher door seems to be damaged.

What is the normal procedure for having a builder correct these things? The real estate agent says, "Don't worry. Buy the house now and he will fix them later." The lawyer says, "Don't sign the agreement of sale before everything is fixed." My wife says, "If we lose the house, I'll kill myself." — A REAL DILEMMA.

If you listen to your lawyer, you will probably lose the house. If you listen to the agent, the work will probably not be done. The best procedure is to make up a "punch list of things that must be corrected in the house. Try to see if you can have this list incorporated in the agreement of sale.

If the builder does not correct these items prior to settlement, hold back money until they are taken care of. This way you should have the house and your repairs, as well.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I have been renting a store to a tenant who closed down his business six months ago. His lease has another two years to run. He has continued paying the rent, however, even though he no longer uses the property.

Pleased as I am that he is honorable about meeting his obligations, I am afraid he will run out of money.

I have found another tenant. But I don't know how to proceed, since I already have a tenant. Can you advise me? — WORRIED IN ADVANCE.

Naturally, you can't lease a property that you are already leasing. However, in view of the situation, you would probably be wise to secure the new tenant now, while he is available. Negotiate a lease with the new tenant and have him sign it before you sign it. Explain that it will take several weeks for you to have the lease approved. Don't tell him why.

After you have a signed lease, approach your existing tenant and tell him you are willing to release him from his obligation. He will undoubtedly jump at the chance. Then you can go ahead and execute the new lease. I feel that if your follow this procedure you will find that you are protected.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: One of the first improvements we made to our house when we moved in was to panel the basement walls and install humidifiers, which are on all day.

We have fixed up the basement as a playroom for our children. Part of it anyway. But we are concerned because there is a bad smell down there. It smells damp and moldy. We thought having the humidifiers down there would help this situation, but it doesn't.

Is there anything we can do? — ODORIFEROUS.

If you open the windows and the basement door on dry days, this will aid the humidifiers in their work. Then, too, you may have dampness trapped between the outside wall and the paneling. This is difficult to determine without professional inspection. But you might try a drain hole along the bottom of the paneling. Make sure, too, your humidifiers are clean. Sometimes they are the culprits.

Builders find optimism in future

Chicago area contractors are now more optimistic about the future than they have been at any time in the past two years, according to John C. Telander, president of the Builders' Assn. of Chicago.

"It appears the turn-around has arrived," he said. The President of Telander Brothers Contractors, Inc. of Chicago said that "with the leveling out of the economy, businesses are taking another look at the expansion they have placed on the back burner for the past three years."

Following recovery in residential construction last year, non-residential construction began to show signs of growth by year-end. December figures from the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry showed an increase of 60 per cent in non-residential construction contract awards over December, 1975.

Telander said that Chicago area contractors are reporting new optimism by businessmen this year, demonstrated by new projects in both city and suburban areas.

A recent forecast by economist George Christy of McGraw Hill Information Systems predicted a 12 per cent increase in non-residential building in the Midwest in 1977. "The Chicago area, because of its diverse economy, will probably fare a little better than other Northern states," Telander said.

This year, while construction is just beginning to recover from the recession, is an ideal time for businessmen to make capital investments, Telander said.

"Since there is not yet an overabundance of work, the prices from Chicago area contractors are very competitive. Contractors are working on a lower mark-up than they will in a period of high construction."

Telander said by 1978 or 1979, this buyer's market may disappear, adding that building is never going to be any cheaper than it is today.

"The best illustration I can give is someone who bought a home five to 10 years ago and sells it today for double what he paid for it," the Chicago contractor said. "The dollar buys less each year, at a rate of 3 to 5 per cent. If you delay building for two more years, it will cost you 10 per cent more."

Most economists are predicting higher annual inflation rates of 4 to 8 per cent by December 1977.

A third reason not to delay construction projects, according to Telander, is the current labor situation. Contracts recently signed with Chicago area bricklayers, carpenters, cement masons, laborers, and operating engineers extend through May 31, 1979. These contracts let a businessman know in advance what his costs will be.

Future inflation, competition in the construction industry, and stable wage rates are just three of the 10 reasons businessmen should build now, he said. The other reasons are:

- Money is reasonable and plentiful. Both construction loans and permanent financing are at low levels. A year from now they will probably be a half to one point higher. Lenders are looking for customers and offering attractive terms.

- Building materials are in good supply, with no delivery delays. Contractors are quoting firm prices, but when business picks up shortages may develop, bringing higher prices.

- New tax laws offer incentives to commercial, industrial and residential construction. More tax incentives may be enacted in 1977 that can be used to advantage by businessmen who build now.

- No-growth, EPA, zoning, OSHA, and building code restrictions may get tougher, resulting in higher construction costs

- As the construction industry picks up more steam there is greater likelihood of delays in getting jobs started and finished, tighter financing, and less favorable lending terms.

When You Want to Sell Fast, Think of Us First

Construction reports '76 rebound

In the face of an otherwise very sluggish recovery, the building materials industry showed a strong rebound in 1976 and posted an after-tax profit gain of 36 per cent, it was reported today by the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company, an authority on the construction market, is noted for its Dodge Reports on construction activity and Sweet's Catalog Files of building product information.

The latest report, based on the F. W. Dodge Division's periodic review of a group of 51 building products firms in 14 different product categories, showed a 16 per cent sales growth for the year.

According to George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist of the F. W. Dodge Division, "One reason for the success last year for many of the firms in our particular tabulation is diversification. A large number of firms in this sample are conglomerates with sizable interest in nonconstruction markets," he said, "which buffer the firms from the extreme volatility of the construction cycle and have a stabilizing effect on profits."

With strong construction contracting gains called for this year, the Dodge economist believes "Material producers should find that 1977's profit gain, while not of the same magnitude as 1976's recovery, will again be better than average."

Full-year profits of the firms in the 14 groups reviewed by Dodge were:

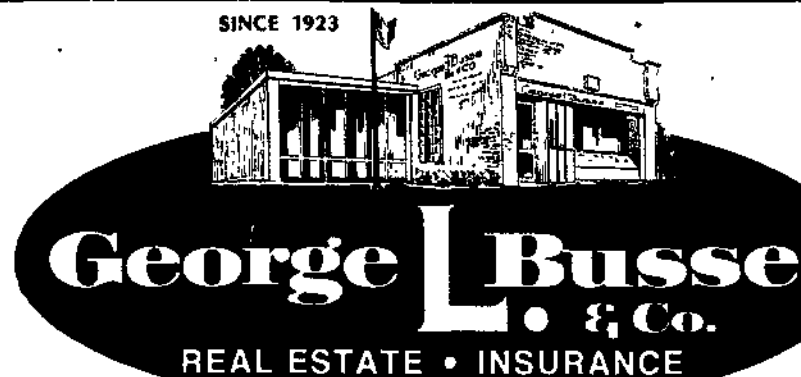

Coatings (2 companies), up more than 100 per cent; Heating and air conditioning equipment (3 companies) up more than 100 per cent; Glass (3 companies), up 73 per cent; Forest products (6 companies), up 59 per cent; Tools and hardware (2 companies), up 49 per cent; Cement (7 companies), up 45 per cent; Controls (4 companies), up 45 per cent; Electrical fixtures (3 companies), up 27 per cent; Gypsum (2 companies), up 22 per cent; Aluminum (3 companies), up 20 per cent; Multi-products (5 companies), up 18 per cent; Plumbing products (3 companies), up 18 per cent; Heavy equipment manufacturers (5 companies), up 6 per cent; Iron and steel (3 companies), down 10 per cent.

Solar home an energy saver

An energy-saving home that uses solar heat and improved building and planning techniques that are expected to save the average homeowner about $175 a year in utility costs is being devised by a Florida developer.

William McQuillan, vice president of homebuilding for General Development Corp., Miami, said a prototype model of the new "energy answer" home will be completed and tested this summer at Port St. Lucie, one of the firm's seven planned Florida communities.

McQuillan also said the new energy-saving system will probably cost the home buyer less than $1,000. It will be offered as an optional feature when purchasing the company's popular "answer home."

CLINTON G. BUSH JR., planning coordinator on the energy-saving project, said the system doesn't employ any newly invented devices, "but we're simply taking the old existing solar water heating concept and adding some new design, planning and materials that will help conserve energy consumption in a home."

While the system basically utilizes a rooftop solar water heating receptor for supplying hot water for household needs, Bush said other construction refinements are being used in the conservation program.

As an example, he said, the water heating and storage tank, which is fed by the rooftop receptor, has been located in the attic space to prevent heat generated by the appliance from entering the living area.

McQuillan concedes the "energy answer" home is specifically designed for mild, sunny climates such as Florida, but the principles of insulation can be applied to northern areas where heat retention is the primary objective rather than air-conditioning.

The solar water heating system, he said, must be provided with stand-by booster systems for cloudy days.

IN ADDITION TO energy-saving in water heating costs, McQuillan said the prototype "energy answer" home will be constructed with six-inch spun glass insulation in exterior walls and ceiling instead of the traditional four-inch material.

The construction executive said the basic savings from the additional insulation will permit the use of smaller air conditioning units which require less electrical power.

"And we're also concentrating our energy-saving efforts on some of the heavy heat-producing areas of the home. As an example, we have completely insulated the bathroom's interior and exterior walls," McQuillan said.

OTHER NEW construction techniques, he said, will include more attic ventilation by use of roof-peak and soffit ducts. Also exhaust fans will be used more extensively in high heat areas such as bathrooms and kitchens.

General Development introduced the "answer home" about six months ago and the 1,320-square-foot residence has been the company's best selling shelter product. The three-bedroom, two-bath home is priced at $28,490, but doesn't include homesite.

The prototype "energy answer" home will be initially constructed at Port St. Lucie, a community of about 11,000 persons on Florida's Atlantic Coast 45 miles north of Palm Beach.

In the news

Pam Halvorsen

PAM HALVORSEN was named "Sales Associate of the Month" for February at T. A. Bolger, Realtors' Elk Grove office. She joined Bolger in December after successfully passing the 30-hour real estate training course and the 300-hour residential real estate and financial curriculum required by Bolger.

Mrs. Halvorsen and her husband and two children reside in Elk Grove Village.

MORRIS REPLEGLE, assistant manager of the Elk Grove Village office of Gladstone, Realtors, recently completed a course in real estate office management in Chicago.

Replegle is a member of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors' roster committee. He lives in Rolling Meadows with his wife Sharon and their three children.

RICHARD GERBER of T. A. Bolger, Realtors' Rolling Meadows office, has been named "Salesman of the Month" for February. This marks the second time that he has led the office in residential sales since joining the firm.

Gerber is currently a member of Rolling Meadows Kiwanis Club and is attending courses to obtain his brokers license. He and his wife Diane have been residents of Rolling Meadows for the past two years.

HOWARD E. KAGAY, assistant vice president and manager of Baird & Warner's Arlington Heights office, was honored as the company's top suburban sales manager in 1976.

Kagay was cited for his total of 531 sales and listings sold in 1976. Kagay also chalked up $3 million in completed real estate sales during the year 1976, the ninth successive year in which he posted more than $1 million in sales.

A life member of the Illinois Association of Realtors' Million Dollar Club, he has his GRI and was named manager of the company's office in January, 1973. He and his wife Rachel and three children reside in Arlington Heights.

KAY VARCHETTO recently joined T. A. Bolger, Realtors, as a sales associate in the Rolling Meadows office. She passed the licensing exam in March 1976, and completed a 300-hour training program. Prior to joining the Rolling Meadows office, Mrs. Varchetto was an executive secretary and participated in St. Colette's Parish Festival for two years.

Mrs. Varchetto, her husband and seven children have resided in Rolling Meadows for the past seven years.

On the move

HOME TOWN REAL ESTATE announced the newest member of their team, Howard Futterman, will be working out of the Arlington Heights office. Futterman recently completed the Real Estate Salesman course through District 214 Continuing Education Program and was successful in passing the exam. He lives in Arlington Heights with his family and has been active in the Park Manor Civic Association.

N.W. Village Realty, Inc. in Schaumburg announced that DON Cwynar joined the sales staff.

He was previously employed as a manager in a tire and rubber company. Cwynar and his wife Cynthia and their two children currently reside in Rolling Meadows.

JIM REGAN, formerly a sales consultant for Venture Realty's Mount Prospect office, has been appointed manager of Venture's Palatine office. Regan has been a broker-salesman since entering the real estate profession three and one half years ago.

Regan's background includes a B.S. degree from Fairfield University in Connecticut, and attendance at Fordham Law School in New York City. He entered the real estate profession as a training specialist directing the Institute for Real Estate Sales in its development, training and education of salespeople and managers. In his first year of selling residential and commercial real estate, he reached almost $1 million in sales.

Set the scene for spring

A leisurely springtime brunch party is a good way to celebrate the return of balmy weather. The food can be as simple as scrambled eggs or as elegant as a salmon loaf and salads. Freshly made hot tea goes well with any brunch food and is an economical beverage, too.

BAKED TOMATOES AND MUSHROOMS

- 6 medium tomatoes
- 6 mushrooms
- 3 tablespoons melted butter
- 1/2 cup soft bread crumbs
- 1/2 teaspoon Italian seasoning

Slice off stem end from each tomato. With tip of knife, remove most of the seeds. Sprinkle cavities with salt and pepper. Arrange, with cut side up, in baking pan. Remove caps from mushrooms and dip in butter; set aside. Chop mushroom stems finely and mix with crumbs, Italian seasoning and remaining butter. Divide crumb mixture among tomatoes and place mushroom cap on top. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven 20 minutes. Serves 6.

SALMON LOAF WITH DILL-LEMON SAUCE

- |  |                               |
|--|-------------------------------|
| 1 (10 ounce) package frozen asparagus spears, thawed | 3 green onions, thinly sliced |
| 1 (16 ounce) can salmon                              | 1/4 cup minced celery         |
| 1 (5.3 ounce) can evaporated milk                    | 2 teaspoons chopped parsley   |
| 2 whole eggs   | 1 teaspoon salt               |
| 2 egg whites   | 3/4 teaspoon Tabasco sauce    |
| 1/4 cup ketchup                                      | 1/2 teaspoon curry powder     |
|  | 1 tablespoon lemon juice      |
|  | 3 cups soft bread crumbs      |

Generously butter a 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan. Trim asparagus spears to about 4 inches and arrange in bottom of pan. Dice leftover pieces. Drain salmon liquid into large bowl. Flake salmon and add to diced asparagus; set aside. Add remaining ingredients to salmon liquid and mix thoroughly. Stir in flaked salmon and diced asparagus. Spoon over asparagus spears in loaf pan. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven until lightly browned, about 40 minutes. Run spatula around sides of pan and invert on serving platter. If desired, garnish with watercress and lemon wedges. Serves 6.

DILL-LEMON SAUCE

- |                          |                                     |
|--------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 2 tablespoons butter     | 1 teaspoon lemon juice              |
| 2 tablespoons flour      | 1 tablespoon capers                 |
| 3/4 teaspoon salt        | 1/4 cup chopped parsley             |
| 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard | 1 teaspoon dried dill or fresh dill |
| 1 cup milk               | 2 teaspoons snipped fresh dill      |
| 2 egg yolks              | 1 cup sour cream                    |
| Grated rind of 1 lemon   |                                     |

Melt butter in saucepan over low heat. Blend in flour, salt and dry mustard; cook 3 minutes. Slowly add milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened and smooth. Combine egg yolks with remaining ingredients except sour cream. Add a little of the hot sauce to egg mixture, then return to saucepan. Stir and bring to a gentle boil. Remove from heat and mix in sour cream. Keep sauce warm over hot water. If desired, garnish with dill or parsley sprig. Makes about 2 cups.

MIMOSA FLORENTINE SALAD

- |  |                               |
|--|-------------------------------|
| 4 cups (about 1/3 pound) torn young spinach leaves | 3 tablespoons bacon drippings |
| 2 cups coarsely shredded lettuce                   | 6 tablespoons wine vinegar    |
| 6 slices bacon, fried crisp and crumbled           | 2 teaspoons sugar             |
| 3 hard-cooked eggs                                 | 1 teaspoon grated onion       |
|  | Purple onion rings            |

In salad bowl, combine spinach, lettuce and bacon. Chop egg whites coarsely and separately chop egg yolks finely. Add whites to salad and save yolks for garnish. Sprinkle salad with salt and pepper; chill until ready to serve. At serving time, prepare dressing by heating bacon drippings, vinegar, sugar and grated onion together. Toss hot dressing with salad greens. Garnish with egg yolks and onion rings. Serves 6.

PINEAPPLE FRUIT BOAT

- |                             |                                  |
|-----------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 1 ripe pineapple            | 2 cups orange sections           |
| 1 pint strawberries, halved | 2 small bananas, sliced          |
| Sugar                       | 1/2 to 3/4 cup Kirsch (optional) |

Cut pineapple in half lengthwise. Make serving boat from one half by carefully scooping out fruit to within 1/4 inch of the edge. Peel other half and cut pineapple into bite size pieces. Place pineapple pieces in container with strawberries and sweeten to taste. Add orange sections and bananas. Pour Kirsch over all, chill for at least 1 hour, stirring a few times. Pile some of the fruit mixture into pineapple boat and refill as needed. Serves 6.

GERMAN-BORN Karin Winter of Mount Prospect likes to prepare recipes handed down in her family, such as this Goetterschipse, a rich party dessert filled with fruit and cake.

Family recipes are her favorites

by LOIS SEILER

German dishes are the specialty of Karin Winter of Mount Prospect. Her family immigrated to the United States when Karin was a young girl, so she grew up on German cooking as did her husband, Gottfried, also born in Germany.

Although she tries other foods, Karin prepares German meals three to four times a week. Her preference is for hand-me-downs from her mother and grandmother, and these appeal to Gottfried and their children, Elaine, 12, and Mark, 11.

SOUR CREAM SCHNITZEL is made by an easy method. Pork tenderloin patties are browned and then baked in bouillon. Sour cream is added to the gravy before serving, with fresh parsley used as garnish. The meat is tender and flavorful and the rich gravy tastes delicious over mashed potatoes. Karin also suggests cooked carrots and a green salad as accompaniments.

Stuffed peppers is another family favorite. Green peppers are filled with a mixture of ground beef, rice, onion and egg and baked in tomato juice. The savory gravy is thickened before serving. Each stuffed pepper is a meal in itself, so all that is needed is some crusty Vienna bread.

AN ELEGANT party dessert is Karin's Goetterschipse, which could be likened, in a way, to an English Trifle. She prepares a very light-textured cake first, which is cut into small cubes and layered in a large glass bowl with fruit cocktail which has been marinated in rum. A hot pudding is poured over the top and the dessert is refrigerated overnight to allow the flavor of the rum to permeate the Goetterschipse.

Before serving, it is topped with whipped cream and maraschino cherries. Impressive in appearance and taste, this rich dessert will serve twelve.

The Winters moved to Mount Prospect six years ago and are members of the Schwaben Athletic Club in Buffalo Grove. The whole family enjoys skiing and Karin's other hobbies include tennis and sewing. She is a member of St. Emily's Women's Club.

SOUR CREAM SCHNITZEL

2 whole pork tenderloins,
1½ to 2 pounds each
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour
1 heaping tablespoon instant chicken bouillon
1½ cups boiling water
3 heaping teaspoons commercial sour cream
1 heaping teaspoon fresh chopped parsley
Cut tenderloins into patties (about 10 in all) and pound with mallet to flatten. Sprinkle them with salt and dip into flour on both sides. Brown in 3 tablespoons oil. When brown, remove from pan and pour off grease. Dissolve instant bouillon in boiling water and pour into pan. Stir up pan drippings. Pour over patties in an ovenproof dish. Cover, place in 350-degree oven and bake 45 minutes or until tender.

Mix a little hot gravy from the pan with the sour cream, stir well and pour into gravy in pan, stirring. Garnish with fresh parsley. Serves four generously.

STUFFED PEPPERS

4 large green peppers
1 pound ground beef
½ cup cooked rice
1 egg
1 chopped onion
Salt and pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
1 quart tomato juice
2 whole celery ribs
Cut off tops and remove core and seeds from green peppers.

Mix together beef, rice, egg, onion, salt and pepper to taste, paprika and ½ cup of the tomato juice. Stuff peppers with the mixture and place in baking dish. Pour in remaining juice, season with a little salt and add celery ribs.

Cover, place in oven and bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Thicken gravy in the following manner: mix together 2 teaspoons flour with 3 tablespoons water. Add a little hot tomato sauce and stir into gravy in pan. Return to oven for an additional 5 minutes. Serves 4.

GOETTERSCHIPSE

Cake:
6 eggs, separated
6 tablespoons sugar

Chicken a good buy

Chicken continues as a good buy and here is an easy-to-make chicken recipe to serve when cooking for two. Just add rice or potatoes and a salad for a quick, less expensive lunch or dinner.

You will save money by buying a whole chicken, cutting it yourself and freezing unused parts for later meals.

COUNTRY-STYLE CHICKEN

1 can (about 2 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
1 cup diagonally sliced celery ½ cup diagonally sliced carrot
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chicken broth
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ cup sliced radishes
Generous dash pepper
1 cup (5 ounces) boned chicken or turkey, cut up Cooked rice, enough for 2 portions

In saucepan, brown mushrooms and cook celery and carrot in butter until just tender. Stir in remaining ingredients except chicken and rice. Cook, stirring until thickened. Add chicken; heat. Serve over rice. Makes about 3 cups; serves 2.

Baby food gets Mom's care

by VALERIE BERG

Every mother knows the fun — and frustration — of feeding baby. Even at an early age, the little tyke holds strong opinions on what foods he or she does and does not like. To mother's dismay, the baby may prefer the dirt from houseplants to nutritious green vegetables.

But trying though it may be, it is important for mothers to be concerned about their children's nutrition and to try to teach them good eating habits at a young age.

In recent years, some parents, as well as consumer activists and some nutritionists, have been concerned over the safety and nutritional quality of commercially prepared baby foods. Baby food manufacturers have come under fire for adding starches, sugar and salt to their products.

IN RESPONSE to consumer protests, manufacturers have been cutting back or eliminating some of these additives. According to a study in Consumer Reports, Baker Beech-Nut and Heinz have stopped adding salt to all of their baby foods, while Gerber still adds salt to nearly two-thirds of its products. Approximately one-third of the products of each of the "Big Three" companies contain sugar, particularly the desserts and the more acidic types of fruits. Nearly half of the products from each of the three companies contain modified starches (cornstarches and tapioca), which are used to maintain favorable consistency and texture and to prevent separation of ingredients.

JoAnn Engel of Hoffman Estates is one mother who feels more comfortable preparing baby foods at home. Instead of buying commercially prepared strained fruits for her 10-week-old daughter, Jennifer, Mrs. Engel purees fresh or canned fruits at home.

"I don't trust the things they're putting in," she says — (commercial baby foods) have tapioca and you don't know how much of it is in the fruit."

MRS. ENGEL BEGAN making homemade baby foods after receiving her doctor's approval. When using out-of-season fruits, she buys the canned diet kind without sweeteners, or buys the regular kind and rinses the syrup off the fruit before pureeing in her Osterizer. She adds two per cent milk or distilled water for the proper consistency and stores in small jars that hold two servings' worth of fruit.

Mrs. Engel intends to serve Jennifer homemade vegetables and meats, too, when she is old enough to eat them. "To me, it's not any more inconvenient than opening a jar," she says.

But not all mothers are worried about commercial baby foods. Marie Ross of Arlington Heights, a registered dietitian and mother of two young daughters, has made baby food for them at home. However, she has done consulting work for one of the major baby food manufacturers and is convinced that commercial baby food is as safe and nutritious, if not more so, than that made at home.

COMMERCIAL SANITATION procedures are probably better than those at home, she says. She adds that commercial baby food additives are well within the recommended limits and concerned parents can read the labels and choose those products that have no additives.

"I really cannot object to commercial baby foods," she says. "I cannot think that anything is wrong with them."

Mrs. Ross has found straining homemade fruits and vegetables costs about the same as buying them ready made, while straining meats at home saves a little money.

IN PREPARING FRUITS and vegetables, she usually buys canned store brands on sale, drains off the juice and blends the product. If necessary, she adds liquid from the can for proper consistency. She pours the blended food into baby food jars, leaving a little room for expansion and freezes them immediately. She also has frozen food in muffin tins and ice cube trays.

When preparing prunes or acidic fruits such as mandarin oranges and orange juice, Mrs. Ross blends them with bland fruits such as applesauce or pears.

She cooks low-cost cuts of meat with a moist method such as boiling and uses the gravy to provide the correct consistency when blending. Chicken and turkey also can be baked or boiled, then blended.

She warns that babies may have allergic reactions to some foods and advises that whenever a baby is being fed a new food, that should be the only new food introduced for two or three days. If the parents are allergic to any foods, those foods should be added very cautiously. Egg whites, too often cause allergic reactions.

THE BIGGEST DRAWBACKS to homemade baby foods, Mrs. Ross says, are the possible lack of variety — when a large quantity of one food is made and frozen — and the danger of contamination.

"I think you have to be extremely cautious about contamination at home," she warns. "When mother has a little cut on her hand or the blender blades aren't clean, that's a source of bacteria."

Making baby food from scratch may be time-consuming, but some parents consider it a worthwhile effort. To save time when cooking for the whole family, the baby's portion of food can be set aside and strained before seasonings or spices are added for the rest of the family.

Some kind of strainer, blender or food mill is needed. A few companies sell grinders made specifically for baby foods. The food can be stored in any small containers with tight covers, such as baby food jars, or can be frozen in ice cube trays or on cookie sheets. All cooking utensils and equipment, the workspace and the cook's hands must be clean. Equipment should be washed in hot soapy water and rinsed well with boiling water.

THE BABY'S pediatrician can advise you when to start the baby on strained solid foods. Usually the baby first eats iron-fortified cereals. Avoid cereals in jars; they are expensive and poor iron sources compared to boxed cereals.

The baby probably will begin to eat fruits or vegetables next. Either fresh, frozen or canned foods can be used, but fresh foods are preferable if you want to avoid salt or other additives.

A ripe banana need only be peeled and mashed with a fork. Other fruits should be washed, peeled and cored and cut into small pieces, then steamed for 15 to 20 minutes or boiled in a small amount of water until tender, about 10 to 20 minutes. To fix canned fruits, drain off syrup. Be sure all seeds and pits have been removed from fruits before pureeing. Do not add sugar.

TO COOK FRESH or frozen vegetables, clean, peel and slide. Steam or cook for about 20 minutes in a small amount of water. To fix canned vegetables, drain the liquid from the can into the saucepan and boil the liquid (Continued on Page 8)

Mothers prepare baby food at home

down to about one-half its volume. Add the vegetable and heat. Blend the cooked vegetables with a small amount of the cooking liquid. Do not add salt.

Even though potatoes are bland, many babies do not like their sticky consistency. Add milk or formula to make them smooth. If the baby does not like potatoes, wait until he or she is older and willing to eat them.

Meats, poultry and fish can be baked, broiled, poached, stewed or braised, but not fried. Do not add fat. Remove bones and gristle. Cut the cooked meat into small pieces and puree. For a smoother consistency, add a small amount of formula, milk, water or a small cooked serving of cream of rice plus milk. Dried beans and peas, thoroughly cooked, may be strained and occasionally used in place of meat.

PEDIATRICIANS disagree on whether babies should be fed egg whites and the baby's doctor should be consulted before feeding this to the baby. But whether the baby eats the whole egg or just the yolk, hardboil the egg and mash what you need with a fork to make a smooth paste.

Cottage cheese and yogurt are some easily digested foods. Cottage cheese should be pureed before serving. Pureed fruit can be added to cottage cheese or yogurt for extra flavor.

To preserve large amounts of homemade baby food, pour pureed foods into plastic ice cube trays. When frozen, pop out and wrap individually, label and date. Or cover a cookie tray with foil, drop on spoonfuls of pureed food, freeze and wrap the portion individually, label and date. If you have saved commercial baby food jars, you may use those to freeze food, but be sure to leave space at the top of the jar. Frozen foods will keep for one month.

Before serving, thaw in refrigerator, warm in an egg poacher cup or place a portion in a cup and set in a pan of hot water over low heat. Once you have started a baby on a frozen portion, do not keep that portion more than one day.

Baby food producers battle protests

by GAYNOR MADDOX

Suspicion and the nutritional effects of baby foods on infants have increased protests by consumer groups and public health experts to baby-food manufacturers.

To combat these protests, which the companies claim are unfounded, these companies are now issuing corrective statements about the amounts of salt, sugar and certain additives used in baby foods.

FRANK C. NICHOLAS, chairman-president of Beech-Nut Baby Food, at a recent press conference in New York, said his company had heeded the protests and now, in compliance, produces foods without salt or sugar.

"After much conferring with scientists, I can assure you that our new line Naturally Good Baby Food Products contains no added salt in any item, no added sugar in 84 items and reduced sugar levels in other items," he stated.

The Beech-Nut statement stirred the hackles of other makers of baby foods such as Gerber and Heinz, who claim they have been following this approach for two to five years.

AS TO SALT in baby food, it is now generally agreed that none is needed. Nutritionists state that sufficient salt to satisfy a baby's needs is found naturally in basic foods. Nor have scientists found medical evidence that added salt offers any benefit to infants. There is some concern also that added salt now may contribute to high blood pressure in later years.

The general trend among baby food manufacturers is to eliminate all salt from their products.

Sugar in baby food brings up the same question. At Gerber Products Co. in Fremont, Mich., dietitians, research and technical people, salesmen and others who are concerned with the finished product meet. The purpose of the meetings is to improve the quality, nutritional standard and taste of Gerber's baby food.

GEORGE PURVIS, a research specialist at Gerbers, says, "We have to deal with the mothers adding more sugar to suit the mother's taste, not the baby's. They tend to add more sugar than nutritionists recommend. In this way the baby develops a sweet tooth which could result in dental caries later on. So we restrict our formulas to the medical maximum for infants.

"We add sugar to fruit juices and strained fruits such as applesauce, applesauce and pineapple, pears, and pears and pineapple. When we use sugar in any products, it is for a specific purpose, for example, to balance the acid of a tart fruit," Purvis adds.

Beech-Nut stresses they add no preservatives, artificial flavors, artificial colors or flavor enhancers to any product. But the other leading companies, Heinz and Gerber, say they never have used these ingredients.

WARNINGS TO mothers about baby food:

Trust the manufacturers' judgment about added sugar and salt. Don't add either. You most likely will overdo it. Read labels carefully. Check all ingredients.

Check baby food jars at the supermarket. They are supposed to be hermetically sealed. Do not unscrew them and put them back on the store shelf.

The shelf life of baby foods under the new dispensation is exactly the same as previously.

6 tablespoons flour
Beat egg whites to stiff peaks. Add egg yolks and beat gently to blend. Add sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, blending well. Turn off electric mixer. Gently fold in flour with a rubber spatula, 1 tablespoon at a time.

Turn batter into a greased and floured 9 by 13-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes, or until tester comes out clean or cake springs back to touch. Let cool. In the meantime, prepare the following:

Fruit filling:
1 large can fruit cocktail, drained
4 tablespoons rum

Add rum to drained fruit, toss well and set aside to marinate.

Pudding:

4 egg yolks
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon vanilla
Mix ingredients together and cook, stirring constantly, until pudding boils and thickens slightly.

Assembly Goetterschpise in the following manner: Cut cooled cake into 1-inch cubes. In a large glass serving bowl, alternate layers of cake and fruit, ending with the fruit on top. Pour hot pudding over the top. Cover and let set in refrigerator overnight.

Before serving, whip 1 pint of whipping cream and spread over top of dessert. Decorate with maraschino cherries. Spoon into serving dishes. Serves 12.

Salads feature fresh foods

In the mood for something different? Start with an easy recipe for orange glazed carrot sticks. Then move on to a banana cracked wheat salad or a Chinese banana and seafood salad.

These will get you in the mood for spring after this winter, fresh additions to the menu will be welcomed.

ORANGE GLAZED CARROT STICKS

8-10 medium carrots (1 pound)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped fresh onion
1-3 cup packed light brown sugar
1/2 cup fresh orange juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
Pare carrots and cut into sticks by cutting in half lengthwise, then into lengthwise quarters and eighths. In a large skillet, cook the carrots, covered, in a small amount of water until tender. Remove carrots from skillet. Heat butter in same skillet. Add onion and cook until tender. Stir in brown sugar and orange juice; simmer 5 minutes. Add cooked carrots, sprinkle with salt, and spoon sauce over carrots until glazed and heated. Serves 4 to 6

BANANA CRACKED WHEAT SALAD

2 1/2 cups water
1 package (8 ounces) wheat pilaf mix
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup salad oil
2 cucumbers, pared, seeded and diced
1/3 cup sliced scallions
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1/2 teaspoon salt, divided
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 cups plain yogurt
4 teaspoons chopped mint

4 bananas
In medium saucepan bring water to a boil. Add wheat, reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in lemon juice and oil. Let stand at room temperature until cool. Stir in cucumbers, scallions, parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt and pepper. Cover and chill until ready to serve.

For dressing, mix yogurt, remaining 1/2 teaspoon salt and mint; chill. When ready to serve, peel bananas, cut into slices, add to salad and mix lightly. Serve with yogurt dressing. Makes 7 cups. Serves 6 to 8.

CHINESE BANANA AND SEAFOOD SALAD

Mustard Dressing:
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon white wine or cider vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon mustard seed
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Measure all ingredients into a large bowl. Stir until well blended and smooth.

Salad:
1 can (1 pound) bean sprouts
1 pound cooked and cleaned shrimp or 2 cans (6 1/2 or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil
1 can (8 3/4 ounces) pineapple tidbits, drained
2 bananas
Drain bean sprouts, rinse in cold water and drain again. Add to mustard dressing with shrimp or tuna and drained pineapple; mix well and chill. At serving time, peel bananas, cut into slices and mix lightly with salad. Serves 4.

Basic pasta dishes enjoy home-cooked variations

One of the pleasures of home cooking is experimenting with recipes.

Start with the basics and then add extra ingredients that you feel may complement each other. A perfect example is a variation on fettuccine that gets an extra dash with the use of walnuts. It also is made with margarine and skim milk for those who must consider cholesterol problems.

Another changed pasta dish adds orange juice and rind to ground pork.

MOCK FETTUCINE

1 cup (1/2 stick) margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped parsley
3 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 cups skim milk
1 package (8-ounce) wide noodles, cooked and drained
1 cup coarsely chopped English walnuts

Melt margarine in a skillet and saute onion until tender. Add parsley and cook about 1 minute, stirring frequently. Blend in flour, salt and pepper. Remove from heat and gradually stir in skim milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until sauce boils.

Pour sauce over hot noodles and toss gently until thoroughly mixed. Garnish with chopped English walnuts. Serves 6.

PASTA DEL SOL

1 pound ground pork

1/2 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 cups orange juice
1/4 teaspoon salt, divided
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon pepper, divided
1/2 teaspoon rubbed sage
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
4 ounces lasagna noodles, cooked according to package directions
1 pound (2 cups) creamed cottage cheese
1 egg, beaten
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1/2 teaspoon grated orange rind

In large skillet break up pork with fork. Stir over medium heat until browned. Add onion and garlic; cook until tender. Blend in flour. Stir in orange juice, 1/4 teaspoon salt, sugar, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, sage and cinnamon. Cook until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Remove from heat.

In medium bowl mix cottage cheese, egg, parsley, orange rind, remaining 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper.

Place a layer of half of lasagna noodles on bottom of 11 x 7-inch baking dish. Spoon half of cheese mixture over noodles, spoon half of pork mixture over cheese, then repeat with remaining lasagna noodles, cottage cheese and pork mixture. Bake uncovered in 350-degree oven 30 minutes. Garnish with orange slices. Serves 6.

Pineapple flavors pudding

It was a Scottish horticulturist, living in the Hawaiian Islands just before the turn of the century, who first recognized the commercial potential for pineapple.

Remembering the pineapple grown in English hothouses, Captain John Kidwell realized the Island climate was ideal for the cultivation of pineapple. In 1892 he opened the first pineapple cannery.

Menehune Pineapple Bread is something Captain Kidwell would have liked. Crushed pineapple gives flavor, interest and color to a rich bread custard.

MENEHUNE PINEAPPLE BREAD

4 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter, melted
2 tbsp. flour
1 can (15 1/4 ounces) crushed pineapple
4 slices white bread, cubed
Combine eggs, sugar, butter, flour and pineapple. Mix in bread cubes. Pour into greased 1 1/2-quart casserole. Bake 1 hour at 350 degrees. Serves 6 to 8.

Tea blend brewed

First there was the tea bag, and then instant tea. Now a major importer of the beverage is introducing a blend designed for use in automatic coffee brewing machines.

A 12-ounce canister of the product makes about 210 cups of tea for less than two cents a cup. The blend of orange pekoe and pekoe cut black tea also can be used to make iced tea with the same appliance. (UPI)

Quick dessert ideas

For a refreshing dessert, add soft candy mints to canned fruit cocktail. Chill several hours before serving in a chilled dish. Top with a mint sprig.

Turn a can of peach slices into a saucepan and add vanilla and almond extract. Heat through and serve hot over vanilla ice cream for an easy and glamorous dessert.

MICKEY PEACHE, one of two Northwest suburban residents to provide respite care, works during the day with children at Kirk Center for the handicapped in Palatine. At night she brings home her caring for handicapped children to provide relief for parents.

Families involved in care

by DIANE GRANAT

There are two little boys in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates who understand what it means to be handicapped. That is because every now and then they share their toys and bedrooms and moms with a handicapped child.

The boys are the sons of Mickey Peache and Ellie Foster, two women who provide a rare service for families of the handicapped in the Northwest suburbs.

Ms. Peache, 21 Kristin Dr., Schaumburg, and Mrs. Foster, 2156 W. Somersworth, Hoffman Estates, are the only local residents licensed to provide short-term respite care for handicapped children and adults when there is an emergency in the family or when parents need a vacation.

Some parents say Ms. Peache and Mrs. Foster have given them the first breath of relief since their lives were changed by the birth of a handicapped child.

"THE DAY-AFTER-DAY pressures of having a handicapped child are so time consuming and mentally draining," said Ms. Peache. "These parents need to be able to get away even if they don't go anywhere. They need a break."

A teacher's aide at Kirk Center for the handicapped in Palatine, Ms. Peache brings children and adults to stay at her home for up to 21 days.

She began offering respite care last year through Pioneer Center for the Exceptional in McHenry County, but when its financial aid for Northwest suburban residents was cut off, she started to offer care privately at $30 per day.

CARING FOR a handicapped child is more than feeding, dressing and washing him for Ms. Peache.

One woman who stayed with her in December went to Milwaukee with Ms. Peache and her 7-year-old son to visit relatives. She takes them to McDonald's "and if Sean gets a treat, they get something."

Going to McDonald's is also a treat for handicapped youngsters who stay with Mrs. Foster, her husband and three sons. About 30 children have stayed in their Hoffman Estates home since Mrs. Foster was licensed last June to provide respite care.

"You treat a special child just like a regular child, only with restrictions. They need some additional care and help" such as giving them medication, Mrs. Foster said.

CHILDREN WHO stay with Mrs. Foster usually share a room with her 6-year-old son P.A. (Paul Alan).

"Every night P.A. and whoever was here would take their bath. Then P.A. would read to them until they went to sleep," said Mrs. Foster, describing the special relationship that grew between her son and the handicapped child.

"On Saturday mornings they watched cartoons. P.A. is in seventh heaven when he can explain something."

When children come for respite care at Ms. Peache's Schaumburg apartment, they get the bottom bunk of Sean's double decker bed, usually covered with dozens of stuffed animals.

"Sean knows these children are not mentally gifted like he is," Ms. Peache said. "He knows the difference. I explain that we're all so happy that it's nice to give to other people and help them. He plays with them and accepts it very well."

Respite care

New service gives parents of handicapped a breather

Heleen and John Koch had not had a vacation in 18 years, ever since their daughter Barbie was born with cerebral palsy.

When the Buffalo Grove couple celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary last fall, they wanted to take a trip to Europe with some old friends. Until recently that trip would have been impossible without the Kochs worrying about who would take care of Barbie.

Barbie doesn't talk or walk and she isn't toilet trained. "You have to guess whenever she needs a drink of water, give her medication three times a day and roll her over on her tummy when she's sleeping," said Mrs. Koch. "She doesn't scream oroller. She will just sit there and wait for attention."

THE KOCHS said they could not afford to have someone come to their home to care for Barbie's special needs. But they got their vacation last September when they discovered respite care, a new service available for families of handicapped children and adults.

Respite care provides short-term care with trained individuals during an emergency, illness in the family, when a vacation is planned or when parents just need a breather from the pressures of caring for a handicapped child.

"It's an emotional drain on parents having a special child," said Ellie Foster, a Hoffman Estates resident who offers respite care in her home.

"These parents are always tied down," said Mrs. Foster. "Their little people are little people all the time."

Byline report

Diane Granat

They never have a relaxed golden years."

FINDING A babysitter to care for a handicapped child can be difficult, and many parents hesitate to ask relatives and neighbors to care for a child with special needs.

"I have a severely handicapped child and I don't have any alternative," said Claudia Coffey, 803 W. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights, who has used respite care twice for her daughter Tracey.

"We have no relatives in the area who can help out," Mrs. Coffey said. "A lot of times the neighbors will watch Tracey when I'm gone but I hate to put the responsibility on them."

For large families, respite care can also provide relief for other children, said an Elk Grove Village mother of a retarded child. "It's hard for the normal kids to live with a retarded child," she said. "It's good for them to be away from her for a while."

BESIDES GIVING parents a chance to get away, respite care can prevent the placement of a handicapped person in a long-term residential facility because of a temporary family crisis, said Richard Hemp, regional coordinator for community residential services of the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities.

"If properly utilized, respite care can prevent institutionalization in many cases," Hemp said. "The last thing we want to do is to remove him (a handicapped person) from his home. The assumption with respite care is always that the person is going to come back home."

One drawback of respite care, however, is its cost. Until last December, Northwest suburban residents could arrange care through the Pioneer Center for the Exceptional in McHenry County, which subsidized the $20 per day fee in private homes.

But the aid from Pioneer Center was cut off "because we couldn't keep up with the demand," said Tom Gollan, director of children services at Pioneer.

GOLLAN SAID the program was funded last year for McHenry County residents but Cook County families were also accepted. "Once respite care became well-known the word of it began to snowball. Our only choice was to continue to provide services only to McHenry," Gollan said.

Now parents who want respite care in this area must arrange it privately and pay the full price, sometimes as much as $30 per day.

"If the government subsidizes it, I would definitely do it again," said an Elk Grove Village parent. But with six children in the family, without the subsidy "that would cost a fortune," she said.

The only program in the north suburban area now receiving government funds is a weekend respite program for autistic children offered through The Rimland School in Evanston.

ROSALIND OPPENHEIM, Rimland's director, said a $5,000 federal grant partially covers the cost of the weekly program at a Wisconsin camp. Parents also pay weekly fees and do fundraising for the program, she said.

Because of a need expressed by residents in this area, both the Clearbrook Center for the handicapped in Rolling Meadows and the Glenkirk Assn. for the Retarded in Glenview have applied for government funding to establish respite care programs.

Marc Savard, executive director of Clearbrook, said the center has asked the Dept. of Mental Health for about $25,000 for respite care, but Clearbrook has not decided how it will use the funds if they are granted.

Clearbrook's chances of receiving the money, however, don't look good "because Glenkirk Assn. has a program that is established and ready to go," Savard said. "With the tight money situation (the Dept. of Mental Health) does not like anything that comes close to a duplication of effort."

BONNIE SMEJA, coordinator for family services at Glenkirk, said Glenkirk's central location in the north suburbs would make it a good place to coordinate a respite program. Savard said Clearbrook will consider joining Glenkirk's program.

"We can match people up with someone we have trained in their area," Ms. SMEJA said. In return, local communities would recruit people to provide care, publicize the program and share the expenses, possibly contributing some of their revenue sharing money, she said.

The focus of Glenkirk's program, if the funding is approved, would be on training people to provide care, Ms. SMEJA said. The money also would be used to help families participate on a sliding fee scale, she said.

GLENKIRK'S PROGRAM would train specialists in dressing, feeding and other types of care needed for children with disabilities. "In order for parents to leave their child without having their own anxieties they have to trust the person they are leaving their child with," Mrs. SMEJA said.

While most respite programs place children in the specialist's home Glenkirk also is training people to go into the homes of handicapped families to provide one night or possibly overnight babysitting, Ms. SMEJA said.

Respite care has been offered in McHenry County since October, 1975, and many parents of the handicapped now have heard about it. The biggest concern now is funding.

"WE'RE NOT IN a wild spending year for any program statewide," said Hemp of the Dept. of Mental Health. He said respite care was projected as a need "but nobody got the budget they asked for. Now we have to go back to the drawing board."

Ellie Foster said she would like to carry a banner for these special parents and lobby for funding. "They're not asking for pity," she said. "They're just asking for a fair shake."

Old tools more popular with men

Thomas Carlyle said it: "Man is a tool using animal. Without tools he is nothing, with tools he is all." I don't know if I agree with Tom that tools make the man, but they certainly have changed the course of history, from the very first day Oog the caveman discovered he could split a clamshell open with a sharp rock.

Tool collecting may be more popular among men than women. Oh, why hedge? It is a sexist hobby, for I don't know a single lady tool collector, but there may be some lurking in the flea markets. Generally, you will see a huddle of men in the tool displays, either wondering what those things were used for or knowingly describing their function to others more inexperienced.

Grace Carolyn

Collecting

drills, draw knives, squares, scribes, etc., not so rare that they cannot still be found at sales for a few dollars.

However, if one is searching for really old tools, that is, late 17th or early 18th century, you could expect to pay highly inflated prices. For instance, a farrier's butteris, which was used in shoeing horses, was listed a few years back at auction for $6. In a listing of tools available from a shop specializing in such things today, a butteris costs $30.

Old axes have risen, evidently never to fall again. (Or fell again?) My son-in-law became enamored of a broadaxe and it was necessary for us all to "go-together" to buy it for him for Christmas.

Wooden planes! I used to buy those for a couple dollars each, polish them up and give them to newbies. They never failed to make a hit. A plough plane, the very fancy ornate iron kind (used to make a furrow or groove in wood) which used to sell for $25 now may cost $100. But that doesn't mean you still can't find a bargain. Dealers don't necessarily go by the price books — usually by what they had to pay.

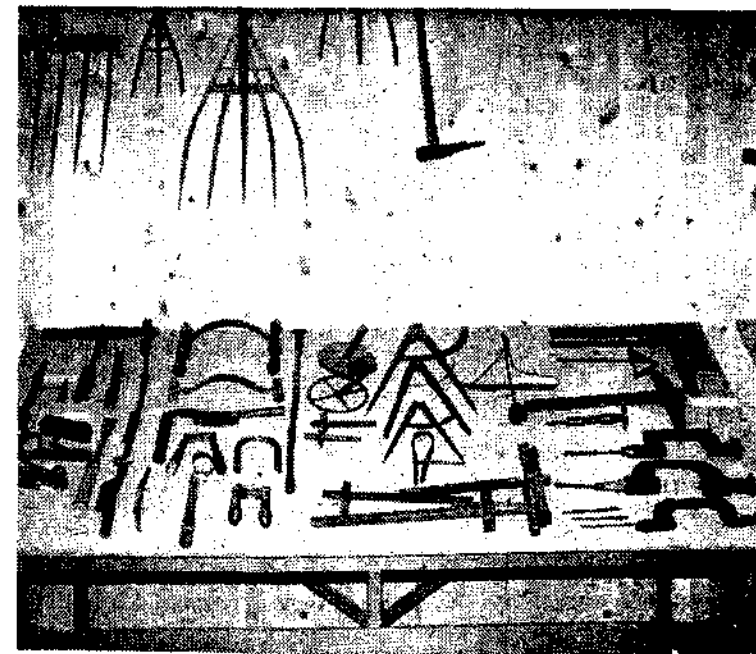

THERE IS A handbook of prices of recent edition called "Alexander Far-nham's Tool Collectors Handbook," which shows prices paid at auction for Early American tools. Most of the items listed are really old and obsolete, such as the horse-shoeing equipment mentioned, or perhaps "travelers," which are tools used by a blacksmith to measure the length of iron necessary to wrap around a wagon wheel. These are tools of a different lifestyle, unrelated to motor mechanics and fossil fuel.

However, even later tools are very collectible, including early auto items. I know my husband was delighted when he found a tappet wrench (he didn't think it was funny when I asked him why he couldn't tap it with an ordinary wrench) for his Model A Ford. And pre-mentioned son-in-law is always on the lookout for enormous old-fashioned wrenches for his heavy equipment, because he can buy those at antiques or junk shops at a fraction of what new ones would cost.

THE SORT OF tools shown in the picture, as well as those used for other purposes, such as gardening, and especially at moving sales, where retiring persons are disposing of everything related to work and maintenance and going the condo route in Florida. Some of these old things have served a lifetime and are still as usable as the day they were made.

We recently bought at a moving sale a bundle of three garden items — a hoe, spade and rake, for $8. They are solidly riveted to their handles and much sturdier than one can buy today. So don't overlook old tools the next time you see a "Garage Sale" sign down the street, for even if ev-everyone in the family has 10 thumbs, you can still hang them on the wall and make an "interesting arrangement."

Lawrence E. Lamb

The doctor says

Estrogen to prevent bone loss debatable

Can taking estrogen help prevent osteoporosis or dowager's hump? I am 50 and recently had a laminectomy. My orthopedic surgeon strongly urged me to continue the estrogen — I've been taking (Premarin) for the past couple of years — as my chance of getting osteoporosis was 10 times greater than getting cervical cancer.

My gynecologist, on the other hand, has just advised me to stop taking estrogen because he is not sure I am menopausal at all and wants to wait and see. He claims there is no connection between taking estrogen and prevention of osteoporosis. Now what do I do?

I seem to get more mail these days pointing out the type of dilemma you have gotten into. It is a symptom of patients seeing different specialists and not having a family doctor. My first recommendation is to get a good family doctor who can be in charge of all aspects of your care and refer you to specialists as needed.

The value of estrogen in preventing or treating osteoporosis — dissolving bones — is hotly debated by different highly competent investigators. Some, including gynecologists of national reputation, believe it is useful in treating osteoporosis when it occurs. It is apparently not useful unless a woman really has a deficiency of female hormones. Many women still form appreciable amounts of female hormones after the ovaries quit. These come from the outer shell of the adrenal gland (adrenal cortex). I am sure your gynecologist wants to find out if you are deficient in female hormones and if you need any hormone replacement. If you don't, it may not help much.

I might add that cancer of the uterus is much more serious than the more common osteoporosis. Recent studies do show that estrogen may delay osteoporosis but may be less effective in treating established osteoporosis. A new hormone, not estrogen, called methandrostenolone (Dianabol by Ciba) has been reported not to stop bone loss but increase the amount of bone tissue. If other studies confirm this, it may be useful in treating osteoporosis.

THE HEALTH LETTER number 6-10, Osteoporosis, outlines the various approaches to its prevention and treatment. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. You will note that you can decrease your chances of having bone loss by making sure you have an adequate calcium intake. I suggest at least 1000 milligrams a day and if possible 1500 milligrams. If you don't want to use a quart of milk a day or its equivalent, you should take calcium tablets.

If I were your family doctor, I would suggest that you follow your gynecologist's recommendations and try to prevent bone loss by other means, including adequate exercise, calcium in the diet and, if needed in your case, I would put you on the program of calcium, vitamin D and fluoride which has been reported by the Mayo Clinic to be successful in treating patients with osteoporosis. This is discussed in The Health Letter I am sending you.

(Because of the large volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer selected ones of common interest in his column. Write to him in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.)

Best bet on sweater would be to dye it

Dear Dorothy: I washed a white wool sweater with something red by accident and the sweater is now pink. Soaked it overnight in an enzyme pre-soak solution but without luck. Suggestions? — "Worried"

If your heart is set on white, you have a right to be upset. My file shows only one instance of a reader claiming to have recovered a white sweater. This treatment called for a solution of one cup hydrogen peroxide, 10 drops household ammonia and 10 cups of water. The sweater was soaked in this to remove the color, then washed in milk lukewarm suds, rinsed in the same temperature water and dried flat on a towel. Not only is this speculative, but the more one works with wool the more it felters (gets matted-looking). Your best bet may be to go ahead and dye it to some color you like. With pink, you have 18 options in the red, purple, green or brown families. Personally, I could easily be enticed by rose pink, coral or fuchsia.

Dear Dorothy: Our teen-son has bought a motorcycle. I've always been petrified about these things. I don't want to be a nag, but I need to be sure he knows all that's involved. Would you help? — A.M.

You've come to a know-nothing on this score. But it was a challenge and I tried. Lo, there is a source you can write: The Motorcycle Safety Foundation, 6755 Elridge Landing Rd., Linthicum, Md. 21090.

Dear Dorothy: Is there anything one can do with an avocado that has become too soft for normal eating? — Diana Billock

Press the meat of the avocado through a fine sieve, add one-half cup of orange juice, one tablespoon lemon juice and a quarter teaspoon of salt. You then have a delicious dressing for a fruit salad.

Geometry helps in needlepoint

One recent evening, my children were grumbling about their homework in geometry and were wondering of what possible use it would be in the future.

I showed them that I use it constantly in my needlepoint-designing work.

With the present popularity of Oriental Imari designs, I'm confronted almost daily with the problem of dividing a circle into three or six equal segments.

The illustrated canvas, shown with the pot from which the design was taken, is hexagonal itself, with the shape suggested by the pot. (It's a Chinese, not an Imari, design.)

I thought that those who enjoy drawing their own needlepoint designs might want to know how to make a hexagonal shape on paper, to be transferred to canvas. (The same method used for dividing a circle into six sections is used for copying an Imari plate.)

FIRST, DECIDE ON the diagonal measurement of your hexagon — that is, from one point to the point directly opposite. This will be the diameter of the circle you'll draw to begin your design.

The illustrated canvas has a diagonal measurement of 14½ inches, so my compass was set at 7¼ inches to draw a circle with a 14½-inch diameter.

Draw your circle on white butcher paper, making sure that your compass is secure so it won't slip to another measurement.

Now, using the exact same compass setting, place the point of the compass anywhere on the penciled circle. Swing the compass one way and make a mark on the penciled circle.

Then place the point on the exact intersection of the first mark and the drawn circle, and make your next mark.

Continue around the circle in this manner. When you're finished, you'll have six marks, equally spaced on the circle you first drew.

NOW, USING A ruler or straight edge and a pencil, connect each two adjacent marks all the way around. You'll find that you have drawn a true hexagon — a geometric figure with six equal sides.

If you're dividing a circle into three equal parts — as for copying an Imari saucer or plate — you would draw from one mark to the exact center of the circle. Then skip the next mark and draw from the next to the center.

Continue like this and you will have divided your circle equally into three parts.

Begin blocking in your design, then finish and trace it onto needlepoint canvas for painting.

Overdentures new approach

Technique can avoid false teeth

by HORTENSE MYERS

For millions of Americans, the traumatic day when they need a full set of false teeth can be delayed, perhaps even avoided, by the use of overdentures.

This new approach was described by Dr. Frank B. Trice, president of the American Association of Endodontists, in an interview. An endodontist is a specialist in treating the pulp of teeth, the blood and nerve-filled core of the crown and roots. Endodontics was recognized as a separate dental specialty in 1965.

The Houston dentist said about 20 million Americans are toothless, and another 10 million have lost all their teeth in their upper or lower arches. The facial contours of traditional denture, or false teeth, wearers sometimes change as the gum and bone gradually resorb, or erode, and the dentures must be refitted periodically.

OVERDENTURES are supported by natural teeth Trice said, so facial contours remain the same. The underlying bone does not erode extensively. He said other advantages include greater stability and better function than conventional dentures.

He added that the overdenture technique can be performed by a dentist in general practice alone or in consultation with an endodontist.

Schools in which the new approach was researched and is being taught include the Indiana University School of Dentistry.

"Possibly 75 per cent could be treated with overdenture if seen at the proper time for treatment," says Dr. Floyd Hale, an Indianapolis dentist and university faculty member. He said that time should be determined by the regular dentist and the specialist.

"THIS IS A team effort to consider the whole medical aspect of the patient. We are trying to educate the public that there is more to this than just having your teeth pulled out and dentures put in."

Overdentures are fitted over the roots of healthy teeth on which root canal work has been done.

"We are preserving a lot of tooth and tooth structure this way," Hale said. "It gives support," and psychologically it helps the patient. But it has to be done at the correct time. We work in conjunction with the endodontists on this. Overdentures stay in well because of getting live tissue support, and thus eliminates a lot of resorption of the bone. We get into more oral hygiene with the patient which is a beneficial side effect, but important."

Not everyone is a candidate for overdentures, Trice said. An overdenture patient must show a history of good oral hygiene because the teeth must be brushed regularly to prevent decay. He also said persons over 75 years old may not want to pay the several hundred dollars extra cost of overdentures, compared to regular dentures.

Happenings

Travel wear on the runway for St. Mary's

St. Mary's Woman's Club of Des Plaines will sponsor a fashion show, "Champagne Flight into Fashions," at 8 Friday night in the parish auditorium, Center Street and Prairie Avenue.

Members of American Airlines Kiwi Association will model "travel threads" for all occasions from The Hawaiian Shop of Evanston.

Champagne, hors d'oeuvres and coffee are included in the price of $250. Tables can be reserved by calling 824-5434 or 824-5943.

Games party, penny social

A games party and penny social sponsored by Des Plaines Women of the Moose has been set for Thursday, March 31, at 8 p.m. in the Moose Hall, 205 River Road, Des Plaines.

Guests are invited. Donation is $1.

Trim and tone to body rhythm

"Body Rhythm," a creative exercise program designed to trim and tone the body while increasing endurance and stamina, will be offered at Recreation Park, Arlington Heights, beginning Monday, April 18.

Lively exercises are choreographed to all types of music, and since it is a repeat program, both beginning and advanced classes are planned. Sessions are scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings over an eight-week period.

Those wishing information may call 255-8850 between 1 and 5 p.m.

Booklet tells how to remove stains

Need help getting stains out of fabrics?

A newly revised booklet from the federal Consumer Information Center at Pueblo, Colo., contains instructions for removal of more than 150 common stains and lists equipment and supplies needed.

Before starting, the book recommends reading the permanent care label now required on fabrics sold by the yard or made into products. It will tell you what you can and cannot do without more damage to the stained fabric.

Single copies of the booklet, "Removing Stains from Fabrics," are 40 cents from Consumer Information Center, Dept. 102E, Pueblo, Colo. 81006 (UPI).

Deanna Sclar shows off her car-buretor as proudly as some women show off their diamonds.

And why not? Ms. Sclar not only puts carburetors into working order, but she also changes spark plugs, does tube jobs, flushes cooling systems and changes flat tires.

She says anyone can learn how to do simple repairs and preventive maintenance on an automobile and she's written a book, "Auto Repair for Dummies" (McGraw-Hill $7.95) to prove it. She said it is not primarily for women.

Car owners "... should learn how to flush the cooling system, be aware that the oil has to be changed," Ms. Sclar said in an interview. "Know how to tune the car, install spark plugs, new air and fuel filters, etc."

"PEOPLE should also know how to change a flat tire and to diagnose some problems."

The author, a petite woman in her 30s, said she was 25 when she learned to drive, but has always been crazy about cars.

She enrolled in a high school auto repair course after moving to southern California.

"I fell in love with the beautiful logic with which cars are designed," Ms. Sclar said. "It made such sense. Auto makers do the simplest things because it's cheaper. I found it fun to work on my car and found out how cheap it was to do my own repairs."

She said eight spark plugs, sale-priced for $4.80 to $6 would cost up to $14 for plugs and labor if a mechanic installed them. An oil change and a new oil filter installed by a mechanic would cost up to $20, compared with $4 to $6.50 self-installed.

"I ALWAYS assumed that women got ripped off the most by mechanics. Statistically they do, because they bring in most of the cars."

"But from talking to mechanics, the guys who really get ripped off are the 'closet dummies' who go into a garage with a super macho attitude and pretend to know what they are doing. And also the people who come with cars that they have completely run down."

She suggests car owners learn enough to give mechanics a coherent description of their automotive problems. She encourages them to watch and show interest in the mechanic's work. Ms. Sclar said most mechanics prefer people to do their own basic work.

"MECHANICS don't make any money off the little things," she said. "And when you do your own work you realize why mechanics charge so much for the complicated repairs. You know how time-consuming some things are."

After her first car maintenance course, Ms. Sclar bought a 1969 Mercedes 190SL roadster she is reconditioning.

But she still turns some jobs over to garage mechanics.

"I'm limited by the fact that I don't have a hoist. And I draw the line on lying on my back with oil dripping on my face. Basic maintenance is what I'm after."

Tips to assure safe driving at night

Thirteen can be a lucky number for women motorists who travel at night. They'll have safer, more trouble-free trips if they follow these precautions compiled by Jack Morton of the Service and Parts Sales Division of Chrysler Corporation.

• Always lock your doors, both when you're away from your car and driving.

• Travel with your fuel tank at least half full so that you won't run out of gas.

• Park under a light in a shopping center parking area or on the street.

• Approach your car from an angle which allows you to check underneath it for waiting assailants.

• Check the inside of your car before unlocking the door. Someone with a passkey may have gained entrance and be waiting for you.

• Tell someone at home your estimated time of arrival so that if you're later than you planned, he or she can check your travel route and/or alert the authorities.

• Plan alternate routes in case of traffic or weather tie-up. Drive these routes during daylight if possible so that your alternate route won't be in unfamiliar neighborhoods.

• Drive in the center lane when possible, avoiding the outside or shoulder lanes where trouble can occur more easily.

• Listen to your radio (or CB) for traffic conditions.

• Use your flashers at the first sign of trouble, even while you're still driving in the traffic lanes.

• Carry handkerchief, flashers, or some means to alert traffic you're disabled, and learn to raise the hood of your vehicle to signal trouble.

• Remain in your car with your windows closed and doors locked until a wrecker, police car, or other safety vehicle approaches to help.

• Keep your car properly maintained and in good running condition. Check the fluid levels (gasoline, transmission and brake fluids, engine oil, wiper fluid, and water in battery) frequently. Make sure your windshield blades and headlights work properly, the heating and defrosting systems are operating to keep the windows clear, and the tires have correct pressure and enough tread to provide traction on slippery surfaces.

Morton says that, of course, these 13 thoughtful travel tips apply to men as well as women motorists and to daytime as well as after-dark trips.

New push-pins will not rust

New stainless steel push-pins with aluminum heads have been developed in response to greater demand for these products in the home, to use in wet-blocking needlework or woolen garments and fabrics where rust-marks would be a problem.

Push-pins traditionally have been used for office, school and home bulletin boards where rust is not a factor. The new type, identified by a large S on the head, withstands repeated ex-posure to moisture and liquids without corrosive effect, says the manufacturer.

They are recommended also for use in embroidery, Macrame, tie-dying and batik work; for stretching canvas, mounting delicate specimens and models and labeling houseplants.

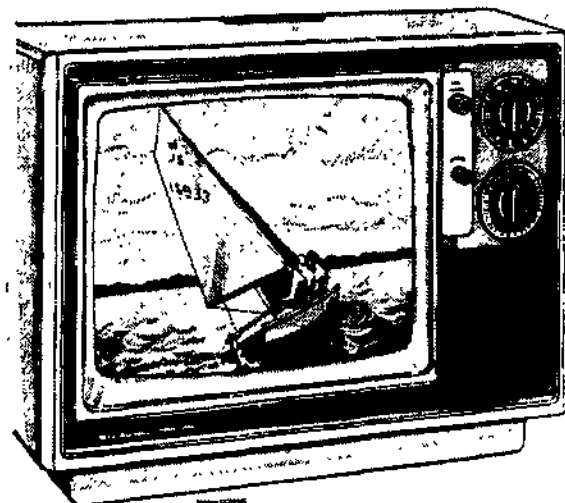

The new type will be sold in packages of 20 pins and in boxes of 100. (Moore Push-Pin)

Singles schuss to the bar for sport with opposite sex

by United Press International

Ski instructors, ski patrol, lift operators, lodge workers, they admit it. They are fascinated by them.

The ones who come not to ski.

They have watched them every season. But now, a check of ski areas coast to coast indicates their numbers are rapidly growing. Many swinging singles — and some not so single — have discovered ski lodges are an alternative to urban singles bars.

"Oh yes, we get them," said Barbara Harrison at New Jersey's Vernon Valley-Great Gorge, only 50 miles from Manhattan. "We call it skiing the bar."

"WE REFER TO them as chalet skiers," said Fred Cimino, who runs Alpine Valley in southeast Wisconsin. "They come to meet people of the opposite sex. We've got dancing, a lot of disco and some live entertainment."

"Of course we're glad to have their business. We encourage it."

But decorum is maintained, he said. "No rowdiness. Why, I'd even let my daughter come to our bar."

At Alpine Meadows near Lake Tahoe, Calif., the ski school instructors call them "whis-skiers."

"Being a whis-skier can be dangerous," said one of the bronzed and blond young men. "Would you believe a broken ankle from falling off a bar stool during the Rose Bowl game?"

AT NEW HAMPSHIRE'S Waterville Valley, Bill Rathman says, "A very pretty woman came to the ticket window the other day. 'How's the skiing?' she says. 'Great,' I say. 'How much?' she asks. '$12.' 'Can I have one?' 'Sure.' 'Now,' she says, 'Where's the fireplace!'"

Rathman said, although the woman's ski outfit was impeccable, she was one of those who never even considered actually skiing.

But at Boyne Mountain in northern Michigan, Howard Erickson says, "Most people come here to really ski. The real question is, how much time they devote to skiing versus the time they devote to indoor activities."

AT MAMMOTH MOUNTAIN in the High Sierras, 300 miles north of Los Angeles, Pam, a secretary deft at bypassing whis-skiers' passes, defines them:

"Those just-too-suave guys that come in pairs; that flaunt their this-year's ski wear and whom anyone in sight with the not-yet-scratched skis they sport on their shoulders."

"Those are the ones I look out for," she says, herself a serious skier just married to a ski patrolman.

"THEY DON'T watch where they're going. They're too busy checking out the lift lines for good looking women who are riding (the chair lift) single."

All across the nation the cry is, "Singles, anyone?"

It's all perfectly proper, of course. Doubling up keeps the waiting down. Many areas insist singles pair up — when boarding the lifts.

"I mean," said Erickson, "would you rather ride up a chair lift with a young blonde you might get to see later that night at the bar? Or would you rather ride up with some kid or your grandma?"

"BESIDES, IT'S a convenient place to ask for a date. They can say no, but they can't walk away from you."

"Hell," said Erickson, "that's what skiing is all about."

"Guys in their 20s and 30s come to Boyne, women the same age bracket. They all have the same thing in mind. They want to ski and then find someone to go to bed with."

"We don't necessarily encourage it. It's just that skiing is a very romantic sport."

PAM FROM MAMMOTH, a former ticket taker, said she once set up her boyfriend — now her husband — by yelling to the lift line, "This gorgeous guy wants to know if anyone is riding single."

Michelle, who drove the 630-mile roundtrip each weekend to "ski," delightedly obliged.

"That's the last time I did that," says Pam.

While other areas seek the swinging singles action, Bob Harris, at Sugar Loaf Village in Michigan, said his was one of the more family-oriented resorts which definitely do not encourage such goings-on.

"THERE ARE STILL Victorians in this world, if you know what I mean."

Orville Slutzky, proprietor of New York's Hunter Mountain, deep in the heart of the borscht belt, said times have changed.

"The gung ho skier of yesterday is gone. Today we have the more recreational skier. Anyway, most of them now aren't in good enough condition to ski all day."

"Your skier, he takes time out for a cocktail . . . eat . . . relax."

And besides, says Slutzky, his bar is a better place to meet the opposite sex than those Manhattan singles joints.

"SKIERS HAVE something to talk about — even if it's just equipment or jacket patches. And it doesn't always have to be with the opposite sex."

"There's something about skiing that just makes everyone more outgoing," he said.

Why, three couples even returned to get married on his slopes, he said.

In Wisconsin, Carmelo Oliva, who runs Rib Mountain, said what he calls "socializers" make up "maybe 10 per cent of our business."

"OUR BAR IS full of them. There seems to be more and more nonskiers every day."

The nonskier percentage is a much higher one-third at Pennsylvania's Seven Springs, says Herman Dupre, who also had something to say about ski lodge mixing as against other places.

"They know people they meet at a ski resort are people of substance."

You need a few bucks in your pocket just to get off the (Pennsylvania) Turnpike."

Close look at 10 who left priesthood

There is loneliness, restlessness and frustration for many Roman Catholic priests.

Some find a way of coping with the trials of priesthood that are prompted by the church's strict laws concerning celibacy and challenge of authority.

And there are some who don't.

"Once a Priest" is a locally produced WBBM-TV profile of the priesthood. The prime time documentary at 9 p.m. on Channel 2 is a close-up of 10 priests who were members of the class of 1957 at Mundelein Seminary.

FIVE OF THEM have chosen to leave the priesthood.

The special is an overdue examination of the Roman Catholic clergy and their conflicts with the church.

But it seems there is too much crammed into the hour program. We barely are introduced to the individuals and their backgrounds, we barely get a flavor for their struggles before we are told about where they are today.

It might have been more effective had producer-director Scott Craig limited his interviews to fewer priests and ex-priests to make the program seem less jumbled and superficial.

MUCH OF THE FILM is comprised of close-up interviews with the individuals, sprinkled with scenes of them each at their jobs and at home, and yellowing pictures of them 20 years ago before ordination.

The "talking heads" don't make for interesting viewing, but the contents of the show are what will set people thinking.

We discover that many priests left the ministry because of the celibacy restrictions of the church. They did not want to live alone, so they chose to marry and take on other work as teachers or businessmen.

One of the graduating members of the Mundelein Seminary class that ironically called itself "The Wanderers" has even become a millionaire merchant and the owner of several Midas Muffler franchises.

SOME LEFT BECAUSE changes in the church were not coming fast enough. Others could not bear the pressures of dealing with deteriorating neighborhoods and an exhausting, futile battle with church authority.

They had gone through scrutinizing education at the Midwest seminary, the documentary feature points out. They were forbidden to communicate with the outside world during their studies, and after being ordained were thrust out into a world violent with civil rights and the Cold War.

Each priest seemed to do his part for the church. One took on the challenges of a poor, black parish on Chicago's South Side; another worked to defend the rights of his black parishioners by marching with Martin Luther King in Selma; another worked with orphaned boys and formed the Assn. of Chicago Priests while still another rebuilt a church devastated by fire, bringing his parish closer together.

Each made his religious contribution, and then came to the crossroads in his life, deciding whether to stay or leave the priesthood.

THE SUBJECT MATTER of this special is important when you consider that of the 58,000 priests in 1967 in the United States, 10,000 no longer serve. The country's seminary enrollment has dropped from 50,000 in 1965 to 18,000 in 1975.

The firm of Foote, Cone and Belding is even helping to assemble seven 30-second television advertisements for the Roman Catholic Church to solicit young men interested in the priesthood. They will air this spring on 32 stations across the country.

"Everybody knows about the crisis the church is facing, but what about the priests?" said Scott Craig, who has had a long career of making prime-time documentaries in Chicago.

LAUREN HUTTON
IN THE
"Rhinemann Exchange"

"I'm glad the priests we interviewed were as open as they were. It gives the viewer a very real feeling for their problems," he said. "The show isn't out to solve any problem, it's just out to maybe help a few more people understand."

HIGHLIGHTS:

• The CBS "March Magazine" takes a look at the success of Lina Wertmuller, first woman to receive an Oscar nomination for best director, and child pianist Ana Maria Vera at 9 a.m. on Channel 2.

• The conclusion of the "Rhinemann Exchange" on Channel 5 at 8 p.m. should be interesting as foreign agents give it one last try to stop the transfer of U.S. industrial diamonds from here David played by Stephen Collins. Lauren Hutton also stars in the television novel.

• Channel 9 presents "Ten From Your Show of Shows," recalling the vintage years of television comedy at 8 p.m.

• "TV Looks at the Oscars" is a very entertaining behind-the-scenes look at how actors and actresses prepare for their big night. It's done through the eyes of last year's Oscar nominees and winners on Channel 11 at 8 p.m.

• Comedian Alan King takes a look at "The Pleasures of Rome." His 90 minute entertainment tour of the Eternal City airs on Channel 7 at 10:30 p.m.

• Ratings for the week ending March 20 are interesting. Of the top 10 shows, "M*A*S*H" was number one because of Hot Lip's wedding. "Happy Days" was in second place, but it's always in the top 10. "The Waltons" came in third and "Hawaii Five-O" came in eighth. Usually, neither show makes it in the top 10 but they ran last week against NBC's NCAA semi-final basketball games and ABC's Foreman-Young fight. It goes to show that all the viewers who didn't like sports watched the only other alternatives. The two Thursday night sporting events, by the way, did well and were rated in the top 20. The last episode of "Mary Tyler Moore" came in sixth. A lot of people would have bet it would have come in higher.

• Seems that Angie Dickinson and David Janssen are really getting their act together. They've just finished production on "A Sensitive, Passionate Man," a two-hour NBC movie that will air later this year in which Janssen portrays an alcoholic and Ms. Dickinson plays his wife who desperately tried to hold their marriage together. The duo is now looking for another movie script to sink their teeth into and are spending time both on and off the screen together, each separated from their respective mates.

Wooden cross burned at home of black stars

ENCINO, Calif. (UPI) — A wooden cross was set on fire on the front lawn of the home of the popular husband and wife singing team of Billy Davis and Marilyn McCoo early Tuesday. Police said they had no suspects in the burning.

The cross — eight feet tall and four feet across — apparently was brought to the home shortly before 2 a.m. and burned.

Davis and Miss McCoo, formerly of the Fifth Dimension singing group, were not at home at the time and were reported touring in Florida with their current hit, "You Don't Have to Be a Star."

Authorities said there had been a number of cross burnings in front of homes of black families in Los Angeles County last year, but few have been reported in recent months. No arrests have been made in any of the burnings.

Mitzi's 'class act' takes time, money and practice

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — When you've got class, flaunt it — but not too often.

That's more or less Mitzi Gaynor's creed. The classy singer-dancer stars in her annual special, "Mitzi ... Zings Into Spring" Tuesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 2 and won't be seen on the tube for another year except for a visit with Johnny Carson.

The infrequency of her television appearances is Mitzi's way of ensuring her "special" will be genuinely special. With few exceptions during the past nine years, she has limited herself to a single hour of TV exposure. As a result, her show has become an event, an electronic rite of spring.

THIS YEAR HER guests are Wayne Rogers and Roy Clark. Fifty-two of the show's 56 minutes are devoted to music.

"I stick to music and dancing because I'm not into sketches and a lot of dialogue," Mitzi explained. "Carol Burnett does sketches and other variety material beautifully. I prefer to leave the field to her."

"It takes a year's preparation to do our show from concept to final editing. Actually, we spend three weeks on the hoof in the rehearsal hall to get it ready for four days of taping."

"We give ourselves all the leeway possible and try not to leave anything to chance."

Mitzi refuses to appear on other musical shows because, "I don't think the guests are treated all that well."

"WEEKLY VARIETY shows are hurried and I like to take time to do things exactly right. I guess I wasn't cut out to be a guest performer."

"I like to do my own shows and a very rare special for someone else. I did a Perry Como special three years ago. It was a Christmas show and the other guest was Art Carney. The chemistry among the three of us worked very well."

Mitzi accepted Como's invitation, while spurning others, for several reasons. Como, like Mitzi, is a perfectionist who takes his time. Perhaps more importantly, Como paid Mitzi's price. She demands more money for guest shots than any performer in the business.

"Doing just one show a year wasn't a long range plan in the beginning," she said. "But now it's a way of life."

"We're very careful to hire the best people available. Bob Mackie has designed all my clothes since 1967. Now he also does Cher and Carol Burnett."

"MY HAIRDRESSER and wardrobe lady have been with me since 1961. And I have only one writer, Jerry Mayer, who has written for me a long, long time. Tony Charmoli does all my choreography."

Mitzi isn't using the editorial "we" when she talks about her shows. The "we" is really her husband, Jack Bean, who produces her television specials and concert shows.

ACTOR WAYNE Rogers joins Mitzi Gaynor in her special "Mitzi ... Zings Into Spring" at 9 p.m. today on Channel 2 — a salute of song, dance and sketches to the earth's season of rene-

Ingels gets ad stars in a twinkple

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — More and more stars are turning to television commercials to turn a buck, and the man largely responsible for luring them to this rich field is reformed comedian Marty Ingels.

Ingels, who starred in the "I'm Dickens, He's Fenster" situation comedy more than a dozen years ago, is called "the celebrity connection" — the guy to call when you need a star to pitch a product.

A beefy, red-haired man with a Brooklyn accent and a voice that sounds like a leaky steam valve, Ingels has never fully recovered from being a comic.

He speaks in an unending barrage of one-liners, putdowns, dialects and jokes. His humor masks a shrewd and inventive mind. He has become wealthy in the process of making fortunes for celebrities who do commercials.

"I'M A TALENT consultant for people looking for stars," Ingels says. "I'm a celebrity clearing house."

Increasingly, if a company or individual seeks a star to promote a product, cause or charity, the interested party pays Ingels a fee.

In the five years he's been in business, Ingels says he has brought $10 million collectively to some 150 celebrities.

"There's only one reason celebrities do commercials," he said. "They need the money. And there's no one you can't approach to do a commercial."

How about Robert Redford or Barbra Streisand?

"If someone asks for Redford, I tell them to get their act straightened out and bring their eyes down to earth," Ingels replies. "Some have the nerve to ask for Paul Newman at $2,500. He wouldn't do a commercial for 100 times that."

"No amount of money could get stars like him or Al Pacino or Dustin Hoffman to do a commercial. But Redford might do something for conservation. See?"

Hal and Mark make theatrical history together

by GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hal Holbrook has been playing Mark Twain for 23 years and now is so much into the role that you imagine he must wake up wondering whether he's Holbrook or Samuel Clemens.

So many people have seen him as Twain that it's a wonder that any audience can still muster up a belly laugh at the jokes or bleed with Jim over his daughter becoming deaf and dumb because of scarlet fever. But the magic still works, and the March 15 first-night audience at the Imperial Theatre reacted as enthusiastically as Clemens could wish.

One secret of Holbrook's success is his relaxed manner on stage, his sure sense of timing and his easy rapport with the audience. Another is the fact that no two shows are the same: He has something like 12 hours to material from which he selects bits as he goes along, depending on his own mood and that of the audience.

But the main secret is that Mark Twain was one of the funniest writers in history and Holbrook delivers the lines as if he were just thinking them up.

Who can resist: "Man is the Delty's favorite — apart from the horsefly . . ." "I wish I had the human race in the Ark again — with an augur . . ." "I don't know what moves a man to be a musician, in defiance of the will of God . . ."

Or the one about the anarchist who blew his brains out — and was sent to Congress?

Holbrook was in town only for two weeks, and now, instead of touring, will play the Stage Manager in a TV production of "Our Town."

Give blood, brothers.

It's so easy to give . . . yet so precious. Help someone else with the gift of life. Today.

"I'LL GIVE YOU an example. A big car rental outfit asked me to get John Wayne, Glenn Ford, Robert Mitchum, James Stewart or Charlton Heston to do a commercial for a half-million bucks.

"Two of them said yes, two said no and one is on the fence. The guys who said 'No! Never!' were Heston and Stewart. But that could change in the future."

"Greg Peck wouldn't do commercials for years. Now he's just done one for a lot of money for an insurance company."

"I get a lot of stars for charities and public service spots Wayne for cancer, Mitchum for the Job Corps, Roger Miller for leukemia."

"My biggest deal was a recent one involving three-quarters of a million bucks for Robert Wagner for three years of Timex commercials."

Ingels arranges small deals too. He finds stars who want to pick up a quick $5,000 for a cameo appearance in a blurb.

Many a celebrity will accept a particular commercial and refuse others.

"THERE ARE THREE reasons why stars won't do commercials," Ingels said. "First, nobody with $40 million is interested. Second, an unattractive product turns them off. Third, they want to know where the commercials is going to run."

"The least exposure, the better chance a celebrity will do it. Stars prefer commercials that run only in Europe."

"They also prefer prestige products — Rolls-Royce, perfume or an institutional company like TRW or a gas company. They don't like deodorants or feminine hygiene products."

Some stars are more in demand than others. At the moment Henry Winkler, who plays Fonzie in "Happy Days," is the hottest celebrity going.

"Everybody wants the Fonz," Ingels said. "He was offered a million dollars by an outfit that makes blue jeans — and turned it down. Farrah Fawcett, who signed for shampoo commercials before she hit it big, is now asking for a million dollars."

CHARITY organizations and public service groups, along with foreign corporations and even the White House, call Ingels these days when they have a message to get across and want a celebrity to deliver it.

"There's a communication gap between the big show business talent agencies and their clients."

"I'm not an agent. I don't work for the stars. I'm in business for the people who want to hire the stars."

And business, obviously, is brisk.

Actor Clint Walker stalks outdoors bigger than life

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Clint Walker, star of television's "Cheyenne" series 15 years ago, is stalking the wide open spaces again after a year and a half of movie inactivity.

His milieu consists of rugged peaks, broad valleys and sweeping horizons. Walker belongs outdoors like Mt. Rushmore does. At 6-foot-6 and 240 pounds, Clint looks cramped in any area defined by walls and ceiling.

It's not just his height and weight that lend grandeur to his stature. The breadth of the man's shoulders and the depth of his chest make him a landscape all his own.

Add to his awesome appearance the timbre of his base voice, not unlike a cascade of boulders on timpani, and one is indeed confronted by a unique specimen of homo sapiens.

HE IS PAUL Bunyan come to life. Amok in the woods he might be mistaken for a civilized Bigfoot. A hairless yett on a visit from the top of Everest, perhaps Petit he ain't.

It is no wonder then that Walker's new films smack of the great outdoors: "White Buffalo," "Snow Beast" (he does not play the title role), "Deadly Harvest" and "Baker's Hawk."

All four pictures were completed in the past six months after an 18-month layoff.

The big fellow took time out for lunch at a famous restaurant. He filled the doorway, then Lilliputian-nized the joint and everyone in it as he made his way to a table which shrunk to the dimensions of a collar button when he sat down.

He was a one-man crowd. "I don't know why there's been so much new activity for me," the giant rumbled gently. "But I'm grateful for it. I hadn't done a television show or a movie since 'Kodak.'"

IT IS NECESSARY to point out Clint played a man, not a Kodak bear in that unsuccessful series.

"We made 13 episodes of the show," he continued, "but they only broadcast four of them. I'll never know why. That's one of the reasons I've been steering clear of television."

Clint's last indoor movie was "Cry of the Wolf." Some of the sets were so small in comparison to the man they looked like part of his wardrobe.

"I feel at home outdoors," he said. "I have 40 acres of mountain land right here in Southern California and I'm going to build a house on the property. I hike a lot out there and I'm clearing the land myself. I like the big sky."

"THERE'S NO way I can be comfortable cooped up indoors. My house will have enormous rooms, massive beams, high ceilings and big rocks with heavy wrought iron decorations."

Asked why he had spent so much time unemployed, Clint drew an enormous breath, comparable to a gusting nor'wester.

"I had plenty of opportunity to make movies," he said. "But they were tasteless, immoral or downright dirty."

"There's no way I'm going to work in pictures like that. The world is in a lot of trouble these days because society is breaking down. Decadence and immorality are breaking down the rules men have lived by for centuries."

"I DON'T WANT to confuse young people who are frustrated enough as it is. They call some of these films sophisticated, but they're just glorified pornography."

"I agreed to work in three of these four films because they are family pictures. I might not have done 'White Buffalo' if I'd seen the script first. There's a lot of raunchy talk in it. But at least there aren't any four-letter words. 'Maybe I can't change the world, but I can control my contributions in movies. I don't mean to sound old-fashioned, but there's nothing prurish about good taste.'"

Clint went to a theater recently to see a popular movie with his wife. He stayed only long enough to hear a barrage of obscenities before making a quick exit.

One is disinclined to question Clint's point of view. Like many a giant, however, he is a gentle man who avoids physical confrontation for fear of hurting anyone.

His convictions are as strong as his views and, happily, equally benevolent.

Bolek vows to quit Jeco post if elected

Des Plaines Mayor Charles J. Bolek Wednesday promised to resign as president of Jeco Industries if he wins the April 19 election.

"If I'm elected I will resign as president of Jeco Industries, even though I have been working as a full-time mayor," Bolek said.

A Des Plaines ordinance requires the mayor to work full-time, but Bolek insists he is able to hold down both jobs at once. Jeco Industries, 1297 Redeker Road, manufactures aluminum window frames. he has been president of the company for about seven years.

BOLEK WAS elected mayor by the city council when Herbert H. Behrel retired in August 1976.

Since Bolek became mayor, he said, "My duties (at Jeco) have been very minimal. I've hired another person to do 95 per cent of the work."

"I'm working 50 to 60 hours a week at this job here," Bolek said.

Bolek said he has talked to people in a door-to-door campaign and asked them how they feel he is doing as mayor and none of them has objected to his job at Jeco.

"That question is never brought up. If it's a major issue, it's only a major issue with the candidates," he said.

BOLEK SAID he will resign to "clear the air" and remove all doubt he is not working full-time for the city.

Bolek's ties to Jeco came under fire two weeks ago when a telephone hook-up to the company was discovered in the mayor's office. That phone now has been removed.

At that time Bolek said he didn't think he should have to sever all of his business ties. "I have a business that requires protection of my investment," he said.

In the past two weeks, he has reconsidered his position, however, and decided to resign if he wins the election.

Day-care grants needed: Angell

Des Plaines mayoral candidate Lorraine E. Angell has called for the city to subsidize day-care centers and health care for children and senior citizens.

Mrs. Angell is the administrator of the nonprofit Angel Town Day-Care Center, 2320 Birch St., but she denied that the child-care proposals would benefit her personally. She said she would resign from Angel Town if she wins the election.

Mrs. Angell said if she wins the election, she will probably become a member of the six-person board of directors for the day care center, owned by Angel Town Inc.

She said there would be no conflict of interest if the city were to begin subsidizing day care centers for children and senior citizens after she resigns as the administrator.

Mrs. Angell said she would initiate immediate action to subsidize Des Plaines nursery schools and day-care centers if elected mayor April 19. She said the subsidies would be designed to lower tuition to child-care facilities for middle-income parents.

"THERE IS NO way parents can afford the tuition that day-care centers are charging," she said.

Mrs. Angell also proposed establishing a health-care clinic to provide routine checkups, inoculations and dental care for children under 13 and for senior citizens.

Fees would be charged on a sliding scale, based on the patient's ability to pay. She said it would be open to people with middle-incomes as well as low-incomes.

"The balance of the cost would be subsidized from the city's budget. It is possible that we may be able to obtain donation of professional services from doctors or interns at any one of the

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was (Continued on Page 3)

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alfred Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

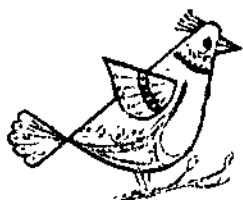

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

TIMOTHY KING

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnap-killings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkeley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying.

"We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kaibfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

PASSAGE OF NEW zoning laws in Prospect Heights could threaten Ben Solis' home-based construction business. The proposed laws place restrictions on the business and limit the number of animals homeowners can keep. The law has angered many residents.

Solis laments impact on his lifestyle

Country livin'—not under zone law

by DEBBE JONAK

Benedict Solis stared into his hand-built fireplace, which was crackling with the last few embers of a late morning fire.

He was worried. Outside, his ducks and hens huddled in their small red barn, out of the snow covering his neatly landscaped acre-and-a-half.

Solis, his wife and three children have raised small farm animals for almost a decade. And they have planted a garden with a corn patch every year.

Solis built his house at 509 Grego Ct. in the county so he could run his construction business from his home and his family could enjoy a country living.

But the country turned to city Jan. 31, 1976, when Prospect Heights was incorporated.

NOW SOLIS FEARS the new city's proposed zoning ordinance will change his and many of his neighbors' lives drastically.

All but three of the ducks and chickens would have to go. Three is the maximum number of animals permitted under the proposed law. The corn patch would violate plant height regulations.

But more importantly, the proposed zoning ordinance would force Solis to move his business from his home to a business site in another town — a change he said would cost him $15,000 annually.

"THIS WOULD FLATLY drive people out of town," Solis said, explaining incorporation campaigners promised residents could keep their home occupations if Prospect Heights became a city. Solis was an unsuccessful city council candidate.

Almost one in five Prospect Heights households have home businesses, Jack Cilligan, zoning commissioner, said at a recent public hearing on the ordinance.

The home business regulations are intended to retain the residential character of neighborhoods, Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said. Exposed equipment, large signs, large home classes and work buildings can compromise the atmosphere, he said.

Home operations for office work generally would not be in violation of the proposed regulations. Bases for tradesmen and small truckers, however, could face major changes, Solis said.

"FOR MANY OF THE tradesmen

this means making a living or not making a living," he said. "They have used their home property as their base of operation."

The proposed ordinance would force tradesmen to establish their base elsewhere, he said.

If the new law is adopted, a businessman could not store or deliver any material requiring use of a commercial vehicle.

For instance, Solis said he could not perform emergency repairs on a customer's door at home because he would need his pickup truck to get it here and back.

He could not store a load of lumber overnight for an early morning job. He also could not park his pickup truck in his driveway — it would have to be parked in the garage or hidden from view in some other way.

THE SMALL AMOUNT of work he performs in a storage building would have to stop. The proposed ordinance would not allow use of an accessory building for home businesses.

While the ordinance would cut into their businesses, it also would hurt residents' home life, Solis said.

"Many people in the area raise pet rabbits, chickens — I've even seen some bee hives," he said. "This is why most of the people have half-acre lots — so we can do more things on them . . .

"Some of the things we have done, probably did not concur with Cook County laws," he admitted. "However, they did not seem to enforce their codes. There seemed to be the thinking out here by small businessmen that it was OK."

Lax enforcement and less stringent laws are the factors that brought about the large number of home businesses in Prospect Heights, he said.

ALTHOUGH PROSPECT Heights' proposed laws differ little from the county's, he expressed fear the city will enforce them — if not this administration, then maybe the next.

The city will have to deal with violation complaints, he said, warning, "As soon as some neighbor has an ax to grind with another neighbor, it's a cute way to look into the ordinance for harassment or revenge."

Solis and his neighbors live together harmoniously. No one has complained about his business, his pets or his plantings, he said. And when a nearby residents' rabbit hops over to his door or when he awakens to the call of a distant rooster, he does not complain.

He enjoys it. And he wants to keep on enjoying it.

Dist. 63 slates meets to study better relations

by DICK DAHL

A series of meetings have been scheduled in East Maine Dist. 63 to discuss a plan to improve relations between the school board, management and teachers.

The Dist. 63 Board Tuesday night reviewed a management study calling relations between the three groups "highly strained" and "beginning to damage educational effectiveness."

The report was compiled by Peter Warner Associates, a Chicago-based management consultant firm.

THE BOARD scheduled the meetings after discussing the Warner plan.

The board will meet with the district's administrative advisory committee next Thursday and with the faculty advisory committee at a later date, possibly April 5.

A public meeting has been scheduled for 8 p.m. April 11 at Apollo Junior High School, 10100 Dee Rd., Des Plaines.

Supt. G. Allan Gogo said Wednesday that extra copies of the 50-page report are being made for distribution to the 11 schools in Dist. 63. Copies also will be sent to each parent-teacher association and to the faculty union.

AMONG THE findings and recommendations of the report are:

- Dist. 63 is "basically healthy educationally and relatively strong managerially."

- The Dist. 63 educational program "is quite similar from school to school while communities that are being served are, in some cases, markedly different."

- "Dist. 63 has only a limited amount of information, evidence and observation with respect to the actual educational performance by students and therefore of the system."

- Compensation for management and noncertificated personnel needs to be improved. Teacher personnel policies also need to be improved.

- Special education and personnel are operating under to heavy workloads.

City day-care grants urged by Mrs. Angell

several nearby hospitals," she said. She has no estimate on how much the subsidized programs would cost the city.

MRS. ANGELL said she is not a one-issue candidate, however, citing other programs she is supporting.

"I don't want people to think I'm just a day-care candidate," she said. Mrs. Angell's platform calls for:

- Property tax relief: Mrs. Angell said she will study ways property taxes can be lowered for homeowners, including placing a greater burden on industry to support services.

- Citizens' Committees: Three committees made up of senior citizens, high school students and average citizens should be organized to meet twice monthly with the mayor to voice complaints.

- Railroad Crossings: Overpasses across the tracks at Thacker Street, Algonquin Road, and Oakton Street should be built.

- Free bus service: free mini-bus service running regular routes to and from every part of the town should be provided by the city.

Mrs. Angell is one of seven candidates seeking the mayor's post. Others are Mayor Charles J. Bolek, Vernon Eckland, David Wolf, Herbert Volberding, Christian Figge and Walter Cloutier.

- Teacher participation in the district's management process has been "substantially reduced" by the virtual elimination of department heads when their stipends were ended last year as a money-saving measure. The report's author, Fredric H. Genck, called it "an unfortunate move that should be corrected at the earliest opportunity."

- Teacher-board relations have been particularly strained because of "adversarial and even combative relations that seem often to arise out of the early stages of the negotiation process."

- "Teachers have grown to feel an absence of respect for themselves as professionals."

- Enrollment, financial and facilities planning has been satisfactory.

- The board and Gogo should improve their relationship. The report did not elaborate on what is wrong with the relationship.

The report recommends creation of a steering committee of board members, administrators, teachers and staff over the next four months, along with "supplementary staff" provided by Peter Warner Associates for $7,200.

The steering committee would focus on improving teacher relations with the board and administration, the report says.

GENCK ALSO recommended that the inclusion of teachers and staff in decision-making should be continued.

Supt. Gogo said, "Many of the ideas in the report are beyond the cutting edge. You don't find these kind of things in existence in any organization."

"What needs to be spelled out are the authority lines and the functional communication lines — who's going to be accountable to the people," Gogo said.

"We asked for a management audit and we got one," board member Jeanne Oestreich said. "But the report went beyond an audit to propose a procedure and policy to strengthen areas of weakness. I'm encouraged with the suggestions that were made."

"I LIKE THE IDEA of stressing the desire for cooperation to resolve the problems we have," said Lenora Page, assistant superintendent for instruction.

Board member Philip Deckowitz said, however, that he was dissatisfied with the $4,800 report and did not believe the district got its money's worth.

Board Pres. Larry Reiss said the management audit was commissioned last fall because "the board wanted an overview of the district — its strengths and weaknesses."

Cuts may alter Dist. 26 program

by HOLLY HANSON

The educational program in River Trails Dist. 26 may have to be drastically overhauled if recommended budget cuts are carried out, school principals say.

They said Wednesday the proposed budget cuts involving teachers will wipe out completely some junior high programs and limit programs in the elementary schools.

At a board of education meeting Tuesday, Supt. John Fridlund recommended $247,000 in cuts, along with an increase in some fees, as ways to offset deficits totaling $1.1 million projected for the 1978-79 and 1979-80 school years.

Fridlund also has recommended calling for a second referendum to increase taxes, considering consolidation with a neighboring district and selling Park View School, 805 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, which the board closed last year because of declining enrollment.

DIST 26 AND neighboring Mount Prospect Dist. 57 last year explored a possible merger, but took no action.

Dist. 26 voters Saturday defeated a referendum which called for a tax increase of 74 cents per $100 of assessed valuation in the education fund.

Voters Saturday defeated a tax hike referendum calling for an increase in the district's education fund of 74 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The increase would have allowed the board to maintain current programs and keep a balanced budget.

Cuts recommended at the junior high level include dropping one French teacher, one typing teacher and two reading teachers. These cuts would completely eliminate those programs, said Eugene Kukla, principal at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

"I'm mostly saddened by the cut in reading teachers," he said. "This is an area here that shouldn't go overlooked."

Kukla said the proposed elimination of after school activities, including athletics and clubs, would mean students would have to be charged participation fees so supervising teachers could receive "extra duty" pay.

Making the proposed budget cuts would completely alter the River Trails program, Kukla said.

"I really don't see what else they could cut," he said. "We would obviously have to change the entire system, and I feel kids would be short changed."

At the elementary level, recommended cuts would eliminate only the gifted child program, said Matthew Meisterheim, principal at Euclid School, 1211 Wheeling Rd., Mount Prospect.

But elementary children also would receive less instruction in music, physical education and art because of the proposed cutback of teachers in those areas, he said.

"What you'd end up with is the teacher at your building a certain number of periods each week," he said. "At Euclid, we've had a full-time music teacher for a number of years, but now we might have to get by with one only three days."

RAISING THE AVERAGE class size from 26 to 27 has been proposed as a way to restore one or more programs, but Meisterheim said the move would make little difference, because Dist. 26 is so small. There are about 4,800 students in Dist. 26.

"We would have to raise it by more than one to make a difference, he said.

Residents urge merger study

Combining River Trails Dist. 26 with a neighboring district of similar size is a financial option board of education members should strongly consider, say some residents who oppose a tax hike.

At Tuesday's board meeting, attended by about 60 persons, district residents George Papp and Jim Landon urged the board to consider consolidation, holding school for 12 months a year instead of nine and raising average class size from 26 to 35 children, as alternatives to a tax increase.

Dist. 26 and neighboring Mount Prospect Dist. 57 last year began exploring a possible merger but no action was taken.

Landon asked the board whether it had proof that children in classes of 35 learn less than those in classes of 26.

"Our basic philosophy is to promote individualization. We feel all children are unique beings," Board Pres.

Teachers' union Pres. George Chase said teachers are upset and concerned about the proposed cutbacks, but said they have not met to decide what action to take.

"There's not a whole heck of a lot we can do," he said.

Morale among teachers is low, Chase said, because no one "is real sure when the other shoe will drop."

RAISING AVERAGE class size to restore a reduced program is not an attractive option to teachers, he said.

"You cut programs by raising class size," he said. Chase said teachers hope to see passage of a second referendum.

"If it doesn't pass, there will be tremendous changes in the program and a dramatic effect on our schools," he said. "Residents won't have good schools unless they support them."

Fridlund said no date has been set for the board to act on his recommendations, but an ad hoc finance committee is being formed to discuss budget options and will meet next week.

Emergency rule asked on unit

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Cook County Circuit Court Judge George Schaller two weeks ago denied Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit.

According to current state law, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

The unit district would combine 21 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

5 polling places for unit vote set

Five polling places will be used in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 for the April 9 unit school district referendum despite residents' requests for more to accommodate an anticipated heavy voter turnout.

Dist. 59 officials say they would have more polling places if they could, but Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick's office already has decided on five polling places for the referendum.

Officials in Martwick's office say they were told by Dist. 59 officials that five polling places have been adequate in the past.

"FIVE WAS the recommendation we got when we queried them and now at this late date we can't make changes," Frank Bristow, administrative assistant in Martwick's office, said. "The polling places already have been published."

If great problems are foreseen because of an extraordinary voter turnout, additional judges will be provided, Frank Sullivan, assistant superintendent in Martwick's office, said.

"Martwick's office has made up its mind to go with five precincts and there isn't much we can do about it," Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said. "Martwick is running the election, not Dist. 59."

Board member Gerald Smiley said he hoped provisions would be made ahead of time to apportion more voting booths to the northern area of the district where he expects the heaviest voter turnout.

The five polling places are Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village; Holmes Junior High School, 1900 W. Lonsquist Blvd., Mount Prospect; Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village; and Friendship Junior High School, 550 Elizabeth Ln., Des Plaines.

2 hurt in separate car accidents

A Hanover Park resident and a Chicagoan received minor injuries Wednesday morning in two unrelated auto accidents in Arlington Heights, police said.

Woman 'fair' after two-car collision

A Park Ridge woman was in fair to good condition Wednesday at Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, following a two-car collision at the intersection of River and Central roads in Des Plaines.

Elizabeth A. Kaplinski, 23, of 17 S. Home Ave., Park Ridge and 53-year-old Lucille A. Hale, 1444 Quaker Ln., Wheeling, received minor injuries Tuesday night when the Kaplinski auto, southbound on River Road, hit the Hale car, turning from northbound River Road onto Central Road.

Ms. Hale was ticketed by Des Plaines police for failure to yield while making a left turn. She is scheduled to appear in the Des Plaines branch of the Cook County Circuit Court April 18.

Ms. Hale was treated and released at Holy Family Hospital.

The accident occurred in Arlington Heights Road 400 feet south of Seegers Road, police said. Police ticketed Ms. Loveless for failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Police said Kathleen A. Jurgens, 23, of Chicago injured her left elbow and right knee at 6:53 a.m. Wednesday when the car she was driving collided with a car driven by Robert C. Ballmaier, 19, of 1516 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Police ticketed Ballmaier for failure to yield the right-of-way at the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and Rockwell Street.

Ms. Loveless and Ms. Jurgens were taken by Arlington Heights firefighters to Northwest Community Hospital, where they were treated and released Wednesday.

Flight attendant job fits today's lifestyle

Many trainees are now older, male, married and looking for a career

by LYNN ASINOF

Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 28-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

"The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

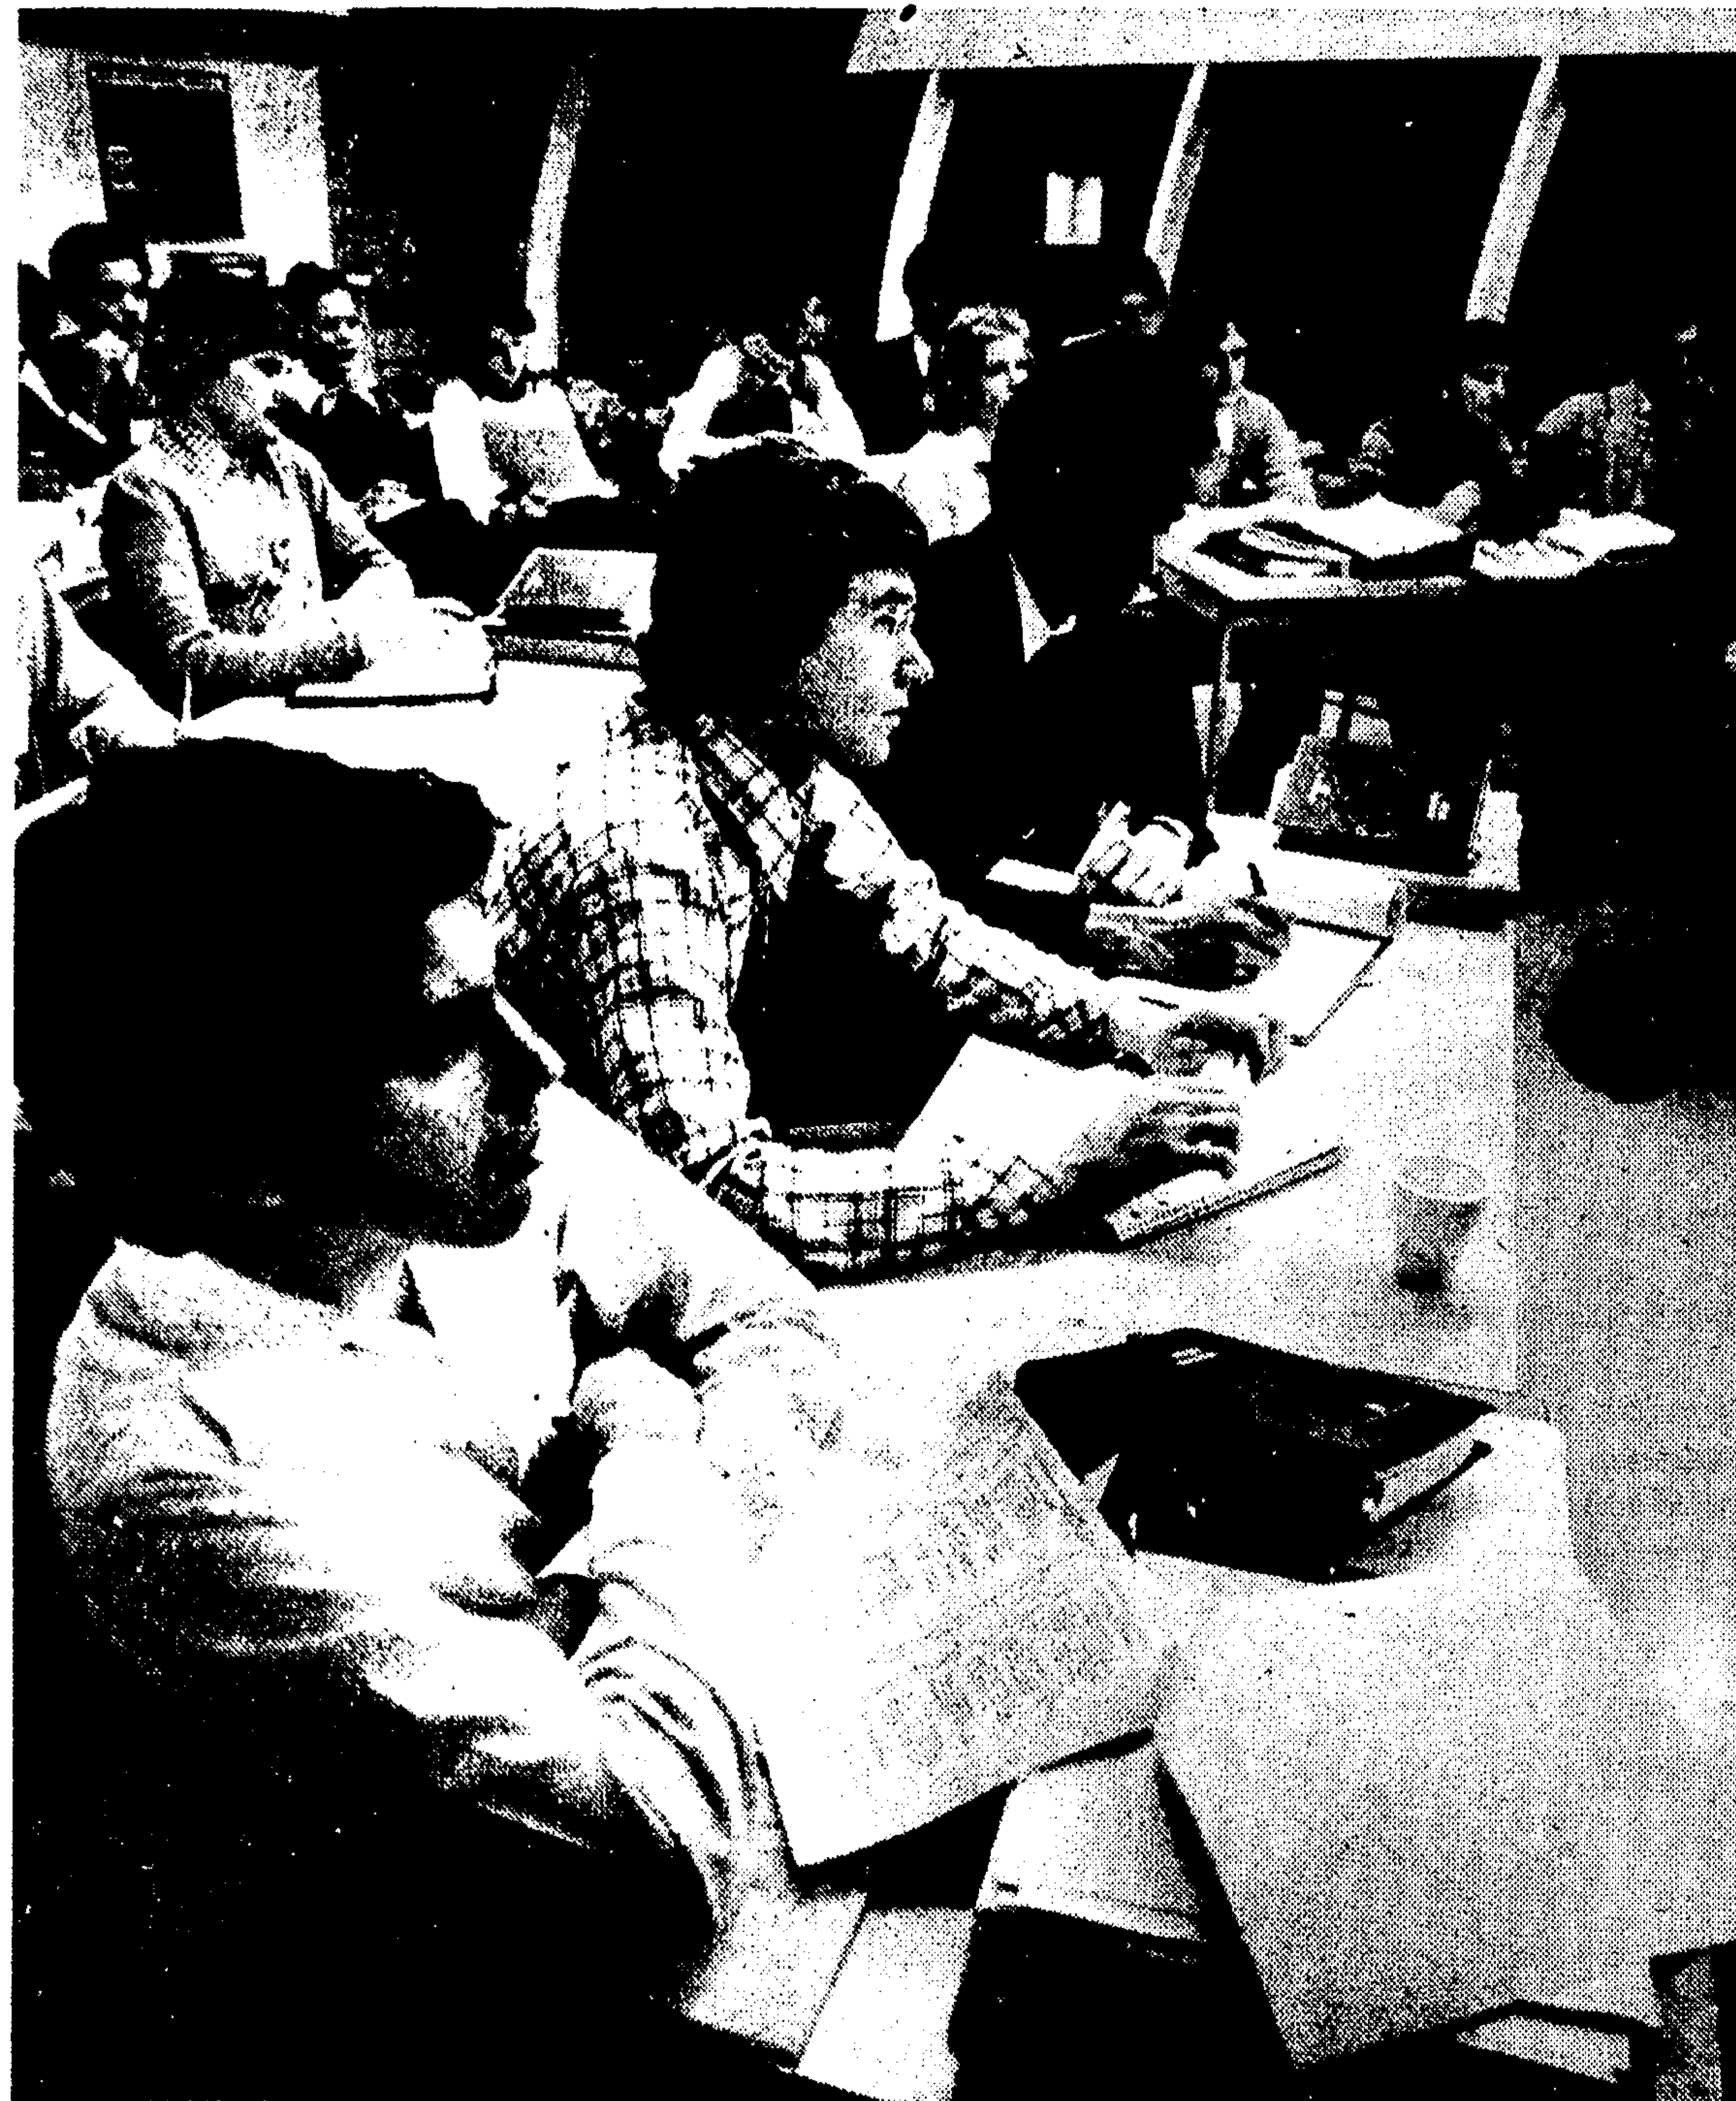

THAT'S WHY LOTS of people apply for training but few people quit the job. Only 378 of United's 8,000 flight attendants left last year. "We are now down to training pretty much for attrition," Buening said.

That, however, is an improvement over the past few years when no one was trained. United stopped training for about 2½ years when work force changes and the energy crunch left the airline with an oversupply of attendants.

This spring is the second class to go through since that freeze, and Buening said he thinks training will become "a very, very regular thing."

Training takes place in the spring at United because the heavy flying season is during the summer. This year the classes started in February and will run through June.

It's a once a year thing for United, but for many it's a lot more than that. It's a whole new way of life.

FLIGHT ATTENDANTS are no longer just young single women, as evidenced by the current training class at United Airlines training center in Elk Grove Township. The average age of attendants is now 26 or 27, nearly 10 per cent are men, and some 25 per cent are married.

National Wildlife Week

Cleanup of waterways urged

"We all need clean water" is the theme for the 40th annual observance of National Wildlife Week, which ends Saturday.

More than 10 million persons are expected to participate in the week's activities under the chairmanship of actor Robert Redford, said G. Ray Arnett, president of the National Wildlife Federation.

"We couldn't have picked a more appropriate year to focus the country's attention on the importance of having a clean and plentiful water supply," Arnett said.

"OUR WATER supply is threatened on many fronts, and it also happens to be a year in which Congress must renew its commitment to a nationwide clean-up of our waterways."

Arnett referred to the congressional votes to fund sewage treatment facilities and other pollution controls called for in the 1972 amendments to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. The amendments set a timetable to make all the nation's waters "fishable and swimmable" by 1983, ending all discharges of pollutants by 1985.

The amendments also set a July 1 deadline for improvements in municipal and industrial wastes discharged into navigable waters. Most industrial polluters will meet the deadline, but many municipalities are far behind schedule. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency records show.

"Because we see a lot of water, many people take it for granted," Arnett said. "But with demand increasing continually, our supply of usable water isn't all that abundant. For one thing, 99 per cent of the earth's water is either salt water or locked in polar ice. We have got to teach millions of people to apply the conservation ethic to water — don't waste it, don't pollute it. Our survival depends on it."

Rex is coming home to U.S. soil

VIRGINIA CAPLING after her husband's body was released by Vietnam: "I just try to believe this is a beginning of an accounting."

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND the remains of 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubts that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she hears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners were released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over.

"What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering," Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

Patricia Columbo

Frank DeLuca

Attorneys ask separate trial for Columbo

Defense attorneys for accused murderess Patricia Columbo are expected to request separate trials for her and Frank DeLuca at a court hearing Tuesday.

William Swano, assistant Cook County Public Defender for Miss Columbo, said among the motions he likely will submit in Cook County Circuit Court will be one requesting a separate trial for his client April 4.

Swano Wednesday refused to confirm or deny earlier reports that a separate trial for Miss Columbo will be requested so that she may testify as a defense witness at DeLuca's murder trial.

MICHAEL J. TOOMING, DeLuca's defense attorney, Wednesday said he has not decided whether he also will request a separate trial for his client.

The motions will be heard by Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham at the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

The Columbo-DeLuca case is in its final pretrial hearings, preparing for the April 4 trial in Pincham's courtroom.

Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 39, are charged in the May 4, 1976, murders of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca appeared in court Tuesday morning, where Pincham denied a defense motion for a bill of particulars to be turned over by prosecutors of the Cook County state's attorney's office.

THE BILL OF particulars would have enumerated dates and times of the crimes for which Miss Columbo and DeLuca are accused.

Still pending are defense motions to suppress statements collected by police from the defendants and requests to quash the defendants' arrests and suppress evidence.

Also pending in the Illinois Supreme Court is an appeal filed by prosecutors of a refusal by Pincham to order Miss Columbo and DeLuca to produce handwriting and blood samples.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, are collecting clippings of newspaper reports about the case to determine whether pretrial publicity has jeopardized Miss Columbo's and DeLuca's right to a fair trial.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each in the Cook County Jail, Chicago.

Ex-con tied to Ariz. fraud

by United Press International
In the eleventh copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said Ned Warren Sr., an ex-convict who arrived in Arizona in 1961, has been a dominant figure in Arizona's land boom and has participated in various land frauds.

The IRE article said:
• As puppet master of a maze of corporations, Warren refined land fraud into a multimillion dollar industry that spawned an army of imitators. He proved to have a shrewd eye for making friends, especially rising political stars, sometimes cutting them in on land deals.

• When real estate commissioner J. Fred Talley resigned under fire, Arizonans learned the sordid side of the land fraud business — the corruption of public officials with payoffs and bribes. Bribers apparently had little trouble finding takers.

• One source who parted with Talley, Warren and Associates said: "Anybody that could be bought, their name was brought up at the parties. They found so many people here at such low prices — I'm surprised how cheap some of these local people went. If they would have held off a little bit, they could have got some big money."

• Until recently, Warren operated with virtual impunity. While a few associates went to prison, Warren darted from one corporate entity to another like a broken field runner, several steps ahead of the prosecutors.

"I LIKE TO BUILD up companies for 18 months or so and then sell them and walk away from them," he told IRE reporters. That was his explanation for why he remained free while others were convicted: The projects that went bad, such as Cochise College Park, Lake Montezuma and Great Southwest Land & Cattle Co., were all projects he technically had sold to his colleagues, who then ran them into the ground.

But in most instances, he actually directed those companies in various consultant capacities.

The IRE is a group of 300 investigative journalists who sponsored nearly 40 journalists from 25 news organizations who spent six months probing crime in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

Gold mine found in underground food storage

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — There's enough food stored 200 feet below Kansas City to feed every American for one day.

Everything from pizzas to English muffins to fish is stored in limestone mines with tons of rock as natural insulation.

But contrary to images of a troglodyte's heaven, the mines are a constant 58-62 degrees, have 50 per cent humidity and enough electric lights to raise the temperature to a comfortable 70 degrees, if necessary.

ONE MINE, Inland Storage Distribution Center on the Kansas side, has 4.5 million square feet of usable storage space in a 21 million cubic-foot mine.

One on the Missouri side, Great Midwest Corp., is using 2 million square feet of a mine that's 15 million square feet. Both have international trade centers.

Underground storage is an energy saving concept Inland has been using for 25 years. Inland's man-made limestone cave has 16-foot ceilings in six- or seven-acre rooms interspersed with supporting limestone pillars 25-feet thick.

The limestone rooms are impervious to the cold weather above that is causing natural gas shortages and an energy crisis.

"If we were above ground our energy costs would be triple," said Inland's General Sales Manager Victor Mersten. "We don't have to face the elements. In the freezers themselves, we don't have one-foot-thick walls absorbing 100-degree heat from the summer sun. Here you've got a 200-foot ceiling and the sun is never going to get down here."

While industries are shut down by gas curtailments, Inland's gas-free system recently hired a dozen workers, Mersten said. The underground storage also provides atomic bomb-proof vaults for vital industry records.

MERSTEN AND Great Midwest's president, Forrest Browne, said underground storage normally runs 40 per cent cheaper than comparable surface structures, and could be up to 75 per cent cheaper if all that is required is a dry room.

"We handle between eight and 10 million pounds of food each day," Mersten said. "The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture says 10 per cent of all the frozen food in the nation passes through Inland."

But lower construction costs and energy savings are not the only advantages of underground storage, say Browne and Mersten.

"One tenant who has been here 17 years said employee turnover is nil, and productivity is substantially above normal," Mersten said. "Distractions are lower, you aren't looking out the windows at the girls in the short skirts or worrying about the weather, all you've got there is your job."

Horcher to resign post as police chief

by LINDA PUNCH

Wheeling Police Chief M. O. (Sykes) Horcher in September will end a career that has spanned more than two decades.

Horcher, 52, Tuesday submitted his resignation to Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle, effective Sept. 18. Horcher said he has "no specific reason" for resigning but that "I think I've reached my peak."

"I think it's time to close up shop," he said.

A lifelong resident of Wheeling, Horcher joined the village police force in 1948. He was named chief in 1955 and served in that position until 1972, when he suffered a stroke. He served as village administrative assistant until 1975, when he was reappointed as chief.

DURING HORCHER'S tenure with the department, the force has grown from a staff of one or two members to an operation of 36 full-time civilian and uniformed personnel.

"I consider myself to be most fortunate. Few people are able to come back after an illness. The people of the village have been very good to me," he said.

"I have the time in and I have the age required by law. I could have been collecting 60 per cent of my salary as pension up to now but I stayed on because this has been my life," he said.

HORCHER SAID he would "not change anything" about his time serving the village.

"I like to think I did a real good job. I got rid of some deadheads and productivity and revenues increased," he said.

Plans for the future include a possible move to Mountain Home, Ark., Horcher said.

"Where we go from there I really don't know. I'll probably be hunting the back hills and antiquing," he said.

Zerkle said he is "surprised and a little saddened" to receive Horcher's resignation.

"I think Sykes did an outstanding job of building this department from a small town force to the type of quality

Hein 'mismanagement' charged

Opponents of Wheeling presidential candidate William Hein have charged him with five years "of mismanagement and neglect" in his role as trustee and chairman of the village water and sewer committee.

The Better Environment, Service and Trust party has been distributing a flyer entitled "Faucet Facts" which reportedly details Hein's alleged failures as trustee and committee chairman. The committee makes recommendations about managing and improving water and sewer service in Wheeling.

The BEST party is running against Hein's Wheeling Citizens Party in the April 19 village election.

The flyer states while Hein is "telling the residents of what a good job he has done to improve the water system," water quality continues to be poor. THE FLYER CITES various independent studies of the Wheeling water system that state the system is in "poor financial condition" and is suffering from a lack of maintenance due to limited funds and personnel.

The BEST flyer states "The water quality is bad. The pressure is low and there are many breakdowns that plague the water system. Some of our newer subdivisions lack adequate water mains for fire protection."

"Five years of mismanagement and neglect by Mr. Hein has now forced the village to take action to keep the water system functioning. The 80 per cent increase in your water rates (adopted last year) was a drastic step to correct the neglect of the past."

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alfred Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

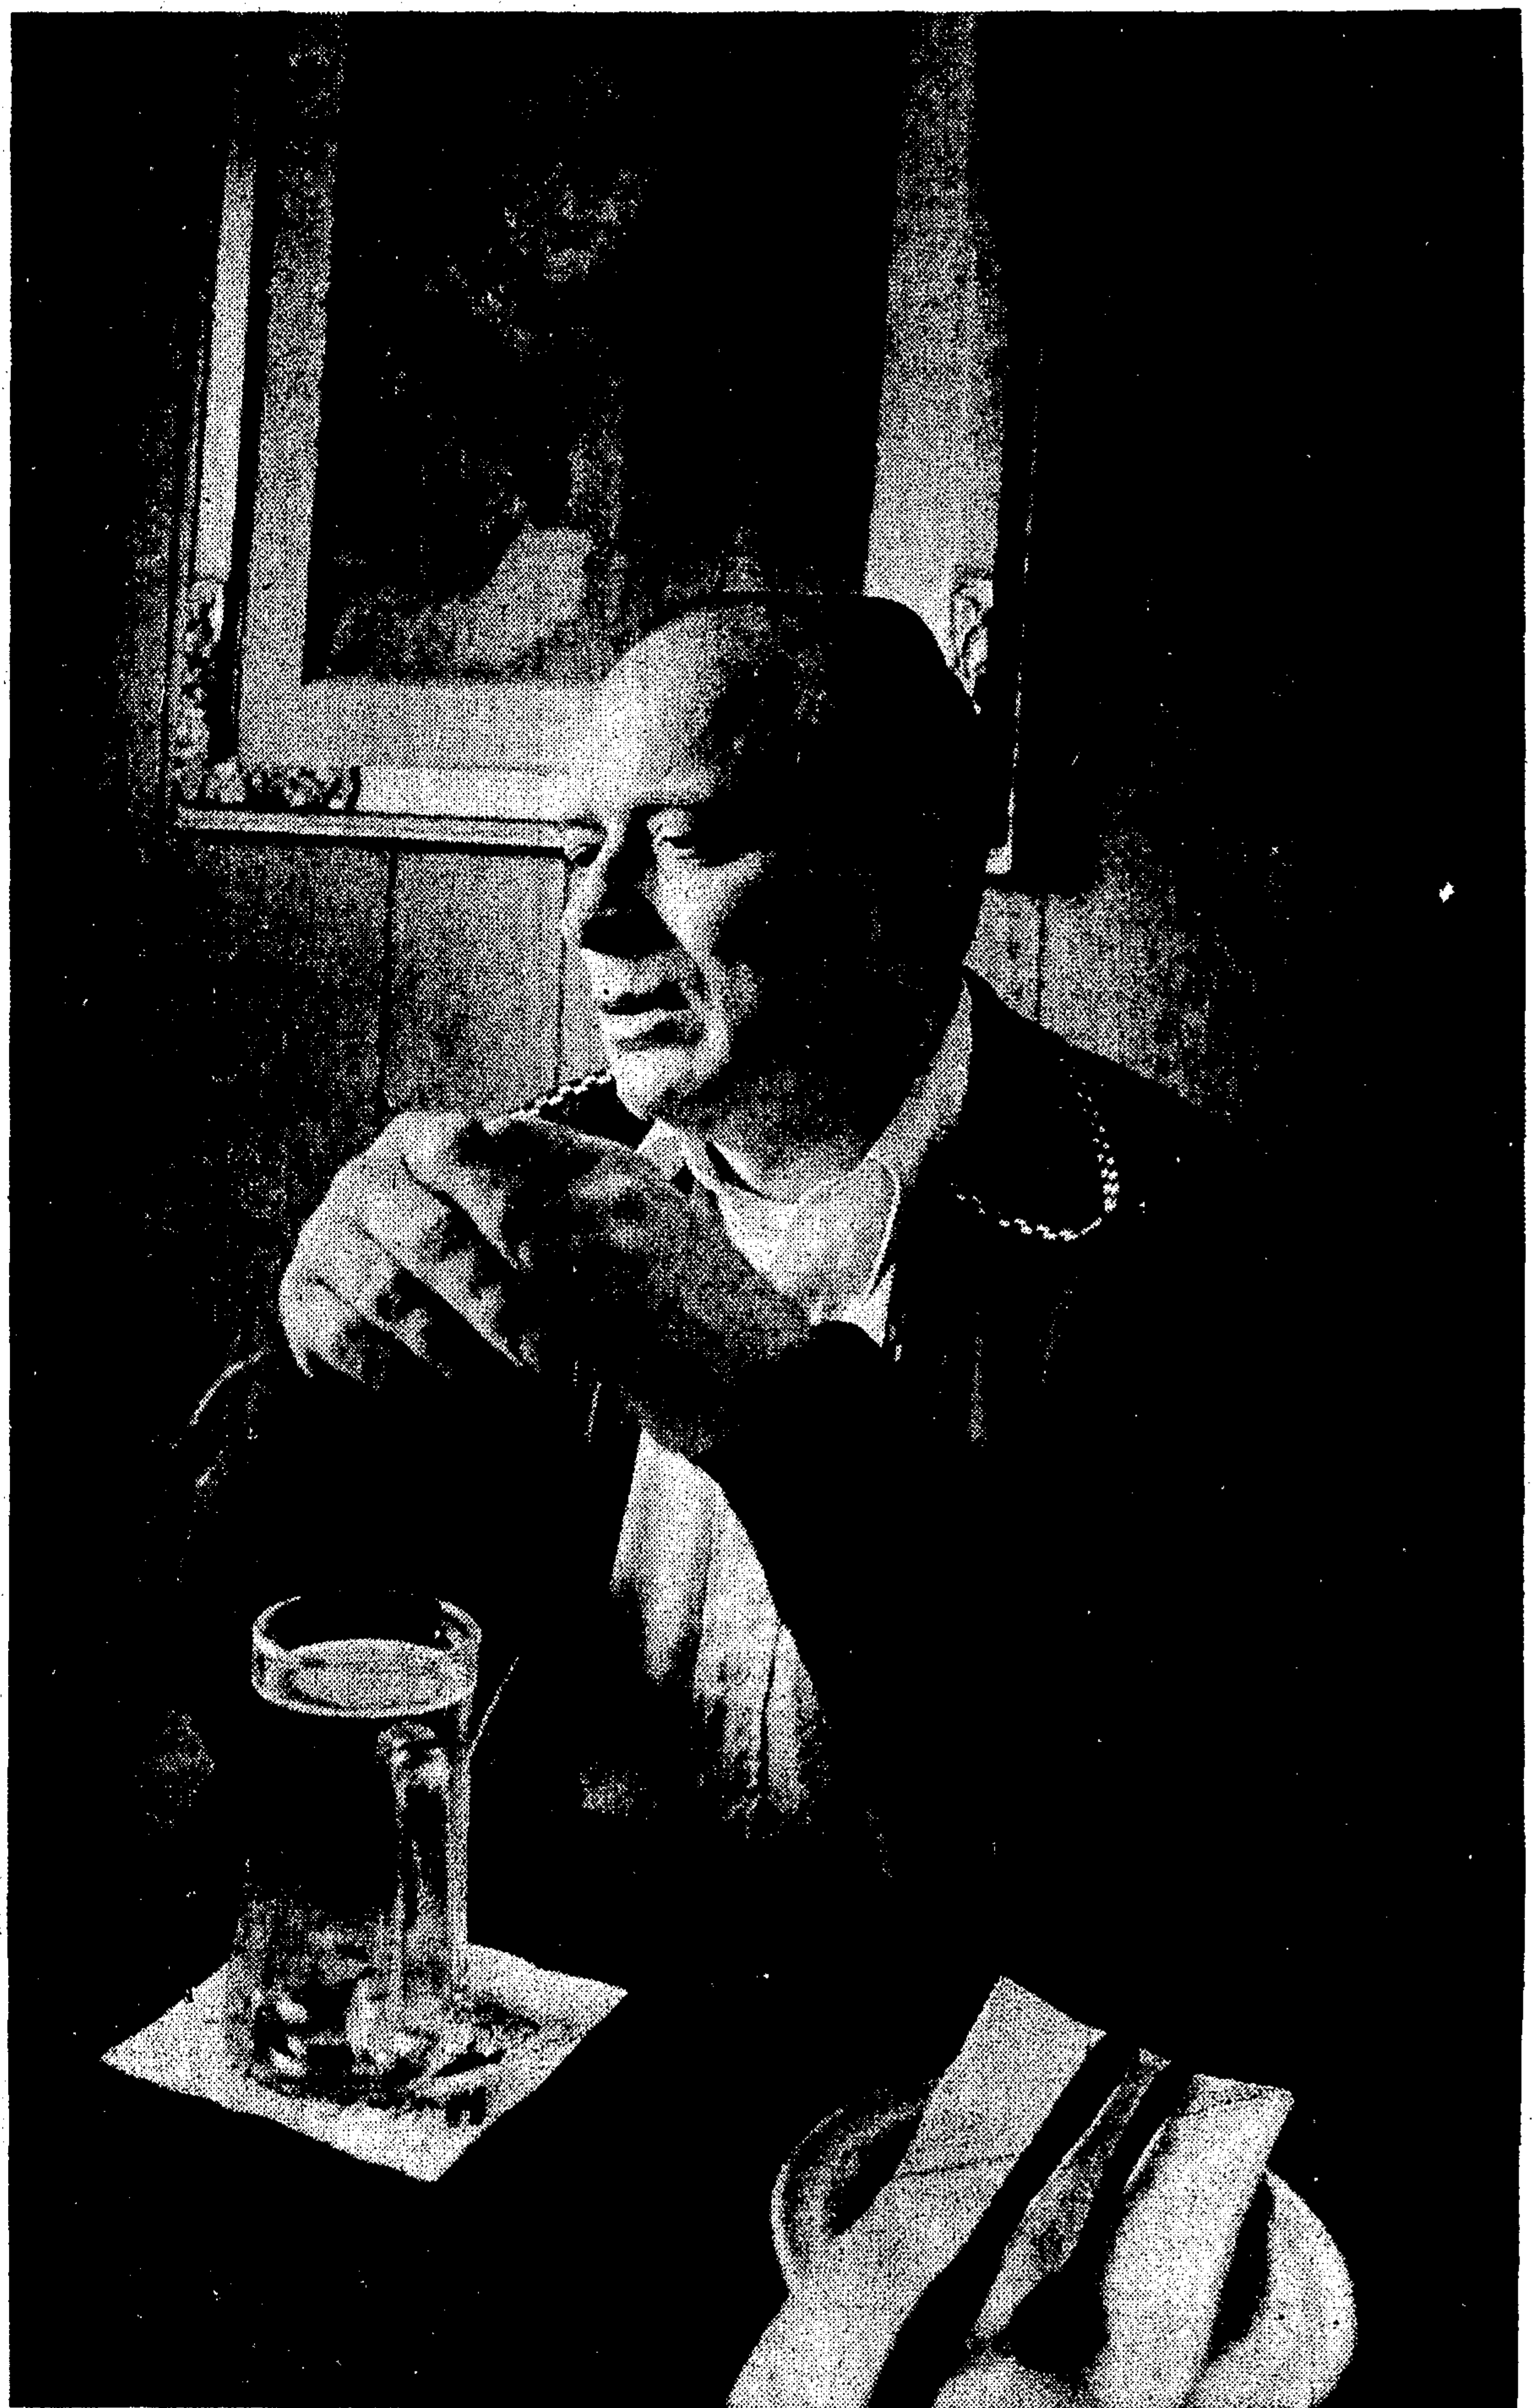

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

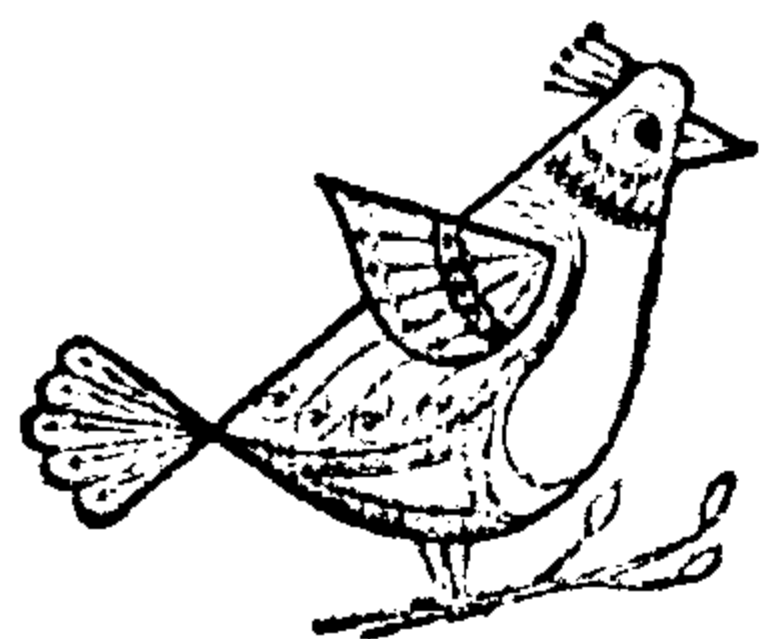

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was (Continued on Page 3)

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnap-killings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying.

"We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

ber the inadequate water supply, dirty water, the 80 per cent increase and Mr. Hein every time you turn on the water faucet."

HEIN WEDNESDAY said he is "a little saddened to see something like this."

"A capital improvements program that could benefit the whole community could be subverted. This (Faucet Facts) distorts people's minds about what's happening and I think it's unjust and deplorable," he said. The multi-million-dollar program calls for improvements to the system village-wide.

Hein said statements in the flyer are taken out of context from reports and are "totally erroneous." He disputed the statement that the village's water system has had financial problems.

"The village has been borrowing from the water and sewer funds for many years to keep the general budget going at times. It's one of the few departments that has been on a profit making basis," he said.

HEIN SAID when he took over as chairman of the water and sewer committee there was "no central source of information" on the water system. He said independent reports were authorized by the board to get information on the system.

"The Lindley Report in 1976 said the water system and storage is adequate to serve the present population of Wheeling, but with growth the capacity has to be increased," he said.

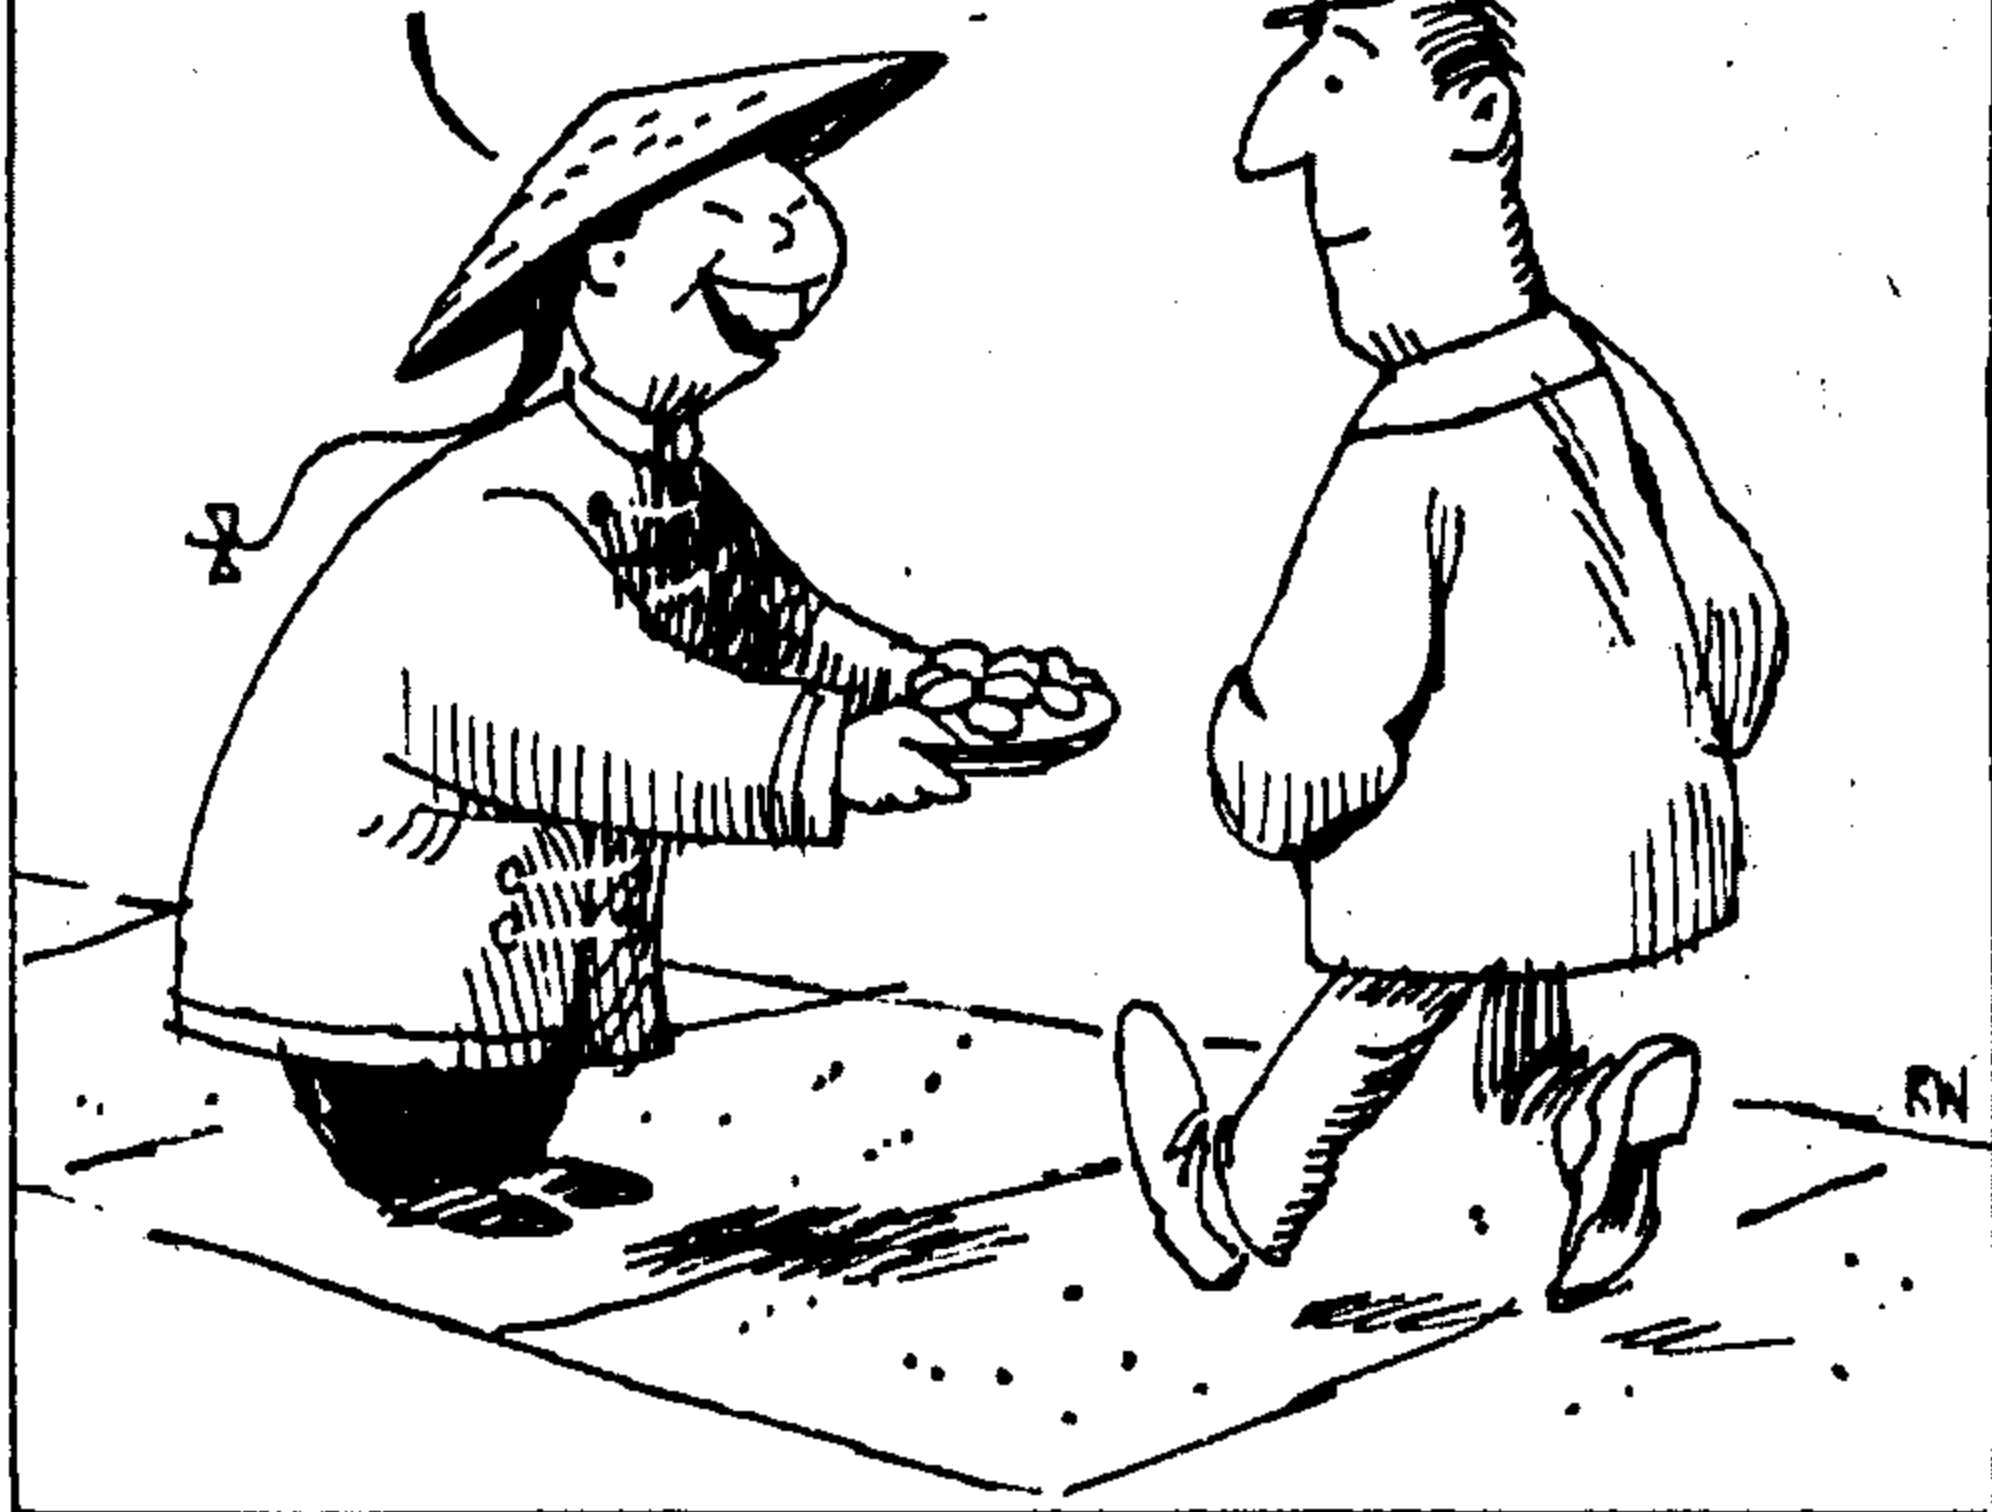

Hein said every decision made by the water and sewer committee in the past four years "has been made by every sitting trustee."

"It's easy to criticize but very hard to implement a plan," he said.

Trustee Otis L. Hedlund, BEST presidential candidate, said facts in the flyer are from independent reports.

"If the truth hurts, that's the way it goes. I'm sure if he (Hein) has the same facts, he'd be putting them out too. People who have political records are judged on their performance, his record, good, bad or indifferent," he said.

"A THOUSAND PARDONS, HONORABLE CITIZEN, WOULD YOU..."

Hein bets his fortune on a munchy message

William Hein would like you to think there is a Wheeling Citizens Party in your future.

And if you believe in fortune cookie messages, you'll be convinced. Hein and his party are passing out fortune cookies with political plugs inside at all their coffees and affairs.

When cracked open, the cookies reveal their message: "Vote Straight Wheeling Citizens Party, April 1977."

"It simply points out that the Wheeling Citizens Party has a lot of creative ideas," said Hein, always ready to get in a plug in his effort to become Wheeling village president.

"As you know, fortune cookies contain anecdotes or sayings which are on the positive side, wishing luck and happiness," he said. "It's our way of getting across our message."

HEIN AND HIS party are battling the Better Environment, Service and Trust (BEST) party and other independent candidates for village posts in the April 19 election. Other candidates for village president are Otis Hedlund BEST Party, and Edward Fox, an independent.

"We're using it as an attention-getting gimmick so people will know who we are and remember us when they go to vote," Hein said.

He said the reaction by the public has been "very good. They think it is cute and novel and gets the point across. It's symbolic of the Wheeling Citizens Party."

Hein said campaign manager Jack Metzger came up with the idea and ordered 300 of the cookies from Phoenix Fortune Cookie Co., Chicago. The party doesn't plan to order more. "Hopefully, this will do the job," Hein said.

Emergency rule on unit vote asked

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Cook County Circuit Court Judge George Schaller two weeks ago denied Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit.

According to current state law, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

The unit district would combine 21 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Woman 'fair' after two-car collision

A Park Ridge woman was in fair to good condition Wednesday at Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, following a two-car collision at the intersection of River and Central roads in Des Plaines.

Elizabeth A. Kaplinski, 23, of 17 S. Home Ave., Park Ridge and 53-year-old Lucille A. Hale, 1444 Quaker Ln., Wheeling, received minor injuries Tuesday night when the Kaplinski auto, southbound on River Road, hit the Hale car, turning from northbound River Road onto Central Road.

department we have today. I have the utmost respect for him and I wish him success in his future endeavors," he said.

TRUSTEE WILLIAM Hein, Wheeling Citizens' Party candidate for village president, said he thinks Horcher "had done a good job" as police chief.

"He has been active not only as a police chief but also as a member of many community organizations. Through the dedication of citizens like this, Wheeling can continue to move forward," he said.

Trustee Otis L. Hedlund, Better Environment, Service and Trust candidate for village president, said "I hate to see him go. The chief has already done a good job and he always put the village first."

Zerkle said he will meet with the village board to set up a procedure for replacing Horcher. He said candidates will be considered from within the force as well as from the outside.

Unit plan at issue in Dist. 21 race

by DIANE GRANAT

The course of action Wheeling Township Dist. 21 should take if a unit school district is formed in Elk Grove Township has cropped up as a key issue in the Dist. 21 board of education race.

The need for a "quick move" by Dist. 21 in the name of self-interest were reasons several board hopefuls said they would support the creation of a unit district in the Dist. 21 area if voters in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 decide to form a unit district with part of High School Dist. 214.

At a candidates' night Tuesday at Poe School, 2800 N. Highland Ave., Arlington Heights, residents quizzed candidates Xenophon Daniel Kafkas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein on the issue. The four newcomers are vying for two 3-year terms on the board.

DIST. 21 AND DIST. 59 are two of the seven elementary districts in Dist. 214. The proposed unit district would combine Dist. 59's 21 elementary and junior high schools with Forest View and Elk Grove high schools under one board and administration.

If voters in Dist. 59, the only persons now eligible to vote in the April 9 referendum, approve the unit proposal, the new district would acquire 42 per cent of Dist. 214's tax base and 27 per cent of its students.

Kurtzman and Weinstein called for "quick action" by Dist. 21 if a unit district is formed in Elk Grove Township.

"If the referendum in Dist. 59 is allowed and if Dist. 59 approves it, we would have to take immediate action to go unit district for Dist. 21," said Weinstein, 3311 Carriage Way, Arlington Heights.

WEINSTEIN LATER said he only would vote for a unit district "if there are no other alternatives. I would feel obligated to vote for it, although it is selfish, to protect the interests of our children."

"We have to make a quick move if a Dist. 59 unit is formed," said Kurtzman, 463 Buckeye Rd., Wheeling. "It would be to our advantage to form a unit district so we are not left out in the cold."

Kurtzman said she is happy the current plan is working on a contingency board if Dist. 59's unit proposal is adopted. She said Dist. 21 must examine what kind of tax base will be left, exactly how many dollars will be available and if there are enough stu-

Kafkas, Weinstein endorsed by union

School board candidates Xenophon Daniel Kafkas and Stuart Weinstein have been endorsed by the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 teachers union.

The two newcomers were notified Tuesday that the union will support them in the April 9 election for two 3-year seats on the Dist. 21 Board. Kafkas and Weinstein both accepted the union's endorsement.

Linda Kurtzman, 463 Buckeye Rd., Wheeling, and Herbert Stein, 915 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights, also are seeking election to the board.

ALL FOUR CANDIDATES WERE interviewed by the union's political action committee, said Marilyn Beutin, the committee's co-chairman.

Beutin said the union will send letters to Dist. 21 teachers living in the district and residents who teach in other areas urging them to vote for Kafkas and Weinstein. She said the teachers also will make phone calls supporting the candidates during the week before the election.

Kafkas, 1103 S. Miller Ln., Buffalo Grove, said he was glad to receive the union's backing. "I think teachers are a school district's most valuable resource so I was very pleased," he said.

In last year's school board election

two union-supported newcomers unseated two incumbents. Elaine Bond and Linda Sprechman defeated former board members Steven Greenberg and Kenneth Rodeck for three-year terms. Incumbent Barbara Farr retained her seat in last year's election in which three seats were vacant. The Dist. 21 Caucus backed Farr, Bond and Fred Harms. Another teacher-backed newcomer, James Gallagher, lost his bid for the board.

This year incumbents Winfield Boyer and Jeremiah Crise are not seeking reelection when their terms expire in April.

Kafkas also was endorsed by the caucus, an independent citizens group representing several schools and community organizations in the district. The caucus also voted to support Stein.

Stein said he is cautious about whether Dist. 21 should become involved in a unit district. "I won't make any decisions without all the facts," he said.

BUT STEIN SAID IF the Elk Grove Township unit district is created, "just looking at the tax base around here it seems likely Dist. 21 would have to do this. If Dist. 59 does approve it, self-preservation is the name of the game."

Kafkas said he is opposed to the principle of unit districts. But "if it comes to pass that the economic imperatives are going to be such that we will have no alternative but to form a unit district," he said he would support a unit proposal.

dents in the area to fill two high schools.

Dist. 21 also must ask "are we taking something without looking at the other districts?" Kurtzman said.

Stein said he is cautious about whether Dist. 21 should become involved in a unit district. "I won't make any decisions without all the facts," he said.

Stuart Weinstein

Weinstein, 3311 Carriage Way Dr., Arlington Heights, said he is "very pleased" the teachers endorsed him. He said because he did not decide to run in time to be interviewed by the Dist. 21 General Caucus for endorsement, he was glad the teachers "see me fitting and capable of being a board member."

KAFKAS ALSO WAS endorsed by the caucus, an independent citizens group representing several schools and community organizations in the district. The caucus also voted to support Stein.

Flight attendant job fits today's lifestyle

FLIGHT ATTENDANTS are no longer just young single women, as evidenced by the current training class at United Airlines training center in Elk Grove Township. The average age of attendants is now 26 or 27, nearly 10 per cent are men, and some 25 per cent are married.

Many trainees are now older, male, married and looking for a career

by LYNN ASINOF

Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 80 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 23-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

"The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

THAT'S WHY LOTS of people apply for training but few people quit the job. Only 378 of United's 8,000 flight attendants left last year. "We are now down to training pretty much for attrition," Buening said.

That, however, is an improvement over the past few years when no one was trained. United stopped training for about 2½ years when work force changes and the energy crunch left the airline with an oversupply of attendants.

This spring is the second class to go through since that freeze, and Buening said he thinks training will become "a very, very regular thing."

Training takes place in the spring at United because the heavy flying season is during the summer. This year the classes started in February and will run through June.

It's a once a year thing for United, but for many it's a lot more than that. It's a whole new way of life.

National Wildlife Week

Cleanup of waterways urged

"We all need clean water" is the theme for the 40th annual observance of National Wildlife Week, which ends Saturday.

More than 10 million persons are expected to participate in the week's activities under the chairmanship of actor Robert Redford, said G. Ray Arnett, president of the National Wildlife Federation.

"We couldn't have picked a more appropriate year to focus the country's attention on the importance of having a clean and plentiful water supply," Arnett said.

OUR WATER supply is threatened on many fronts, and it also happens to be a year in which Congress must renew its commitment to a nationwide clean-up of our waterways.

Arnett referred to the congressional votes to fund sewage treatment facilities and other pollution controls called for in the 1972 amendments to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. The amendments set a timetable to make all the nation's waters "fishable and swimmable" by 1983, ending all discharges of pollutants by 1985.

The amendments also set a July 1 deadline for improvements in municipal and industrial wastes discharged into navigable waters. Most industrial polluters will meet the deadline, but many municipalities are far behind schedule. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency records show.

"Because we see a lot of water, many people take it for granted," Arnett said. "But with demand increasing continually, our supply of usable water isn't all that abundant. For one thing, 99 per cent of the earth's water is either salt water or locked in polar ice. We have got to teach millions of people to apply the conservation ethic to water — don't waste it, don't pollute it. Our survival depends on it."

FLIGHT TRAINEES use mock-ups of real planes to learn public address announcements, food service and safety. Plaster food is used in most courses, but in one course trainees actually practice on a real roast beef and green salad.

Virginia and Kris Capling are grateful . . .

Rex is coming home to U.S. soil

VIRGINIA CAPLING after her husband's body was released by Vietnam: "I just try to believe this is a beginning of an accounting."

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND the remains of 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubts that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she hears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly, she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners was released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over.

"What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering," Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

Patricia Columbo

Frank DeLuca

Attorneys ask separate trial for Columbo

Defense attorneys for accused murderess Patricia Columbo are expected to request separate trials for her and Frank DeLuca at a court hearing Tuesday.

William Swano, assistant Cook County Public Defender for Miss Columbo, said among the motions he likely will submit in Cook County Circuit Court will be one requesting a separate trial for his client April 4.

Swano Wednesday refused to confirm or deny earlier reports that a separate trial for Miss Columbo will be requested so that she may testify as a defense witness at DeLuca's murder trial.

MICHAEL J. TOOMING, DeLuca's defense attorney, Wednesday said he has not decided whether he also will request a separate trial for his client.

The motions will be heard by Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham at the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

The Columbo-DeLuca case is in its final pretrial hearings, preparing for the April 4 trial in Pincham's courtroom.

Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 39, are charged in the May 4, 1976, murders of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca appeared in court Tuesday morning, where Pincham denied a defense motion for a bill of particulars to be turned over by prosecutors of the Cook County state's attorney's office.

THE BILL OF particulars would have enumerated dates and times of the crimes for which Miss Columbo and DeLuca are accused.

Still pending are defense motions to suppress statements collected by police from the defendants and requests to quash the defendants' arrests and suppress evidence.

Also pending in the Illinois Supreme Court is an appeal filed by prosecutors of a refusal by Pincham to order Miss Columbo and DeLuca to produce handwriting and blood samples.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, are collecting clippings of newspaper reports about the case to determine whether pretrial publicity has jeopardized Miss Columbo's and DeLuca's right to a fair trial.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each in the Cook County Jail, Chicago.

Ex-con tied to Ariz. fraud

by United Press International
In the eleventh copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said Ned Warren Sr., an ex-convict who arrived in Arizona in 1961, has been a dominant figure in Arizona's land boom and has participated in various land frauds.

The IRE article said:

• As puppet master of a maze of corporations, Warren refined land fraud into a multimillion dollar industry that spawned an army of imitators. He proved to have a shrewd eye for making friends, especially rising political stars, sometimes cutting them in on land deals.

• When real estate commissioner J. Fred Talley resigned under fire, Arizonans learned the sordid side of the land fraud business — the corruption of public officials with payoffs and bribes. Bribers apparently had little trouble finding takers.

• One source who partied with Talley, Warren and Associates said: "Anybody that could be bought, their name was brought up at the parties. They found so many people here at such low prices — I'm surprised how cheap some of these local people went. If they would have held off a little bit, they could have got some big money."

• Until recently, Warren operated with virtual impunity. While a few associates went to prison, Warren darted from one corporate entity to another like a broken field runner, several steps ahead of the prosecutors.

"I LIKE TO BUILD up companies for 18 months or so and then sell them and walk away from them," he told IRE reporters. That was his explanation for why he remained free while others were convicted: The projects that went bad, such as Cochise College Park, Lake Montezuma and Great Southwest Land & Cattle Co., were all projects he technically had sold to his colleagues, who then ran them into the ground.

But in most instances, he actually directed those companies in various consultant capacities.

The IRE is a group of 300 investigative journalists who sponsored nearly 40 journalists from 25 news organizations who spent six months probing crime in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

Gold mine found in underground food storage

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — There's enough food stored 200 feet below Kansas City to feed every American for one day.

Everything from pizzas to English muffins to fish is stored in limestone mines with tons of rock as natural insulation.

But contrary to images of a troglodyte's heaven, the mines are a constant 58-62 degrees, have 50 per cent humidity and enough electric lights to raise the temperature to a comfortable 70 degrees, if necessary.

ONE MINE, Inland Storage Distribution Center on the Kansas side, has 45 million square feet of usable storage space in a 21 million cubic-foot mine.

One on the Missouri side, Great Midwest Corp., is using 2 million square feet of a mine that's 15 million square feet. Both have international trade centers.

Underground storage is an energy saving concept Inland has been using for 25 years. Inland's man-made limestone cave has 16-foot ceilings in six- or seven-acre rooms interspaced with supporting limestone pillars 25-feet thick.

The limestone rooms are impervious to the cold weather above that is causing natural gas shortages and an energy crisis.

"If we were above ground our energy costs would be triple," said Inland's General Sales Manager Victor Mersten. "We don't have to face the elements. In the freezers themselves, we don't have one-foot-thick walls absorbing 100-degree heat from the summer sun. Here you've got a 200-foot ceiling and the sun is never going to get down here."

While industries are shut down by gas curtailments, Inland's gas-free system recently hired a dozen workers, Mersten said. The underground storage also provides atomic bomb-proof vaults for vital industry records.

MERSTEN AND Great Midwest's president, Forrest Browne, said underground storage normally runs 40 per cent cheaper than comparable surface structures, and could be up to 75 per cent cheaper if all that is required is a dry room.

"We handle between eight and 10 million pounds of food each day," Mersten said. "The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture says 10 per cent of all the frozen food in the nation passes through Inland."

But lower construction costs and energy savings are not the only advantages of underground storage, say Browne and Mersten.

"One tenant who has been here 17 years said employee turnover is nil, and productivity is substantially above normal," Mersten said. "Distractions are lower, you aren't looking out the windows at the girls in the short skirts or worrying about the weather, all you've got there is your job."

Benefits of industry under study by unit

A study of industrial development costs and benefits to Buffalo Grove as well as location is being prepared by the village industrial commission.

"There's never really been an outline of the pros and cons of having industry" in Buffalo Grove, said Michael Kearns, commission chairman.

Kearns has set July 1 as the deadline for presenting the study and his commission's recommendations on future industrial growth to the village board.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

can benefit a town by producing increased property taxes, utility revenues, and by spurring new home construction for industry workers, William Sommer, village administrative assistant, said.

But the village will have to provide sewer, water and police services and also may choose to offer incentives attracting industry but costing the village money, Sommer said.

"Basically it's a benefits and costs proposition," Sommer said. "If we come up with a way to either equal or surpass our costs than industry should be encouraged," he said.

BUT TO ENCOURAGE industry, the village must have something to offer potential developers, Kearns said. The commission will examine factors conducive to industrial development, he said.

The composition of the local work force will be one such area examined, Kearns said.

The availability of land also will be discussed by the commission, he said.

The village's long-range land-use plan had set aside about 480 acres east of current village boundaries for industrial development. Wheeling officials, however, have said they would like to annex that land.

ITS LOSS WOULD leave only about 140 acres of village land set aside for industrial development, Kearns said.

The industrial commission, in conjunction with a plan commission liaison, will study whether additional lands should be designated for industrial development in a revised land use plan, Kearns said.

The industrial commission was formed in 1975 to study the possibilities of attracting industry to Buffalo Grove. But village staff changes, a shortage of commissioners and delays in construction of roads leading to designated industrial area has slowed the commission's work, Kearns said.

Emergency rule on unit vote asked

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alford Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

TIMOTHY KING

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnappings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them, and in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkeley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range. Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying. "We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

Unit school plan becomes key issue in Dist. 21 race

Kafkas, Weinstein endorsed by union

School board candidates Xenophon Daniel Kafkas and Stuart Weinstein have been endorsed by the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 teachers union.

The two newcomers were notified Tuesday that the union will support them in the April 9 election for two 3-year seats on the Dist. 21 Board. Kafkas and Weinstein both accepted the union's endorsement.

Linda Kurtzman, 463 Buckeye Rd., Wheeling, and Herbert Stein, 915 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights, also are seeking election to the board.

ALL FOUR CANDIDATES WERE interviewed by the union's political action committee, said Marilyn Beutin, the committee's co-chairman.

Beutin said the union will send letters to Dist. 21 teachers living in the district and residents who teach in other areas urging them to vote for Kafkas and Weinstein. She said the teachers also will make phone calls supporting the candidates during the week before the election.

Kafkas, 1103 S. Miller Ln., Buffalo Grove, said he was glad to receive the union's backing. "I think teachers are a school district's most valuable resource so I was very pleased," he said.

Daniel Kafkas

Stuart Weinstein

Weinstein, 3311 Carriage Way Dr., Arlington Heights, said he is "very pleased" the teachers endorsed him. He said because he did not decide to run in time to be interviewed by the Dist. 21 General Caucus for endorsement, he was glad the teachers "see me fitting and capable of being a board member."

KAFKAS ALSO WAS endorsed by the caucus, an independent citizens group representing several schools and community organizations in the district. The caucus also voted to support Stein.

In last year's school board election

two union-supported newcomers unseated two incumbents. Elaine Bond and Linda Sprechman defeated former board members Steven Greenberg and Kenneth Rodeck for three-year terms. Incumbent Barbara Farr retained her seat in last year's election in which three seats were vacant. The Dist. 21 Caucus backed Farr, Bond and Fred Harms. Another teacher-backed newcomer, James Gallagher, lost his bid for the board.

This year incumbents Winfield Boyer and Jeremiah Crise are not seeking reelection when their terms expire in April.

by DIANE GRANAT

The course of action Wheeling Township Dist. 21 should take if a unit school district is formed in Elk Grove Township has cropped up as a key issue in the Dist. 21 board of education race.

The need for a "quick move" by Dist. 21 in the name of self-interest were reasons several board hopefuls said they would support the creation of a unit district in the Dist. 21 area if voters in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 decide to form a unit district with part of High School Dist. 214.

At a candidates' night Tuesday at Poe School, 2800 N. Highland Ave., Arlington Heights, residents quizzed candidates Xenophon Daniel Kafkas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein on the issue. The four newcomers are vying for two 3-year terms on the board.

DIST. 21 AND DIST. 59 are two of the seven elementary districts in Dist. 214. The proposed unit district would combine Dist. 59's 21 elementary and junior high schools with Forest View and Elk Grove high schools under one board and administration.

If voters in Dist. 59, the only persons now eligible to vote in the April 9 referendum, approve the unit proposal, the new district would acquire 42 per cent of Dist. 214's tax base and 27 per cent of its students.

Kurtzman and Weinstein called for "quick action" by Dist. 21 if a unit district is formed in Elk Grove Township.

"If the referendum in Dist. 59 is allowed and if Dist. 59 approves it, we would have to take immediate action to go unit district for Dist. 21," said Weinstein, 3311 Carriage Way, Arlington Heights.

WEINSTEIN LATER said he only would vote for a unit district "if there are no other alternatives. I would feel obligated to vote for it, although it is selfish, to protect the interests of our children."

"We have to make a quick move if a Dist. 59 unit is formed," said Kurtzman, 463 Buckeye Rd., Wheeling. "It would be to our advantage to form a unit district so we are not left out in the cold."

Kurtzman said she is happy the current board is working on a contingency plan if Dist. 59's unit proposal is adopted. She said Dist. 21 must examine what kind of tax base will be left, exactly how many dollars will be available and if there are enough students in the area to fill two high schools.

Dist. 21 also must ask "are we taking something without looking at the other districts?" Kurtzman said.

Stein said he is cautious about whether Dist. 21 should become involved in a unit district. "I won't make any decisions without all the facts," he said.

BUT STEIN SAID IF the Elk Grove

Township unit district is created, "just looking at the tax base around here it seems likely Dist. 21 would have to do this. If Dist. 59 does approve it, self-preservation is the name of the game."

Kafkas said he is opposed to the principle of unit districts. But "if it comes to pass that the economic imperatives are going to be such that we will have no alternative but to form a unit district," he said he would support a unit proposal.

"I think elementary education needs to have the highest priority in our educational system," Kafkas said. If a unit district is formed, he said, "I would make sure elementary education got its fair share on the new board."

About 70 residents attended Tuesday's meeting at Poe School. The candidates also will appear at forums Wednesday at Irving School, 1250 Radcliffe St., Buffalo Grove, and April 5 at Tarkington School, 310 Scott St., Wheeling. Both meetings will begin at 8 p.m.

Emergency rule on unit vote asked

Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit. According to current state law, only

Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

The unit district would combine 21 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 96 pancake breakfast Saturday

Buffalo Grove-Long Grove School Dist. 96 will sponsor a pancake breakfast from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday at Twin Grove School, 1072 Ivy Hall Ln., Buffalo Grove.

All the pancakes you can eat will be served with sausage, applesauce and beverage at $1.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Tickets will be sold today and Wednesday at all district schools. Tickets will not be available at the breakfast.

WJJD vs. United match

A charity basketball game between United Airlines personnel and staffers from radio station WJJD will be played at 7:30 p.m. March 30 at Forest View High School, 2121 S. Goebbert Rd., Arlington Heights. Tickets, priced at $2 if purchased in advance and $2.50 at the door, are available from United and WJJD personnel as well as at Oasis Foods, 7500 Elmhurst Rd., Des Plaines, and Day and Night Foods, 1185 S. Elmhurst Rd., Des Plaines.

Proceeds from the game will go to support muscular dystrophy research.

'The Passover' March 30

A film entitled "The Passover" will be shown at the Living Christ Lutheran Church, 625 W. Dundee Rd., at 7:30 p.m. March 30. The film is designed to show the relationship between the Jewish Passover feast and the Christian Easter celebration.

Bogart to head 'Days'

Trustee Robert Bogart will act as chairman of this year's Buffalo Grove Days, the village's annual Labor Day weekend celebration. Jaycees Ben McQueen, Robert Cole, James Lindall and Mark Barney will act as co-chairmen of the event, with Trustee John Marienthal acting as parade chairman.

Bogart was recently named Jaycee of the Month for February for his work on the golf course referendum.

Garden plot time again

Buffalo Grove residents with a green thumb can rent garden plots from the village for a $4 fee. The plots, located south of Busch Road and west of Weiland Road, will be 20 by 60 feet. The village will plow the land when weather permits. Interested citizens can apply for one of the 150 lots at village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Industrial panel seeks help

Two persons are needed to fill vacancies on the Buffalo Grove Industrial Commission. The commission is examining the pros and cons of bringing industrial growth to the village. Interested parties should contact William Sommer, village administrative assistant, at 537-8984 for further information.

$844 million drought aid sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter asked Congress Wednesday for $844 million in loans, grants and assistance for drought-stricken communities and farmers in the West and Midwest.

Carter asked Congress for quick action, but stressed the only hope for immediate relief in many cases is water conservation. He said the government must lead the way in conserving water.

"The human and economic costs of the drought have been high," Carter said in a message to Congress.

"IT HAS JEOPARDIZED municipal water supplies, damaged crops and pastureland and depleted livestock numbers. The drought has inflicted financial hardships on countless farmers, ranchers, businessmen and others and it continues to pose a serious threat to their livelihood."

Carter proposed $550 million in loans, at 5 per cent interest, $250 million in outright grants, and $44 million in supplemental funds for energy, reclamation and irrigation projects.

The President also directed the agriculture secretary to make sure trained firefighters and equipment are available to meet the increased danger of forest fires.

And he directed the secretaries of agriculture and interior to make more federal land available for grazing.

CARTER ANNOUNCED the signing of a bill to appropriate $200 million in the supplemental 1977 budget for disaster relief activities. This appropriation and his proposals, he said, would provide nearly $1 billion and bring to almost $2 billion the over-all federal assistance for drought relief.

"In addition, we can encourage water conservation through several existing government programs," Carter said. "In many cases, water conservation is our only hope for immediate relief. As a nation, we must begin to conserve our water supplies and government — at all levels — must lead the way."

Rep. Dan Marriott, R-Utah, asked Interior Sec. Cecil Andrus in a House hearing whether it bothered him that the administration was making its drought proposal while trying to halt construction on western water projects.

"That doesn't bother me at all," Andrus said, adding the projects in question would "do nothing" to ease the current drought.

"The drought is today and the completion of the projects is sometime in the future," Andrus said when the subject came up again at a White House briefing.

Winter storm cripples Northeast

by United Press International

Heavy, wet snow and slashing winds shackled travel, utilities, schools and businesses in the populous Northeast Wednesday.

It was spring on the calendar but winter on the highways in much of upstate New York and New England. More than 30 inches of snow stacked up in some communities. At least 68,000 homes and businesses were left without electricity.

Drenching rains hit areas south and east of the snow belt. Flood warnings were up in some coastal areas.

THE STORM, which swept in Tuesday on the third day of spring, struck particularly hard at western New England and a belt of New York state from Watertown south to the Pennsylvania line.

It was the most crippling storm of the entire winter-spring season in the Berkshires of western New England. Thirty-three inches of snow socked Norfolk, Conn. Many New England mountain communities received 20 to 30 inches of snow.

The combination of wet snow and 60 mile winds tore down power lines throughout the Northeast. Some 33,000 homes and businesses in New York state, 19,000 in Connecticut and 17,000 in Massachusetts were left without electricity for varying periods while beefed-up utility crews sought to repair storm damage.

HIGHWAYS IN New York's Chenango, Delaware and Otsego counties were called out-of-bounds to all except emergency vehicles. An estimated 100 cars were abandoned in a one-mile stretch of highway near Monticello, N.Y. Most secondary roads were impassable.

The season's snowfall at Sear's Pond, N.Y., grew to a whopping 44.4 inches — a New York state record and more than double what blizzard-beat Buffalo received in the same period.

"This was the worst winter we ever had," said weather observer Charles Kazinski, a Sear's Pond resident for 59 years. The first snow of autumn fell Oct. 10, he said, "and it hasn't stopped for long since."

High winds hampered firemen and fanned a home fire which killed at least eight members of one family near Frederick, Md. A young woman was killed and her husband injured when wind tossed a tree into a van in which they were riding near Culpeper, Va.

Florida residents court disaster

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Residents of Florida's coastal areas, particularly the 3.4 million between Palm Beach and Miami, are courting disaster from a major hurricane, the director of the National Hurricane Center said.

"There are just too many people moving into our coastal areas and living on our off-shore islands," said Neil Frank, who has been with the hurricane center in Miami since 1960.

"I'm not sure if the National Hurricane Center could give them all adequate warning to escape a serious storm in time."

FRANK'S REMARKS, released this week, are part of a speech, "Can We Survive a Hurricane," prepared for delivery to a three-day symposium of the Florida Academy of Sciences at the University of Florida beginning today.

In many densely-populated areas of the state, bridges and roadways are inadequate to move all the people to safety in the event of an approaching storm, Frank said.

For example, he said, the two-lane bridge to Amelia Island off Fernandina Beach can accommodate only about 700 cars an hour. At that rate with two people in each car, it would take nearly 11 hours to evacuate the island.

"Another problem is that a majority of the residents are not aware of the full force of a major hurricane," he said. "Of the 5.5 million who live along Florida's coasts, 4.3 million have never seen the fury of a tropical storm."

Frank is scheduled to deliver his speech before about 200 scientists, educators and researchers.

Flight attendant job fits today's lifestyle

by LYNN ASINOF

Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager.

"The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 23-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

"The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

THAT'S WHY LOTS of people apply for training but few people quit the job. Only 378 of United's 8,000 flight attendants left last year. "We are now down to training pretty much for attrition," Buening said.

That, however, is an improvement over the past few years when no one was trained. United stopped training for about 2½ years when work force changes and the energy crunch left the airline with an oversupply of attendants.

FLIGHT TRAINEES use mock-ups of real planes to learn public address announcements, food service and safety. Plaster food is used in most courses, but in one course trainees actually practice on a real roast beef and green salad.

Firm's practices lead to unhealthy children: nuns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A dispute between Bristol-Meyers and Roman Catholic nuns who charge the company's sale of infant formula abroad promotes malnutrition by touting Third World mothers off breast feeding apparently is headed for court.

A trial would mark the first time a church group has gone into court with an American corporation over an ethical issue.

A decision on the unusual case in the federal court for the southern district of New York is expected shortly after April 8.

BRISTOL-MEYERS has asked the court to dismiss the so-called "Baby Lawsuit" brought against it last year by the Sisters of the Precious Blood, a 535-member Roman Catholic order. The Interfaith Center for Corporate Responsibility, which is backing the suit, said Monday efforts at an out-of-court settlement have failed.

The nuns seek to end Bristol-Meyers' overseas marketing practices involving the selling of breast milk substitutes in poor countries. The nuns contend such substitutes involve serious nutritional and health risks.

Bristol-Meyers argues it does not market its baby-feeding products in countries "where chronic poverty could lead to product misuse or harmful effects."

But the nuns, who hold stock in Bristol-Meyers, contend the company made "false and misleading" statements to its stockholders about the issue last year and did not tell the truth about its marketing practices when it opposed a resolution introduced by the order at the 1976 stockholders' meeting.

Emergency ruling sought on unit vote

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only

Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Cook County Circuit Court Judge George Schaller two weeks ago denied Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit.

According to current state law, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

The unit district would combine 21 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Police try to curb false alarms

Elk Grove Village police are using an educational program in an effort to curb excessive false burglar alarms that have plagued the industrial park area.

Deputy Police Chief William Kohnke Friday will begin visiting 65 companies that most frequently turn in false alarms.

"This is the last effort to find a solution," Kohnke said. "After this, there's nothing else to do but fine them."

THE VILLAGE does not now have a law to punish offenders. A village board committee studying the problem has dropped a proposed ordinance that would have fined offenders.

Trustee Edward Kenna, who chairs the committee, has said punitive actions, like fines, might not correct the problem.

"We're doing it the hard way, but we think the best way," Kenna said of Kohnke's educational efforts.

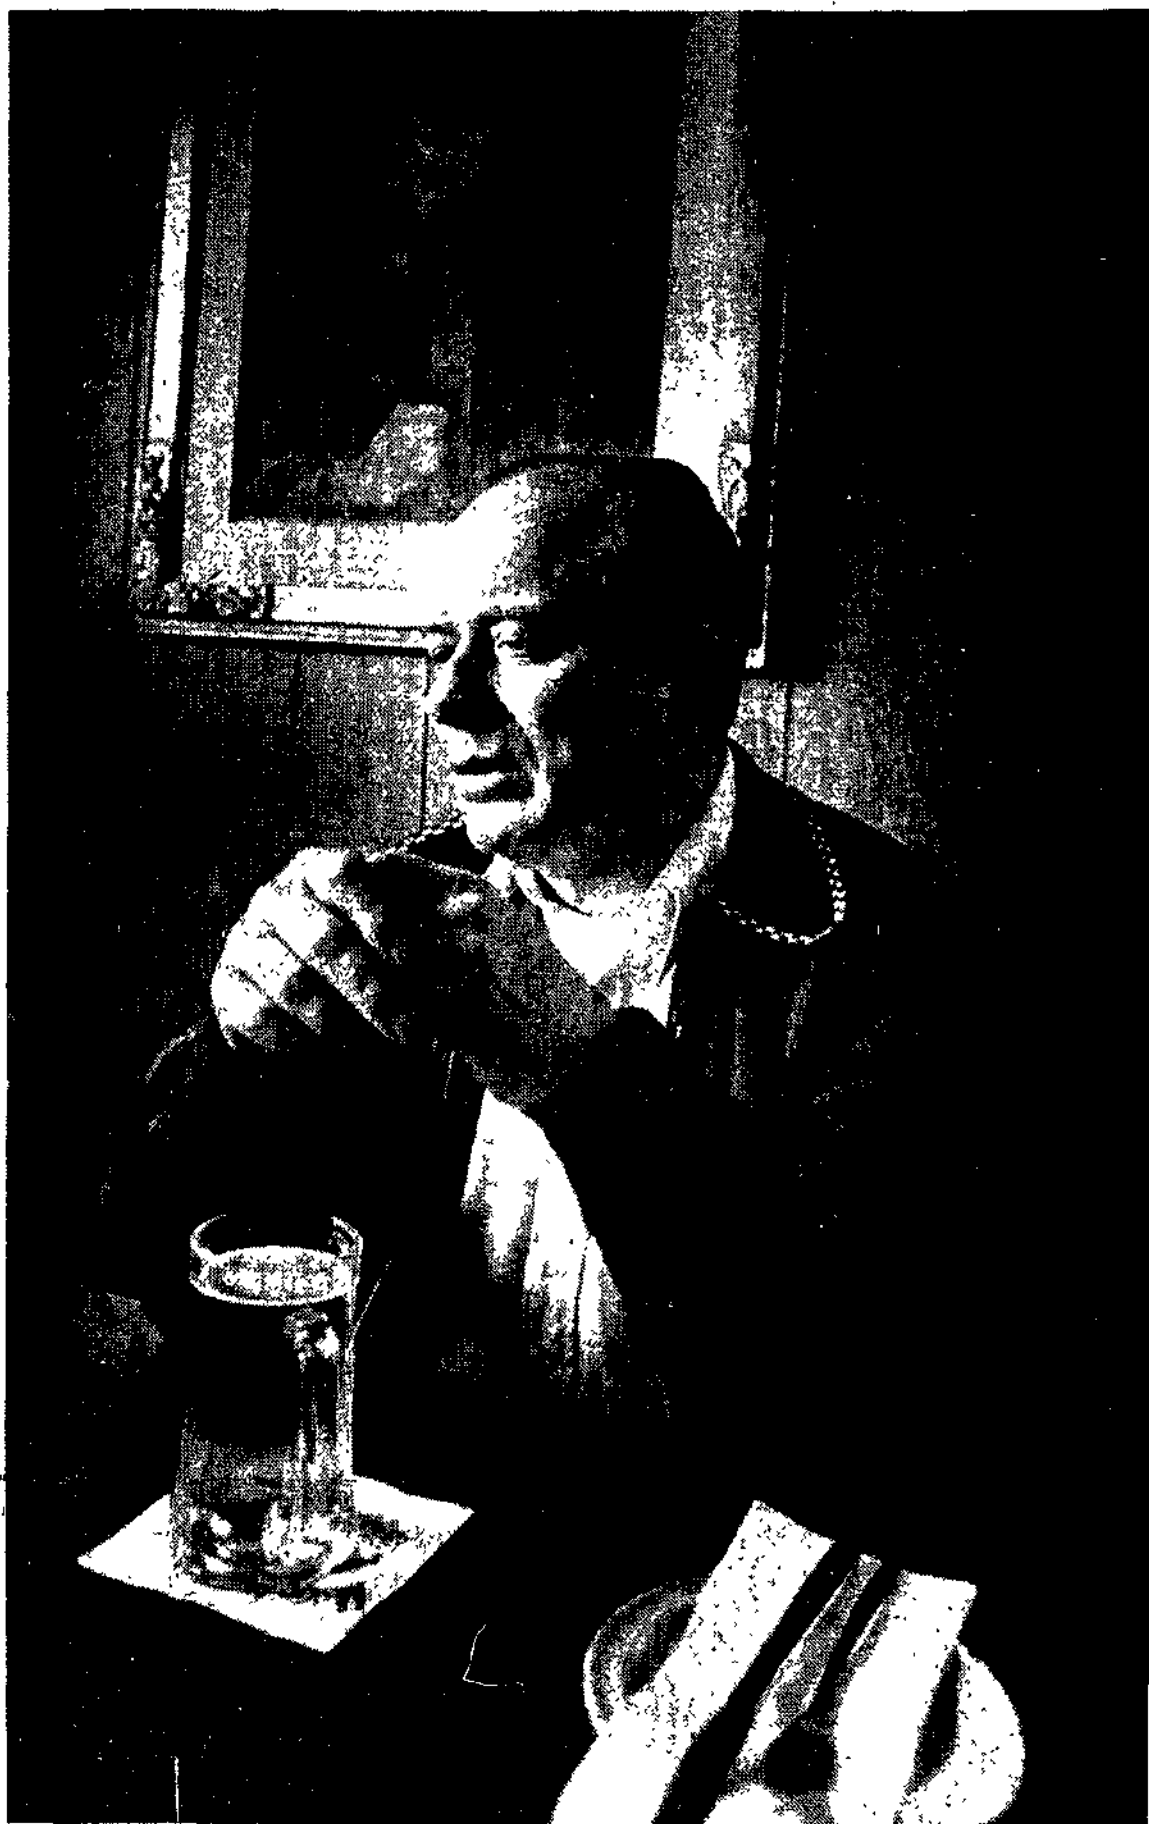

Kohnke and company officials will analyze each police report of a false alarm, try to determine the cause and suggest a solution.

There were 3,731 false alarms in 1976, or more than 10 per day. They cost the village and its taxpayers nearly $28,600 in policemen's wages.

REPEATED EFFORTS to curb the problem have not worked, as false alarms increased 10 per cent in January and February over November and December 1976, Kohnke said.

Letters describing the program also will be mailed to companies after

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alford Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS. Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

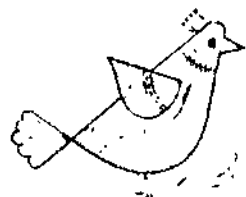

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

TIMOTHY KING

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnap-killings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying.

"We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

POLICE HAVE no suspects in any of the slayings. A psychological pro-

PASSAGE OF NEW zoning laws in Prospect Heights could threaten Ben Solis' home-based construction business. The proposed laws place restrictions on the business and limit the number of animals homeowners can keep. The law has angered many residents.

Country livin'—not under new zoning law

by DEBBE JONAK
Benedict Solis stared into his hand-built fireplace, which was crackling with the last few embers of a late morning fire.

He was worried.
Outside, his ducks and hens huddled in their small red barn, out of the snow covering his neatly landscaped acre-and-a-half.

Solis, his wife and three children have raised small farm animals for almost a decade. And they have planted a garden with a corn patch every year.

Solis built his house at 509 Greco Ct.

in the county so he could run his construction business from his home and his family could enjoy a country living.

But the country turned to city Jan. 31, 1976, when Prospect Heights was incorporated.

NOW SOLIS FEARS the new city's proposed zoning ordinance will change his and many of his neighbors' lives drastically.

All but three of the ducks and chickens would have to go. Three is the maximum number of animals permitted under the proposed law. The corn patch would violate plant height regulations.

But more importantly, the proposed zoning ordinance would force Solis to move his business from his home to a business site in another town—a change he said would cost him $15,000 annually.

"THIS WOULD FLATLY drive people out of town," Solis said, explaining incorporation campaigners promised residents could keep their home occupations if Prospect Heights became a city. Solis was an unsuccessful city council candidate.

Almost one in five Prospect Heights households have home businesses, Jack Gilligan, zoning commissioner, said at a recent public hearing on the ordinance.

The home business regulations are intended to retain the residential character of neighborhoods, Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said. Exposed equipment, large signs, large home classes and work buildings can compromise the atmosphere, he said.

Home operations for office work generally would not be in violation of the proposed regulations. Bases for tradesmen and small truckers, however, could face major changes, Solis said.

"FOR MANY OF THE tradesmen this means making a living or not making a living," he said. "They have used their home property as their base of operation."

The proposed ordinance would force tradesmen to establish their base elsewhere, he said.

If the new law is adopted, a businessman could not store or deliver any material requiring use of a commercial vehicle.

For instance, Solis said he could not perform emergency repairs on a customer's door at home because he would need his pickup truck to get it here and back.

He could not store a load of lumber overnight for an early morning job. He also could not park his pickup truck in his driveway—it would have to be parked in the garage or hidden from view in some other way.

THE SMALL AMOUNT of work he performs in a storage building would have to stop. The proposed ordinance would not allow use of an accessory building for home businesses.

While the ordinance would cut into their businesses, it also would hurt residents' home life, Solis said.

"Many people in the area raise pet rabbits, chickens—I've even seen some bee hives," he said. "This is

Dist. 59 to use 5 polling places for unit vote

Five polling places will be used in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 for the April 9 unit school district referendum despite residents' requests for more to accommodate an anticipated heavy voter turnout.

Dist. 59 officials say they would have more polling places if they could, but Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick's office already has decided on five polling places for the referendum.

Officials in Martwick's office say they were told by Dist. 59 officials that five polling places have been adequate in the past.

"FIVE WAS the recommendation we got when we queried them and now at this late date we can't make changes," Frank Bristow, administrative assistant in Martwick's office, said. "The polling places already have been published."

If great problems are foreseen because of an extraordinary voter turnout, additional judges will be provided, Frank Sullivan, assistant superintendent in Martwick's office, said.

"Martwick's office has made up its mind to go with five precincts and there isn't much we can do about it."

Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said. "Martwick is running the election, not Dist. 59."

Board member Gerald Smiley said he hoped provisions would be made ahead of time to apportion more voting booths to the northern area of the district where he expects the heaviest voter turnout.

Cop program tries to curb false alarms

they turn in three false alarms, Kohnke said. Until now, the police department sent a letter to companies which turned in five false alarms.

Kohnke said 1,400 questionnaires about the type of alarm systems used were sent to the village's industries. The information sheets also ask for the names of each company's president.

"If the president is awakened at two, three, or four in the morning, he might put a stop to it," Kohnke said. Police now notify a company representative when an alarm is sounded, but it is often an office manager, he said.

"A THOUSAND PARDONS, HONORABLE CITIZEN, WOULD YOU..."

Hein bets his fortune on a munchy message

William Hein would like you to think there is a Wheeling Citizens Party in your future.

And if you believe in fortune cookie messages, you'll be convinced. Hein and his party are passing out fortune cookies with political plugs inside at all their coffees and affairs.

When cracked open, the cookies reveal their message: "Vote Straight Wheeling Citizens Party, April 1977."

"It simply points out that the Wheeling Citizens Party has a lot of creative ideas," said Hein, always ready to get in a plug in his effort to become Wheeling village president.

"As you know, fortune cookies contain anecdotes or sayings which are on the positive side, wishing luck and happiness," he said. "It's our way of getting across our message."

HEIN AND HIS party are battling the Better Environment, Service and Trust (BEST) party and other independent candidates for village posts in the April 19 election. Other candidates for village president are Otis Hedlund BEST Party, and Edward Fox, an independent.

"We're using it as an attention-getting gimmick so people will know who we are and remember us when they go to vote," Hein said.

He said the reaction by the public has been "very good. They think it is cute and novel and gets the point across. It's symbolic of the Wheeling Citizens Party."

Hein said campaign manager Jack Metzger came up with the idea and ordered 300 of the cookies from Phoenix Fortune Cookie Co., Chicago. The party doesn't plan to order more. "Hopefully this will do the job," Hein said.

Carter asks Congress

$844 million drought aid sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter asked Congress Wednesday for $844 million in loans, grants and assistance for drought-stricken communities and farmers in the West and Midwest.

Carter asked Congress for quick action, but stressed the only hope for immediate relief in many cases is water conservation. He said the government must lead the way in conserving water.

"The human and economic costs of the drought have been high," Carter said in a message to Congress.

"IT HAS JEOPARDIZED municipal water supplies, damaged crops and pasture, and depleted livestock numbers. The drought has inflicted financial hardships on countless farmers, ranchers, businessmen and others and it continues to pose a serious threat to their livelihood."

Carter proposed $550 million in loans, at 5 per cent interest, $250 million in outright grants, and $44 million in supplemental funds for energy, reclamation and irrigation projects.

The President also directed the agriculture secretary to make sure trained firefighters and equipment are available to meet the increased danger of forest fires.

And he directed the secretaries of agriculture and interior to make more federal land available for grazing.

CARTER ANNOUNCED the signing of a bill to appropriate $200 million in the supplemental 1977 budget for disaster relief activities. This appropriation and his proposals, he said, would provide nearly $1 billion and bring to almost $2 billion the over-all federal assistance for drought relief.

"In addition, we can encourage water conservation through several existing government programs," Carter said. "In many cases, water conservation is our only hope for immediate relief. As a nation, we must begin to conserve our water supplies and government — at all levels — must lead the way."

Rep. Dan Marriott R-Utah, asked Interior Sec. Cecil Andrus in a House hearing whether it bothered him that the administration was making its drought proposal while trying to halt construction on western water projects.

"That doesn't bother me at all," Andrus said, adding the projects in question would "do nothing" to ease the current drought.

"The drought is today and the completion of the projects is sometime in the future," Andrus said when the subject came up again at a White House briefing.

Winter storm cripples Northeast

by United Press International
Heavy wet snow and slashing winds shackled travel, utilities, schools and businesses in the populous Northeast Wednesday.

It was spring on the calendar but winter on the highways in much of upstate New York and New England. More than 30 inches of snow stacked up in some communities, at least 68,000 homes and businesses were left without electricity.

Drenching rains hit areas south and east of the snow belt. Flood warnings were up in some coastal areas.

THE STORM, which swept in Tuesday on the third day of spring, struck particularly hard at western New England and a belt of New York state from Watertown south to the Pennsylvania line.

It was the most crippling storm of the entire winter-spring season in the Berkshires of western New England. Thirty-three inches of snow socked Norfolk, Conn. Many New England mountain communities received 20 to 30 inches of snow.

The combination of wet snow and 60 mile winds tore down power lines throughout the Northeast. Some 33,000 homes and businesses in New York state, 18,000 in Connecticut and 17,000 in Massachusetts were left without electricity for varying periods while beefed-up utility crews sought to repair storm damage.

HIGHWAYS IN New York's Chenango, Delaware and Otsego counties were called out-of-bounds to all except emergency vehicles. An estimated 100 cars were abandoned in a one-mile stretch of highway near Monticello, N.Y. Most secondary roads were impassable.

The season's snowfall at Sear's Pond, N.Y., grew to a whopping 44.4 inches — a New York state record and more than double what blizzard-blast Buffalo received in the same period.

"This was the worst winter we ever had," said weather observer Charles Kazinski, a Sear's Pond resident for 59 years. The first snow of autumn fell Oct. 10, he said, "and it hasn't stopped for long since."

High winds hampered firemen and fanned a home fire which killed at least eight members of one family near Frederick, Md. A young woman was killed and her husband injured when wind tossed a tree into a van in which they were riding near Culpeper, Va.

Florida residents courting disaster from hurricanes

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Residents of Florida's coastal areas, particularly the 3.4 million between Palm Beach and Miami, are courting disaster from a major hurricane, the director of the National Hurricane Center said.

"There are just too many people moving into our coastal areas and living on our off-shore islands," said Neil Frank, who has been with the hurricane center in Miami since 1960.

"I'm not sure if the National Hurricane Center could give them all adequate warning to escape a serious storm in time."

FRANK'S REMARKS, released this week, are part of a speech, "Can We Survive a Hurricane," prepared for delivery to a three-day symposium of the Florida Academy of Sciences at the University of Florida beginning today.

In many densely-populated areas of the state, bridges and roadways are inadequate to move all the people to safety in the event of an approaching storm, Frank said.

For example, he said, the two-lane bridge to Amelia Island off Fernandina Beach can accommodate only about 700 cars an hour. At that rate with two people in each car, it would take nearly 11 hours to evacuate the island.

"Another problem is that a majority of the residents are not aware of the full force of a major hurricane," he said. "Of the 55 million who live along Florida's coasts, 43 million have never seen the fury of a tropical storm."

Frank is scheduled to deliver his speech before about 200 scientists, educators and researchers.

SPRING INTO SPRING, a dog owned by Todd Trautner of Arlington Heights romps outdoors in balmy temperatures. Thermometers in the suburbs inched upward to 46 degrees Wednesday.

Attendant's job fits new lifestyles

by LYNN ASINOF

Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bette Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 28-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot 1 you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

"The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

FLIGHT TRAINEES use mock-ups of real planes to learn public address announcements, food service and safety. Plaster food is used in most courses, but in one course trainees actually practice on a real roast beef and green salad.

Caplings grateful: Rex coming to U.S. soil

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND the remains of 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubt that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she bears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners were released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over.

"What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering,"

Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

WINTER'S LAST snow slowly melts away revealing the rich earth below. More snow will be disappearing throughout the Northwest suburbs this weekend as spring temperatures take hold. The thermometer is expected to reach into the 50s during the day and drop into the 30s at night. The area won't be without moisture, however. Scattered showers are expected to dampen some weekend plans.

Attorneys ask separate trial for Columbo

Defense attorneys for accused murderess Patricia Columbo are expected to request separate trials for her and Frank DeLuca at a court hearing Tuesday.

William Swano, assistant Cook County Public Defender for Miss Columbo, said among the motions he likely will submit in Cook County Circuit Court will be one requesting a separate trial for his client April 4.

Swano Wednesday refused to confirm or deny earlier reports that a separate trial for Miss Columbo will be requested so that she may testify as a defense witness at DeLuca's murder trial.

MICHAEL J. TOOMING, DeLuca's defense attorney, Wednesday said he has not decided whether he also will request a separate trial for his client.

The motions will be heard by Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham at the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

The Columbo-DeLuca case is in its final pretrial hearings, preparing for the April 4 trial in Pincham's courtroom.

Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 39, are charged in the May 4, 1976, murders of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca appeared in court Tuesday morning, where Pincham denied a defense motion for a bill of particulars to be turned over by prosecutors of the Cook County state's attorney's office.

THE BILL OF particulars would have enumerated dates and times of the crimes for which Miss Columbo and DeLuca are accused.

Still pending are defense motions to suppress statements collected by police from the defendants and requests to quash the defendants' arrests and suppress evidence.

Also pending in the Illinois Supreme Court is an appeal filed by prosecutors of a refusal by Pincham to order Miss Columbo and DeLuca to produce handwriting and blood samples.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, are collecting clippings of newspaper reports about the case to determine whether pretrial publicity has jeopardized Miss Columbo's and DeLuca's right to a fair trial.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each in the Cook County Jail, Chicago.

Ex-con tied to Ariz. fraud

by United Press International

In the eleventh copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said Ned Warren Sr., an ex-convict who arrived in Arizona in 1961, has been a dominant figure in Arizona's land boom and has participated in various land frauds.

The IRE article said:

• As puppet master of a maze of corporations, Warren refined land fraud into a multimillion dollar industry that spawned an army of imitators. He proved to have a shrewd eye for making friends, especially rising political stars, sometimes cutting them in on land deals.

• When real estate commissioner J. Fred Talley resigned under fire, Arizona learned the sordid side of the land fraud business — the corruption of public officials with payoffs and bribes. Bribers apparently had little trouble finding takers.

• One source who partied with Talley, Warren and Associates said: "Anybody that could be bought, their name was brought up at the parties. They found so many people here at such low prices — I'm surprised how cheap some of these local people went. If they would have held off a little bit, they could have got some big money."

• Until recently, Warren operated with virtual impunity. While a few associates went to prison, Warren darted from one corporate entity to another like a broken field runner, several steps ahead of the prosecutors.

"I LIKE TO BUILD up companies for 18 months or so and then sell them and walk away from them," he told IRE reporters. That was his explanation for why he remained free while others were convicted: The projects that went bad, such as Cochise College Park, Lake Montezuma and Great Southwest Land & Cattle Co., were all projects he technically had sold to his colleagues, who then ran them into the ground.

But in most instances, he actually directed those companies in various consultant capacities.

The IRE is a group of 300 investigative journalists who sponsored nearly 10 journalists from 25 news organizations who spent six months probing crime in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

Mexican drug trafficking big time

by KENNETH F. ENGLADE

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK, Tex. (UPI) — All manner of goods come north across the 1,300 miles of Rio Grande that form the boundary between the United States and Mexico.

From pot to parrots, mescaline to monkeys, the smugglers bring them. Most common of all is drugs: marijuana, heroin, cocaine, hashish, uppers and downers, LSD, PCP and MDA.

Illegal drugs are coming across in such volume and in areas so hard to watch, at times the traffic resembles a flood. Most experts figure less than 10 per cent of the smugglers are being caught.

"IT'S OBVIOUS we're not winning (the war against traffickers)," said R. B. Hacker, the head of the narcotics section of the Texas Dept. of Public Safety in Austin. "But the fact we exist and they know it helps."

Mexican drug-running pays a return of up to 8 to 1 on the buyer's investment. At those odds, it's an expanding market.

"You can get a ton of weed (marijuana) for about $25 a pound in Mexico," said Marx Howell, a bankerish looking captain who works for Hacker. "In Texas, it will sell for $100-$120 a pound so that's $240,000 on a $50,000 investment."

"If you move it to Chicago, you can get $200 a pound and now you have $400,000 gross return."

THOMAS A. BAILEY, head of the U.S. Customs Service Air Support Branch in San Antonio, Tex., put it another way: "If you're going to smuggle, you might as well make money."

He said a good pilot willing to take a few chances can clear $500,000 tax free each year. Or at least until his luck runs out.

Luck means mainly surviving low-level, nighttime flights, zigzagging through 8,000-foot-tall peaks or swimming so close to the ground branches dangle from the wheels.

"One guy used to come in with twigs in his landing gear. He was about one-half crazy and one-half nervy. He's dead now. He had too much nerve for his ability," Bailey said.

Bailey figures about one-third of the goods smuggled into Texas from Mexico are coming in by air, and about 80 per cent of that is narcotics.

IT IS NOT MUCH of a problem for someone to rent or buy a small plane, find a backer and set himself up as a smuggler.

Bjorn Finnseth was stuffing sausages at a plant in Houston and figuring it was a good life for a ex-crop-duster when one of his co-workers came up with an idea.

"You can make a lot of money flying dope in from Mexico," the man told Finnseth.

The Norwegian like the idea. Finnseth made a couple of trips, leaving from a small strip in South Texas, flying into the interior of Mexico and putting down on a brush-cleared runway.

He would load up with dope, refuel his plane and fly back, slipping across the Rio Grande just above the ground to escape radar detection.

FOR AWHILE things went smoothly for Finnseth along the vast, hard-to-patrol border. His undoing was traveling too fast.

Returning from a flight south of the border one night, Finnseth reported by radio, a routine procedure which made the flight look legitimate. However, the identification number he used belonged to a Cessna 172, and he was flying too fast to be piloting a 172.

When Finnseth put down for fuel, agents were waiting. They searched his plane and found a load of marijuana.

Finnseth agreed to fly the load on to his regular point of delivery and officers made more arrests. In all, they got 21 indictments. Finnseth served two years and was deported.

But most smugglers are not caught. "The chances are about 95 per cent someone can get away with it on a one-time basis if he doesn't get ripped off in Mexico," Bailey said. The fact is, though, most dope flyers become greedy and with each repeat trip increase their chances of detection and arrest.

"The one-time operator is almost nonexistent. They see the profit that can be made," he said. The problem, from the authorities' point of view, is enormous. It takes two days to drive from Brownsville to El Paso; two hours to fly it non-stop in a jetliner.

"It (the border) is an 800-mile-wide hole we're trying to fill," one drug agent said.

CAPT. WAYNE WINN JR., head of the Customs Service office in Big Bend National Park, shifted his chaw of tobacco, squirmed in the passenger seat of the Dodge Ramcharger and smiled.

"Out here, people have to drive 50 miles to do their grocery shopping," he said. It is 83 miles to the nearest U.S. liquor store.

Big Bend, as big as the shape of Rhode Island, is a triangular-shaped area of rocks, peaks, cactus and yucca pointing like an arrowhead into Mexico.

Nestled in a treeless high desert between El Paso and the lower Rio Grande Valley, the park was created in one of the more thinly populated and stark areas of Texas.

The Rio Grande twists for 107 miles along two sides of the park. It is crossed hundreds, if not thousands, of times daily by North American tourists and Mexican nationals even though there is no bridge.

IN 1976, more than 1,000 persons a day flocked to the area, most of them tourists.

But an ever-increasing number come because the smugglers of drugs from Mexico have discovered the park is an almost ideal marketplace for their wares.

Park officials and federal drug agents, at first undermanned and outmaneuvered, say their forces are growing and are better equipped to fight the illegal importers and their buyers.

Big Bend is one of the few national parks in the country where the rangers wear pistols and carry slug-loaded shotguns.

The park's location and the Old West tradition, combined with its excellent roads and a constantly changing population, make it one of the southwest's prime areas for smuggling and the violence that sometimes accompanies cash transactions.

At least twice in the last three years drug deals have erupted in shootouts between officers and Mexicans. One officer, a criminology student from nearby Sul Ross State University acting as a volunteer undercover agent, was killed last year.

New team in race for park board seats

A second team of candidates including lame-duck Village Trustee Melvin E. Timmons has formed in the hotly-contested Hoffman Estates Park Board race.

Timmons, Steven Cohen and Ray (Bud) Kimble have joined forces in their bids for three of the six seats to be filled in the April 15 election, they confirmed.

They are all active with the local Republican Party, but Cohen said the joint campaign is nonpartisan.

"AS FAR AS IT having any political bearing on it, not really," he said. "I just know the guys from that."

Meanwhile, the endorsements are flying: The Republican Party of Hoffman Estates is recommending 11 of the 15 candidates as "qualified." Park Board Pres. George Rush backed Diane Foley and incumbent Thomas McGuire; and former Comr. Tony Stompanato is throwing his support behind Charles Loveisky and Gerald Lavey.

Kimble said his team has begun printing literature jointly and that the three candidates share similar views.

"We feel we can work together, and that's part of it," he said.

TIMMONS SAID he bases his association with Cohen and Kimble on their approval of his four-point platform, which calls for a balanced budget, freedom from special interest groups, inter-governmental cooperation and an "aggressive program of recreational development within our potential financial ability."

The provision for freedom from special interest groups is essential, Timmons said, because he believes there are two or three candidates who are tied to special organizations. He refused to identify them, however.

"When a candidate is committed to a group, all I can see is when that candidate is elected, he is a puppet," Timmons said.

He added that he showed his "platform" to Kimble and Cohen and they agreed to it.

"I WOULD VERY much like to have them serve with me," he said.

A week ago, Cohen had endorsed Timmons and Kimble, saying he would "like to see them get elected," but at that time he flatly ruled out any possibility of running as a team because, he said, it could create factionalism on the new board.

He said he changed his mind because he now doesn't believe a joint campaign such as the one he has joined would necessarily be factional.

"I did not want to create any friction," he said, "but I think in this case, you have such a loose platform, and I don't think anybody who gets elected will disagree with those points."

THE REPUBLICAN Party left only Mrs. Foley, Robert Kaplan, Philip Philbin and Robert Neis off its list of "qualified" candidates.

However, William Weaver of the organization said that that does not mean the party views those four candidates as unqualified.

"We have no comment on the other four because we did not interview them," he said.

The "qualified" recommendations apparently mean the party has dropped its plans to endorse candidates, Weaver said.

"WE WOUND UP not endorsing," he said. "I guess we found that all 11 were qualified. Let's leave it at that."

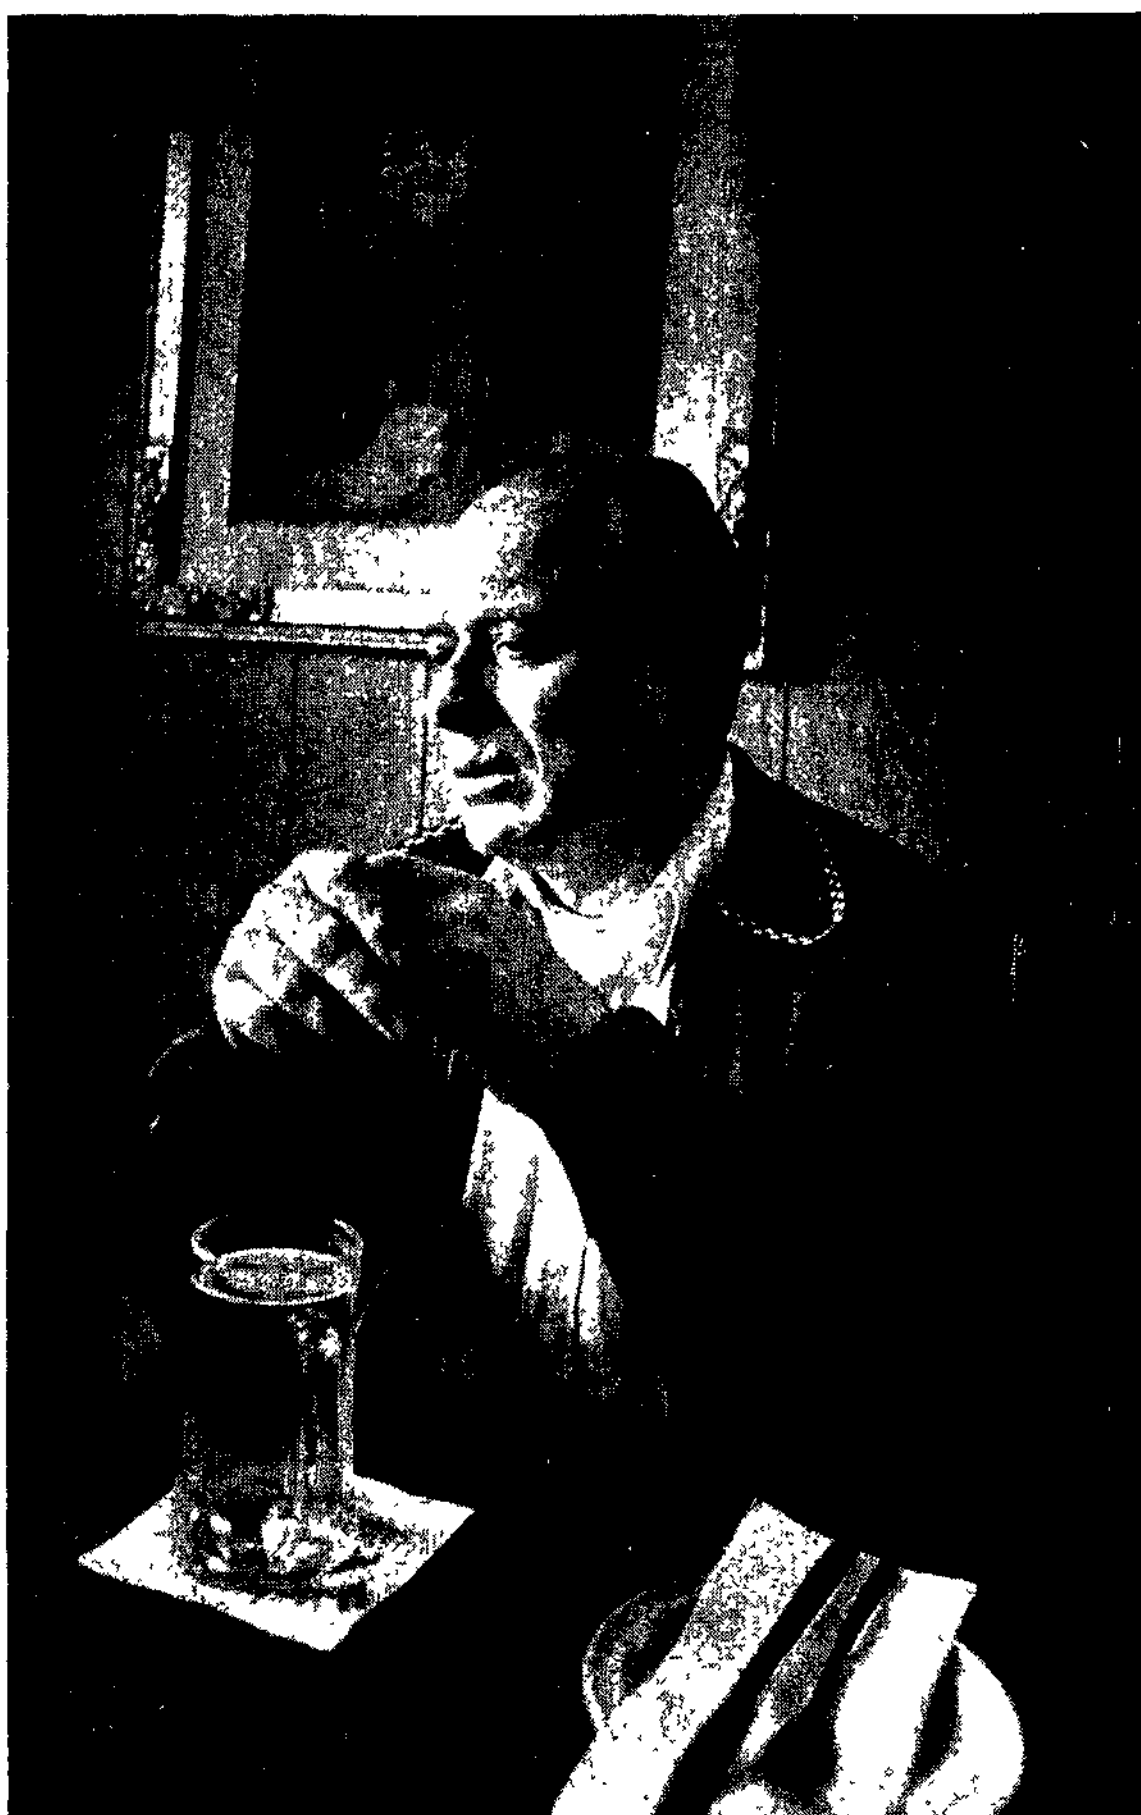

Rush said he endorsed Mrs. Foley and McGuire because they discussed their positions with him and asked for his endorsement.

"They seem to be very aggressive and very positive to the park district, and I'm pushing the positive candidates," Rush said.

Earlier, he had endorsed the joint campaign of Samuel Cannon and Joseph Crawford.

Stompanato's endorsements were the first he has made in the campaign.

He said he believes Loveisky has the background necessary to help control and direct efficient programming and that "Lavey will bring financial strength, community concern and openness to the park board. His financial and management experience will get the park district on the right track of servicing the needs of the entire community."

STILL WORKING to get his brother a new trial, writes letters and talks about the holes in the gov-

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

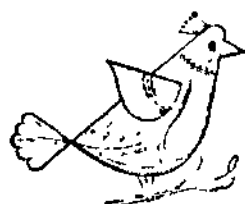

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the asassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was (Continued on Page 3)

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alford Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

TIMOTHY KING

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnappings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkeley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying. "We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

Woman free on bond in apartment slaying

Armetha Shouse, charged with the Saturday night slaying of a 32-year-old Schaumburg man, posted bond Wednesday in Schaumburg court and went home with her husband to await a grand jury hearing on the incident April 12 in Des Plaines.

Mrs. Shouse, 34, allegedly used a gun to threaten Andras Gyerman, 21, who is charged with sexually molesting Mrs. Shouse's 15-year-old daughter. A bystander, Luke L. Bishop, was shot and killed when Mrs. Shouse allegedly fired the gun.

Gyerman also appeared Wednesday in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court, where he requested and received a continuance in pretrial hearings to 9:30 a.m. April 30 in the Schaumburg court.

GYERMAN THEN was returned to Cook County Jail, Chicago, where he is being held in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Mrs. Shouse, Gyerman and Bishop all lived at the Town Square Apartments, 300 S. Roselle Rd., where the shooting occurred.

Mrs. Shouse, who had been arrested shortly after the shooting, was freed Monday on her own recognizance on the condition she return Wednesday to post a $5,000 bond. She is charged with murder and unlawful use of a weapon.

She was discharged Wednesday from the psychiatric unit of Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, where she had been taken Monday suffering from emotional stress because of the incident, authorities said. She was kept in the Schaumburg police lockup Saturday night and Sunday.

GYERMAN HAD BEEN arrested on a charge of taking indecent liberties with a child after he allegedly molested Mrs. Shouse's daughter Saturday night just before the shooting incident.

Mrs. Shouse and Gyerman both appeared at 11 a.m. Wednesday before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante. LaPlante ordered Mrs. Shouse to appear April 12 when a Cook County grand jury convenes at the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Shouse also waived her right to a preliminary hearing, LaPlante said.

Attorneys ask separate trial for Columbo

Defense attorneys for accused murderess Patricia Columbo are expected to request separate trials for her and Frank DeLuca at a court hearing Tuesday.

William Swano, assistant Cook County Public Defender for Miss Columbo, said among the motions he likely will submit in Cook County Circuit Court will be one requesting a separate trial for his client April 4.

Swano Wednesday refused to confirm or deny earlier reports that a separate trial for Miss Columbo will be requested so that she may testify as a defense witness at DeLuca's murder trial.

MICHAEL J. TOOMING, DeLuca's defense attorney, Wednesday said he has not decided whether he also will request a separate trial for his client.

The motions will be heard by Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham at the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

The Columbo-DeLuca case is in its final pretrial hearings, preparing for the April 4 trial in Pincham's courtroom.

Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 30, are charged in the May 4, 1976, murders of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael, at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca appeared in court Tuesday morning, where Pincham denied a defense motion for a bill of particulars to be turned over by prosecutors of the Cook County state's attorney's office.

THE BILL OF particulars would have enumerated dates and times of the crimes for which Miss Columbo and DeLuca are accused.

Y'all come, park district says

Handicap center opens Friday

Now all the Hoffman Estates Park District can do is wait to see how many handicapped persons turn out.

It was five months ago that the district's special recreation committee proposed the idea of a drop-in center for physically handicapped adults.

It would be a place for handicapped persons from throughout the Northwest suburbs to meet once a month to socialize.

THE DISTRICT'S main recreational facility, the Voegel Barn, has been modified slightly to make it accessible to the handicapped. The washroom doors were adjusted; a ramp for wheel chairs has been installed.

The Northwest Special Recreation Assn., a cooperative of 13 area park districts, mailed fliers to hospitals and special groups such as United Cerebral Palsy and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

And to get people out to the first session, the committee decided it would need some added incentives. Committee member Peter Smith, himself confined to a wheel chair, plans to teach disco dancing. Bruce Karr, coach of the Chicago Sidewinders wheel chair basketball aquad, was invited to teach ping pong.

The date has been set: 8 to 11 p.m. Friday at the Voegel Barn, 650 W. Higgins Rd.

EDWARD HAAG, recreation superintendent, is waiting to see whether the handicapped will respond to the opportunity. He says he has no idea how many persons from outside Hoffman Estates will attend; he has no idea, he says, how many persons will attend at all.

"We know there're people out there," he says. "It's just difficult reaching them at times."

The center is geared toward reaching handicapped persons who otherwise have few social contacts, Smith says, but such persons are difficult to find because they have little social contact.

"We want to provide them a chance to get out of their homes into a social setting," Haag says. "It gives them a central location where they know they can get together and hopefully organize an active club."

"They don't have a place to go to meet each other, one on one."

BUT THE CENTER is going to be used for much more, he adds. Programming for handicapped individuals is just beginning to take shape in the Northwest suburbs, due mainly to a new special recreation tax permitted by the state.

In addition to designing the over-all structure for the drop-in center, participants will be asked for suggestions on other programs, Haag says.

There is no charge for the drop-in center. Haag suggests persons with transportation problems contact the special recreation association at 394-4948 or 394-4910. The get-togethers for persons age 16 and older will revolve around informal conversation, cards and table games in addition to the special events.

PR director to be hired by Dist. 54

by PAM BIGFORD

A public relations director will be hired to improve school-community relations in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54.

The board of education approved $10,000 in a budget workshop this week as an initial commitment to hiring a director and setting up a communications department. The administration was directed to establish the department's needs and return to the board with a total price tag.

Man satisfactory after fatal crash

A Schaumburg man was in satisfactory condition at Elmhurst Memorial Hospital in Elmhurst Wednesday following a two-car collision Tuesday on the Tri-State Tollway that killed a Minnesota man.

A car driven by Lawrence Dyb, 41, of Schaumburg, was struck by a truck driven by Harold Zimmer, 25, of Bloomington, Minn., Tuesday night. The truck then crashed through a guard rail at the tollway overpass near Bensenville, Illinois State police said.

Zimmer was trapped in the truck for 90 minutes before rescuers were able to free him and take him to Resurrection Hospital, Chicago, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

"The administration has spent quite a bit of time this year trying to solicit feedback from parents," said board.

He said that the district's citizen advisory committee determined in a recent survey that about half the community does not have children in Dist. 54 schools. Reaching out to all of the community will be a priority, he said.

SCHAIBLE SAID the director could be in charge of a hotline system so residents would have one place to direct questions about the district. He said he also hopes to improve internal district communication through use of the director.

The $10,000 for the director position was part of $193,000 added to the education fund by the board in the workshop.

The district estimates about a $527,000 surplus in that fund for 1977-78, a $200,000 change from initial budget figures earlier this month because of further budget refinement. The additional $193,000 will bring the surplus back down to about $334,000.

Other items in the $193,000 addition are $81,250 for six full-time and one half-time health teachers to meet state requirements for a health program; $46,500 for special education teachers and aides needed because of enrollment growth; $6,000 for in-service training for teachers, and $12,500 each for one music, one art and two gifted education teachers. The additional teachers in music and art would restore the cutbacks made in those programs last year for financial reasons.

member Margaret Pageler. "We've found we need to keep in closer touch with parents and other district residents."

SUPT. WAYNE Schaible said there has been some concern about getting more information out to the public for some time. The administration recommended adding a public relations director two years ago but it was not one of the board's priorities at that time, he said.

"There has been more and more need for this position as we've kept growing," Schaible said. Dist. 54, with 28 schools, is the largest elementary school system in the state.

Schaible said the administration probably will recommend that the director be full-time, and the total cost of the communications department will include a half-time secretary as well as costs for printing materials and mailing.

Ex-con linked to Arizona fraud

by United Press International

In the eleventh copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said Ned Warren Sr., an ex-convict who arrived in Arizona in 1961, has been a dominant figure in Arizona's land boom and has participated in various land frauds.

The IRE article said: "As puppet master of a maze of corporations, Warren refined land fraud into a multimillion dollar industry that spawned an army of imitators. He proved to have a shrewd eye for making friends, especially rising political stars, sometimes cutting them in on land deals."

When real estate commissioner J. Fred Talley resigned under fire, Arizonans learned the sordid side of the land fraud business — the corruption of public officials with payoffs and bribes. Bribers apparently had little trouble finding takers.

One source who parted with Talley, Warren and Associates said: "Anybody that could be bought, their name was brought up at the parties. They found so many people here at such low prices — I'm surprised how cheap some of these local people went. If they would have held off a little bit, they could have got some big money."

Until recently, Warren operated with virtual impunity. While a few associates went to prison, Warren darted from one corporate entity to another like a broken field runner, several steps ahead of the prosecutors.

"I LIKE TO BUILD up companies for 18 months or so and then sell them and walk away from them," he told IRE reporters. That was his explanation for why he remained free while others were convicted. The projects that went bad, such as Cochise College Park, Lake Montezuma and Great Southwest Land & Cattle Co., were all projects he technically had sold to his colleagues, who then ran them into the ground.

But in most instances, he actually directed those companies in various consultant capacities.

The IRE is a group of 300 investigative journalists who sponsored nearly 40 journalists from 25 news organizations who spent six months probing crime in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles

$844 million sought for drought assistance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter asked Congress Wednesday for $844 million in loans, grants and assistance for drought-stricken communities and farmers in the West and Midwest.

Carter asked Congress for quick action, but stressed the only hope for immediate relief in many cases is water conservation. He said the government must lead the way in conserving water.

"The human and economic costs of the drought have been high," Carter said in a message to Congress.

"IT HAS JEOPARDIZED municipal water supplies, damaged crops and pastures and depleted livestock numbers. The drought has inflicted finanial hardships on countless farmers, ranchers, businessmen and others and it continues to pose a serious threat to their livelihood."

Carter proposed $550 million in loans, at 5 per cent interest, $250 million in outright grants, and $44 million in supplemental funds for energy, reclamation and irrigation projects.

The President also directed the agriculture secretary to make sure trained firefighters and equipment are available to meet the increased danger of forest fires.

And he directed the secretaries of agriculture and interior to make more federal land available for grazing.

CARTER ANNOUNCED the signing of a bill to appropriate $200 million in the supplemental 1977 budget for disaster relief activities. This appropriation and his proposals, he said, would provide nearly $1 billion and bring to almost $2 billion the over-all federal assistance for drought relief.

"In addition, we can encourage water conservation through several existing government programs," Carter said. "In many cases, water conservation is our only hope for immediate relief. As a nation, we must begin to conserve our water supplies and government — at all levels — must lead the way."

Rep. Dan Marriott, R-Utah, asked Interior Sec. Cecil Andrus in a House hearing whether it bothered him that the administration was making its drought proposal while trying to halt construction on western water projects.

"That doesn't bother me at all," Andrus said, adding the projects in question would "do nothing" to ease the current drought.

"The drought is today and the completion of the projects is sometime in the future," Andrus said when the subject came up again at a White House briefing.

Florida residents court disaster

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Residents of Florida's coastal areas, particularly the 3.4 million between Palm Beach and Miami, are courting disaster from a major hurricane, the director of the National Hurricane Center said.

"There are just too many people moving into our coastal areas and living on our off-shore islands," said Neil Frank, who has been with the hurricane center in Miami since 1960.

"I'm not sure if the National Hurricane Center could give them all adequate warning to escape a serious storm in time."

FRANK'S REMARKS, released this week, are part of a speech, "Can We Survive a Hurricane," prepared for delivery to a three-day symposium of the Florida Academy of Sciences at the University of Florida beginning today.

In many densely-populated areas of the state, bridges and roadways are inadequate to move all the people to safety in the event of an approaching storm, Frank said.

For example, he said, the two-lane bridge to Amelia Island off Fernandina Beach can accommodate only about 700 cars an hour. At that rate with two people in each car, it would take nearly 11 hours to evacuate the island.

"Another problem is that a majority of the residents are not aware of the full force of a major hurricane," he said. "Of the 5.5 million who live along Florida's coasts, 4.3 million have never seen the fury of a tropical storm."

Frank is scheduled to deliver his speech before about 200 scientists, educators and researchers.

Flight attendant job fits today's lifestyle

by LYNN ASINOF
Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 28-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

"The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

THAT'S WHY LOTS of people apply for training but few people quit the job. Only 378 of United's 8,000 flight attendants left last year. "We are now down to training pretty much for attrition," Buening said.

That, however, is an improvement over the past few years when no one was trained. United stopped training for about 2½ years when work force changes and the energy crunch left the airline with an oversupply of attendants.

This spring is the second class to go through since that freeze, and Buening said he thinks training will become "a very, very regular thing."

Training takes place in the spring at United because the heavy flying season is during the summer. This year the classes started in February and will run through June.

It's a once a year thing for United, but for many it's a lot more than that. It's a whole new way of life.

FLIGHT TRAINEES use mock-ups of real planes to learn public address announcements, food service and safety. Plaster food is used in most courses, but in one course trainees actually practice on a real roast beef and green salad.

Virginia and Kris Capling are grateful...

Rex is coming home to U.S. soil

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND the remains of 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubts that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she hears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners were released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over.

"What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering," Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

Emergency ruling sought on unit vote

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only

Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Cook County Circuit Court Judge George Schaller two weeks ago denied Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit.

According to current state law, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

The unit district would combine 21 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Parks want Cardinal; mull cost

The Rolling Meadows Park Board still wants to use the vacant Cardinal Drive School building, but commissioners say they don't know whether they can afford to buy or lease it.

Palatine Township Dist. 15 has rejected the board's offer of free ice time for students in exchange for use of the building at 2300 Cardinal Drive. School board members say they want to sell the building outright or lease it on a long-term basis.

Park Comm. Robert T. Byrnes, who has opposed the park district's plan, says he believes the school district's decision was a "wise and good" one. He says the park district cannot afford to buy or lease the building.

"That was the reason we went for the donation," he said. "I hope this will be the end of it."

BYRNES HAS SAID that even if the district obtained the school for free ice time, it could not afford the cost of renovating and maintaining the building.

Architects have estimated it would cost $62,000 to convert the building into administrative offices and recreational facilities. Operational costs are estimated at $20,000 per year.

Dist. 15 Board members could not estimate the price of the school because it must be sold at a public auction. The school was built for $385,830 in the late 1950s.

Park Board Pres. Jerry Hodlmair would not comment on whether the board would make another offer. "Any decision would have to be made by a majority of the commissioners," he said.

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customer."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alfred Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS. Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was (Continued on Page 3)

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnap-killings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force, that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying.

"We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

5 towns seek $1.5 million to speed fire, police calls

Five Northwest suburbs will seek approximately $1.5 million in funds to establish a central computer dispatching system for fire and police vehicles.

Buffalo Grove Fire Chief Wayne Winter said funds for the project are available from several federal agencies. The project also would establish a 911 emergency telephone number.

The five suburbs cooperating in the program are Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Rolling Meadows.

Winter said the main advantages of the computer system are speed and accuracy.

"IT IS FAR BETTER than the manual system. A computer will not make mistakes if it is fed the proper information," he said.

The proposed central dispatch center would be placed in the Arlington Heights Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Road, where the manually operated Northwest Suburban Central Dispatch Center is located.

The new system would computerize CDC and add fire departments to the system.

Winter said fire vehicles now are dispatched manually from each community's department.

"CENTRAL DISPATCHING is almost a must," he said. "We would provide non-jurisdictional response where the closest equipment would be sent. It will be a better and faster service."

Under the proposed system, citizens could report emergencies to an operator who would feed the information into a computer. The reports then would be made available on printout sheets from equipment that would be installed in fire and police vehicles.

Winter said the computer system would net a 50 per cent reduction in manpower costs.

"It would take twice as many dispatchers to do this manually on a centralized basis," he said.

Officials still are studying the plans for the system and do not know when the grant applications will be submitted. "It will be nice if we get it, but I don't believe it will be detrimental to the system if we don't," Winter said. "We will still try to sell it to the village boards."

Woman free on bond in apartment slaying

Arnelha Shouse, charged with the Saturday night slaying of a 32-year-old Schaumburg man, posted bond Wednesday in Schaumburg court and went home with her husband to await a grand jury hearing on the incident April 12 in Des Plaines.

Mrs. Shouse, 34, allegedly used a gun to threaten Andras Gyerman, 21, who is charged with sexually molesting Mrs. Shouse's 15-year-old daughter. A bystander, Luke L. Bishop, was shot and killed when Mrs. Shouse allegedly fired the gun.

Gyerman also appeared Wednesday in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court, where he requested and received a continuance in pretrial hearings to 9:30 a.m. April 30 in the Schaumburg court.

GYERMAN THEN was returned to Cook County Jail, Chicago, where he is being held in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Mrs. Shouse, Gyerman and Bishop all lived at the Town Square Apartments, 300 S. Roselle Rd., where the shooting occurred.

Mrs. Shouse, who had been arrested shortly after the shooting, was freed Monday on her own recognizance on the condition she return Wednesday to post a $5,000 bond. She is charged with murder and unlawful use of a weapon.

She was discharged Wednesday from the psychiatric unit of Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, where she had been taken Monday suffering from emotional stress because of the incident, authorities said. She was kept in the Schaumburg police lockup Saturday night and Sunday.

GYERMAN HAD BEEN arrested on a charge of taking indecent liberties with a child after he allegedly molested Mrs. Shouse's daughter Saturday night just before the shooting incident.

Mrs. Shouse and Gyerman both appeared at 11 a.m. Wednesday before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante. LaPlante ordered Mrs. Shouse to appear April 12 when a Cook County grand jury convenes at the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Shouse also waived her right to a preliminary hearing, LaPlante said.

PASSAGE OF NEW zoning in Prospect Heights could threaten Ben Solis' home-based construction business. The proposed laws place restrictions on the business and limit the number of animals homeowners can keep. The law has angered many residents.

Solis laments impact on his lifestyle

Country livin'—not under zone law

by DEBBE JONAK

Benedict Solis stared into his hand-built fireplace, which was crackling with the last few embers of a late morning fire.

He was worried.

Outside, his ducks and hens huddled in their small red barn, out of the snow covering his neatly landscaped acre-and-a-half.

Solis, his wife and three children have raised small farm animals for almost a decade. And they have planted a garden with a corn patch every year.

Solis built his house at 509 Grego Ct.

in the county so he could run his construction business from his home and his family could enjoy a country living.

But the country turned to city Jan. 31, 1976, when Prospect Heights was incorporated.

NOW SOLIS FEARS the new city's proposed zoning ordinance will change his and many of his neighbors' lives drastically.

All but three of the ducks and chickens would have to go. Three is the maximum number of animals permitted under the proposed law. The corn patch would violate plant height regulations.

But more importantly, the proposed zoning ordinance would force Solis to move his business from his home to a business site in another town — a change he said would cost him $15,000 annually.

"THIS WOULD FLATLY drive people out of town," Solis said, explaining incorporation campaigners promised residents could keep their home occupations if Prospect Heights became a city. Solis was an unsuccessful city council candidate.

Almost one in five Prospect Heights households have home businesses, Jack Cilligan, zoning commissioner, said at a recent public hearing on the ordinance.

The home business regulations are intended to retain the residential character of neighborhoods, Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said. Exposed equipment, large signs, large home classes and large buildings can compromise the atmosphere, he said.

Home operations for office work generally would not be in violation of the proposed regulations. Bases for tradesmen and small truckers, however, could face major changes, Solis said.

"FOR MANY OF THE tradesmen this means making a living or not making a living," he said. "They have used their home property as their base of operation."

The proposed ordinance would force tradesmen to establish their base elsewhere, he said.

If the new law is adopted, a businessman could not store or deliver any material requiring use of a commercial vehicle.

For instance, Solis said he could not perform emergency repairs on a customer's door at home because he would need his pickup truck to get it here and back.

He could not store a load of lumber overnight for an early morning job. He also could not park his pickup truck in his driveway — it would have to be parked in the garage or hidden from view in some other way.

THE SMALL AMOUNT of work he performs in a storage building would have to stop. The proposed ordinance would not allow use of an accessory building for home businesses.

While the ordinance would cut into their businesses, it also would hurt residents' home life, Solis said.

"Many people in the area raise pet rabbits, chickens — I've even seen some bee hives," he said. "This is why most of the people have half-acre lots — so we can do more things on them..."

"Some of the things we have done, probably did not concur with Cook County laws," he admitted. "However, they did not seem to enforce their codes. There seemed to be the thinking out here by small businessmen that it was OK."

Lax enforcement and less stringent laws are the factors that brought about the large number of home businessmen in Prospect Heights, he said.

ALTHOUGH PROSPECT Heights' proposed laws differ little from the county's, he expressed fear the city will enforce them — if not this administration, then maybe the next.

The city will have to deal with violation complaints, he said, warning. "As soon as some neighbor has an ax to grind with another neighbor, it's a cute way to look into the ordinance for harassment or revenge."

Solis and his neighbors live together harmoniously. No one has complained about his business, his pets or his plantings, he said. And when a nearby residents' rabbit hops over to his door or when he awakens to the call of a distant rooster, he does not complain. He enjoys it. And he wants to keep on enjoying it.

Parks want Cardinal; mulls cost

The school board's decision and believes the park district is the "logical user of the building." He also believes the ice-time offer was a good one.

"Considering the condition of the building, I think our offer was reasonable," he said. "We can't just walk in and use it; it needs a lot of remodeling."

Comr. Gregory Rose says he believes the park district still is interested in obtaining the building, but added, "I don't know if it's still feasible."

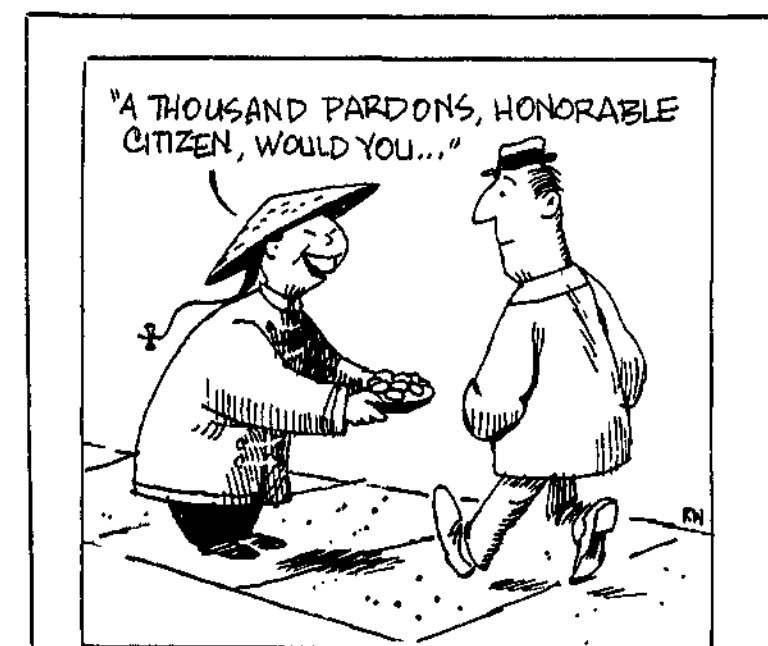

Rose, Hodmair and Comr. Camille Fruzyan favored the original proposal. Fruzyan declined to comment.

BYRNES SAID the park district does not need the building.

"We have adequate office space, and we have access to gym space at public schools," he said. "I think the best thing for the school district is to try to sell the building and get some money in their pockets. Otherwise they'll have to tear it down."

Jim Fischer, recreation supervisor and assistant ice arena manager, said he is surprised at the school board's decision. "I think it was a good offer (the ice-time offer)," he said. "I think it would have been a learning experience for the kids."

"People are looking for more activities and we just don't have the space," Fischer said. "I think the people should be pushing for it too."

Rockford in dispute

Pump your gas? Dealers against it

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline dealers to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alford Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and

Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-service stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations

recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

Sidewalk along Colfax to post office to be built

A sidewalk on the north side of Colfax Street from Smith Street west to the Palatine Post Office will be built this spring. The cost of the project will be shared by the property owners.

An agreement between the three property owners, Peko Tile and Carpet, D. J. Properties and Plasticraft Die and Mold Corp. to pay for the estimated $14,340 walkway was reached following meetings with Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones.

Jones said the property owners have agreed to pay for the sidewalk without a special assessment. The sidewalk will be installed along five lots on the north side of Colfax Street, providing a walkway so pedestrians can walk to the post office.

JONES SAID THE work would be done this spring as part of the village's normal sidewalk replacement program. The village will receive bids soon on the cost of sidewalk replacement and the Colfax project will be included, he said.

The village's sidewalk replacement plan calls for residents and the village to split evenly the cost of replacing sidewalks which the village determines are in need of repair. Residents who wish to take part in the 50/50 sidewalk replacement program should call the village public works department, 358-7500, for information.

Jones also has asked the village administration to contact property owners on the south side of Colfax Street to see if they are interested in paying for a sidewalk along their property.

Plans for a sidewalk along Colfax Street to the post office have been discussed for more than three years. The sidewalk installation was part of a $1.4 million project to widen and improve Colfax Street but the plan was abandoned in 1974.

Interest in the sidewalk portion of the plan only was revived last year at the urging of residents, particularly senior citizens who said the lack of a sidewalk to the post office was a hazard for pedestrians.

School price discussion topic

A team of representatives from the village and Palatine Park District will meet tonight with the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education to negotiate a possible reduction in the $1.03 million selling price for old Palatine High School, 150 E. Wood St.

The meeting will be closed to the public. It is scheduled for 9:30 p.m. at the Dist. 211 administration building, 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

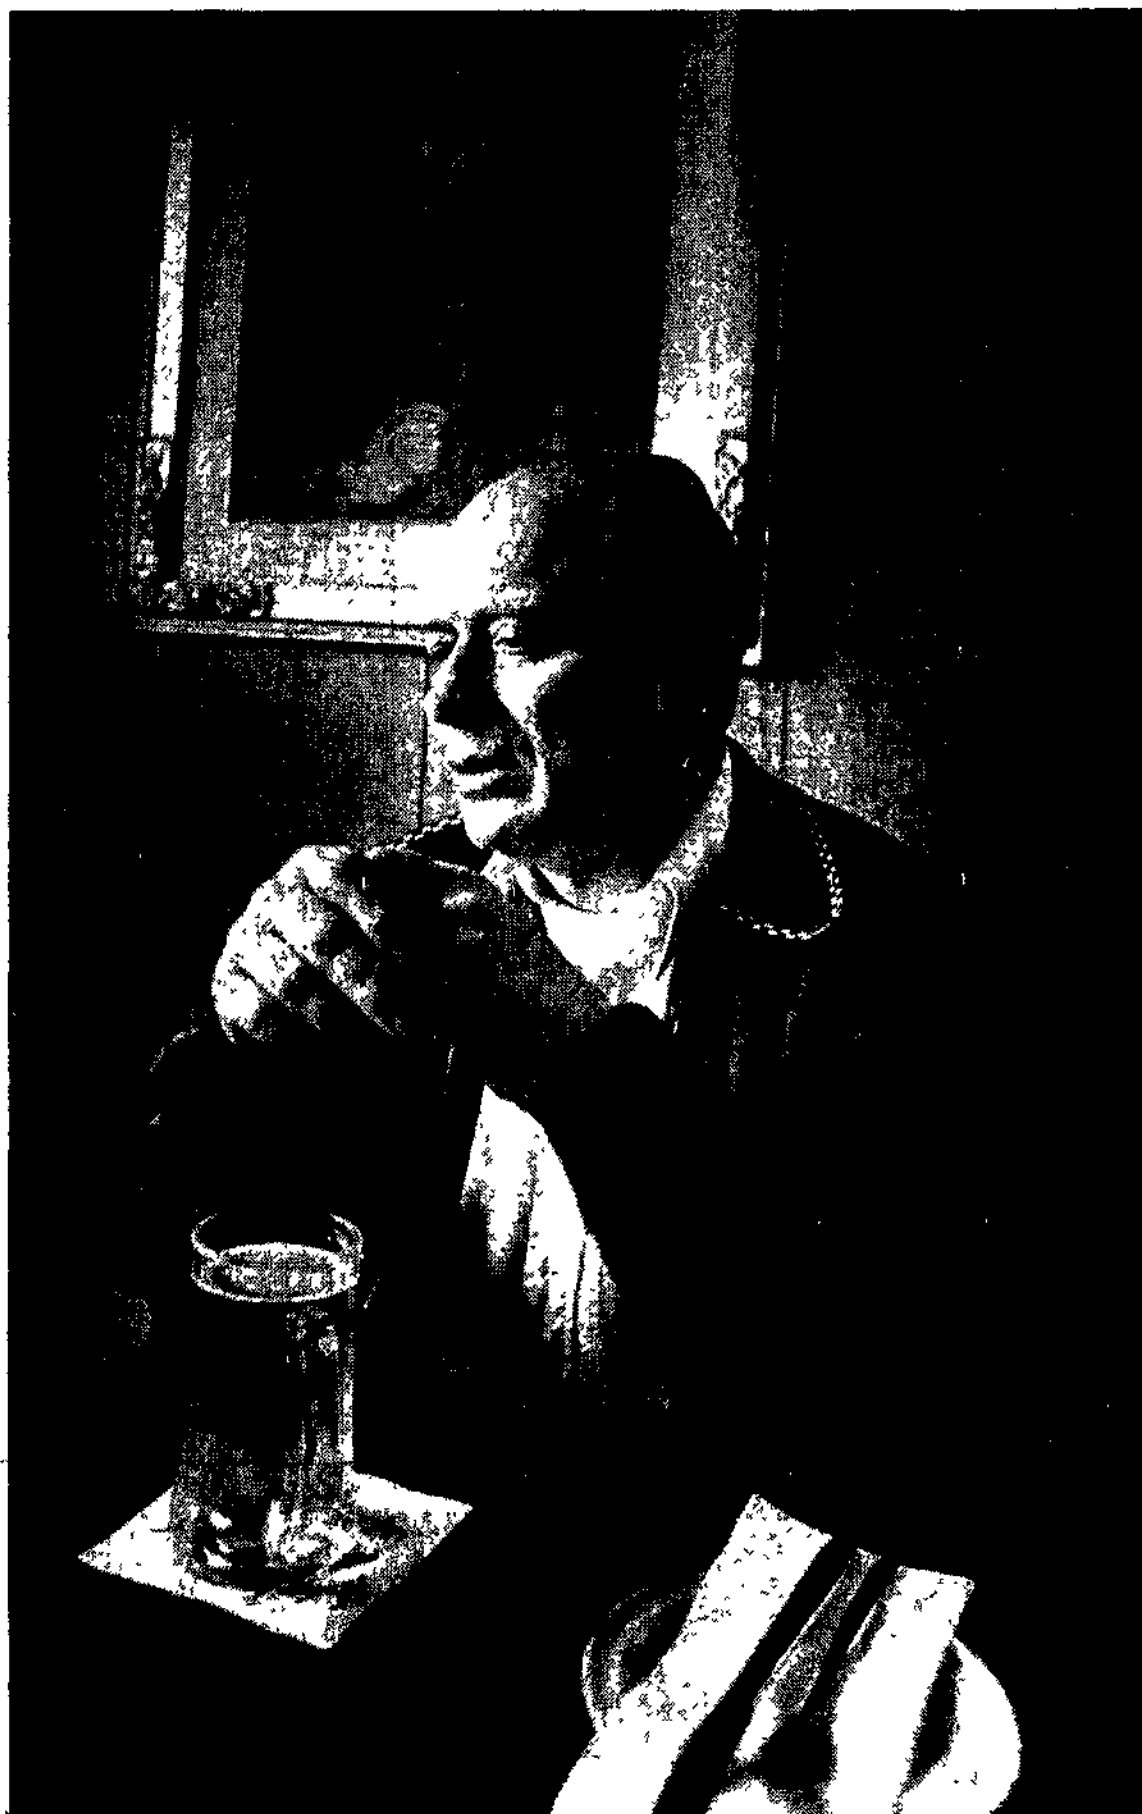

Village representatives will include Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones and Trustees Fred H. Zajonc and Robert J. Guss. Park board Pres. Walden Degner will represent the park district.

VILLAGE AND PARK district officials asked for the meeting with the school board in an attempt to negotiate a lower price for the school. The village and park district are interested in purchasing the 12.2-acre site, including Cutting Hall Auditorium, for use as a municipal center.

The school board in February set the $1.03 million price after village officials asked for a "rock bottom" figure. However, Jones and Degner said they believe the school board would be willing to reduce the price since the two governments have expressed serious interest in purchasing the site.

An architect's report has estimated it will cost about $4.3 million to renovate the school for use as a municipal center.

The school will be vacated in September when a new Palatine High School on Rohlfing Road north of the Winston Park subdivision is opened.

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

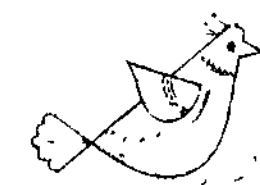

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

FOR A TIME BOTH Jerry and James lived in the suburbs. James worked in Winnetka while Jerry was (Continued on Page 3)

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnap-killings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying. "We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

Country living? Not with Prospect Hts. zoning law

by DEBBE JONAK

PASSAGE OF NEW zoning laws in Prospect Heights could threaten Ben Solis' home-based construction business. The proposed laws place restrictions on the business and limit the number of animals homeowners can keep. The law has angered many residents.

Benedict Solis stared into his hand-built fireplace, which was crackling with the last few embers of a late morning fire.

He was worried.

Outside, his ducks and hens huddled in their small red barn, out of the snow covering his neatly landscaped acre-and-a-half.

Solis, his wife and three children have raised small farm animals for almost a decade. And they have planted a garden with a corn patch every year.

Solis built his house at 509 Grego Ct. in the county so he could run his construction business from his home and his family could enjoy a country living.

But the country turned to city Jan. 31, 1976, when Prospect Heights was incorporated.

NOW SOLIS FEARS the new city's proposed zoning ordinance will change his and many of his neighbors' lives drastically.

All but three of the ducks and chickens would have to go. Three is the maximum number of animals permitted under the proposed law. The corn patch would violate plant height regulations.

But more importantly, the proposed zoning ordinance would force Solis to move his business from his home to a business site in another town — a change he said would cost him $15,000 annually.

"THIS WOULD FLATLY drive people out of town," Solis said, explaining incorporation campaigners promised residents could keep their home occupations if Prospect Heights became a city. Solis was an unsuccessful city council candidate.

Almost one in five Prospect Heights households have home businesses, Jack Gilligan, zoning commissioner, said at a recent public hearing on the ordinance.

The home business regulations are intended to retain the residential character of neighborhoods, Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said. Exposed equipment, large signs, large home classes and work buildings can compromise the atmosphere, he said.

Home operations for office work generally would not be in violation of the proposed regulations. Bases for tradesmen and small truckers, however, could face major changes, Solis said.

"FOR MANY OF THE tradesmen

this means making a living or not making a living," he said. "They have used their home property as their base of operation."

The proposed ordinance would force tradesmen to establish their base elsewhere, he said.

If the new law is adopted, a businessman could not store or deliver any material requiring use of a commercial vehicle.

For instance, Solis said he could not perform emergency repairs on a customer's door at home because he would need his pickup truck to get it here and back.

He could not store a load of lumber overnight for an early morning job. He also could not park his pickup truck in his driveway — it would have to be parked in the garage or hidden from view in some other way.

THE SMALL AMOUNT of work he performs in a storage building would have to stop. The proposed ordinance would not allow use of an accessory building for home businesses.

While the ordinance would cut into their businesses, it also would hurt residents' home life, Solis said.

"Many people in the area raise pet rabbits, chickens — I've even seen some bee hives," he said. "This is why most of the people have half-acre lots — so we can do more things on them."

"Some of the things we have done, probably did not concur with Cook County laws," he admitted. "However, they did not seem to enforce their codes. There seemed to be the thinking out here by small businessmen that it was OK."

Lax enforcement and less stringent laws are the factors that brought about the large number of home businessmen in Prospect Heights, he said.

ALTHOUGH PROSPECT Heights' proposed laws differ little from the county's, he expressed fear the city will enforce them — if not this administration, then maybe the next.

The city will have to deal with violation complaints, he said, warning. "As soon as some neighbor has an ax to grind with another neighbor, it's a cute way to look into the ordinance for harassment or revenge."

Solis and his neighbors live together harmoniously. No one has complained about his business, his pets or his plantings, he said. And when a nearby residents' rabbit hops over to his door or when he awakens to the call of a distant rooster, he does not complain.

He enjoys it. And he wants to keep on enjoying it.

Parks want Cardinal; mull cost

The Rolling Meadows Park Board still wants to use the vacant Cardinal Drive School building, but commissioners say they don't know whether they can afford to buy or lease it.

Palatine Township Dist. 15 has rejected the board's offer of free ice time for students in exchange for use of the building at 2300 Cardinal Drive. School board members say they want to sell the building outright or lease it on a long-term basis.

Park Comr. Robert T. Byrnes, who has opposed the park district's plan, says he believes the school district's decision was a "wise and good" one. He says the park district cannot afford to buy or lease the building.

"That was the reason we went for the donation," he said. "I hope this will be the end of it."

BYRNES HAS SAID that even if the district obtained the school for free ice time, it could not afford the cost of renovating and maintaining the building.

Architects have estimated it would cost $62,000 to convert the building into administrative offices and recreational facilities. Operational costs are estimated at $20,000 per year.

Dist. 15 Board members could not estimate the price of the school because it must be sold at a public auction. The school was built for $385,630 in the late 1950s.

Park Board Pres. Jerry Hodlmaier would not comment on whether the board would make another offer. "Any decision would have to be made by a majority of the commissioners," he said.

Hodlmaier says he is disappointed in the school board's decision and believes the park district is the "logical user of the building." He also believes the ice-time offer was a good one.

"Considering the condition of the building, I think our offer was reasonable," he said. "We can't just walk in and use it; it needs a lot of remodeling."

Comr. Gregory Rose says he believes the park district still is interested in obtaining the building, but added, "I don't know if it's still feasible."

Rose, Hodlmaier and Comr. Camille Fruzyan favored the original proposal. Fruzyan declined to comment.

BYRNES SAID the park district does not need the building.

"We have adequate office space, and we have access to gym space at public schools," he said. "I think the best thing for the school district is to try to sell the building and get some money in their pockets. Otherwise they'll have to tear it down."

Jim Fischer, recreation supervisor and assistant ice arena manager, said he is surprised at the school board's decision. "I think it was a good offer (the ice-time offer)," he said. "I think it would have been a learning experience for the kids."

"People are looking for more activities and we just don't have the space," Fischer said. "I think the people should be pushing for it too."

"A THOUSAND PARDONS, HONORABLE CITIZEN, WOULD YOU..."

Hein bets his fortune on a munchy message

William Hein would like you to think there is a Wheeling Citizens Party in your future.

And if you believe in fortune cookie messages, you'll be convinced. Hein and his party are passing out fortune cookies with political plugs inside at all their coffees and affairs.

When cracked open, the cookies reveal their message: "Vote Straight Wheeling Citizens Party, April 1977."

"It simply points out that the Wheeling Citizens Party has a lot of creative ideas," said Hein, always ready to get in a plug in his effort to become Wheeling village president.

"As you know, fortune cookies contain anecdotes or sayings which are on the positive side, wishing luck and happiness," he said. "It's our way of getting across our message."

HEIN AND HIS party are battling the Better Environment, Service and Trust (BEST) party and other independent candidates for village posts in the April 19 election. Other candidates for village president are Otis Hedlund BEST Party, and Edward Fox, an independent.

"We're using it as an attention-getting gimmick so people will know who we are and remember us when they go to vote," Hein said.

He said the reaction by the public has been "very good. They think it is cute and novel and gets the point across. It's symbolic of the Wheeling Citizens Party."

Hein said campaign manager Jack Metzger came up with the idea and ordered 300 of the cookies from Phoenix Fortune Cookie Co., Chicago. The party doesn't plan to order more. "Hopefully this will do the job," Hein said.

$844 million sought for drought assistance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter asked Congress Wednesday for $844 million in loans, grants and assistance for drought-stricken communities and farmers in the West and Midwest.

Carter asked Congress for quick action, but stressed the only hope for immediate relief in many cases is water conservation. He said the government must lead the way in conserving water.

"The human and economic costs of the drought have been high," Carter said in a message to Congress.

"IT HAS JEOPARDIZED municipal water supplies, damaged crops and pasture, and depleted livestock numbers. The drought has inflicted financial hardships on countless farmers, ranchers, businessmen and others and it continues to pose a serious threat to their livelihood."

Carter proposed $550 million in loans, at 5 per cent interest, $250 million in outright grants, and $44 million in supplemental funds for energy, reclamation and irrigation projects.

The President also directed the agriculture secretary to make sure trained firefighters and equipment are available to meet the increased danger of forest fires.

And he directed the secretaries of agriculture and interior to make more federal land available for grazing.

CARTER ANNOUNCED the signing of a bill to appropriate $200 million in the supplemental 1977 budget for disaster relief activities. This appropriation and his proposals, he said, would provide nearly $1 billion and bring to almost $2 billion the over-all federal assistance for drought relief.

"In addition, we can encourage water conservation through several existing government programs," Carter said. "In many cases, water conservation is our only hope for immediate relief. As a nation, we must begin to conserve our water supplies and government — at all levels — must lead the way."

Rep. Dan Marriott, R-Utah, asked Interior Sec. Cecil Andrus in a House hearing whether it bothered him that the administration was making its drought proposal while trying to halt construction on western water projects.

"That doesn't bother me at all," Andrus said, adding the projects in question would "do nothing" to ease the current drought.

"The drought is today and the completion of the projects is sometime in the future," Andrus said when the subject came up again at a White House briefing.

Florida residents court disaster

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Residents of Florida's coastal areas, particularly the 3.4 million between Palm Beach and Miami, are courting disaster from a major hurricane, the director of the National Hurricane Center said.

"There are just too many people moving into our coastal areas and living on our off-shore islands," said Neil Frank, who has been with the hurricane center in Miami since 1960.

"I'm not sure if the National Hurricane Center could give them all adequate warning to escape a serious storm in time."

FRANK'S REMARKS, released this week, are part of a speech, "Can We Survive a Hurricane," prepared for delivery to a three-day symposium of the Florida Academy of Sciences at the University of Florida beginning today.

In many densely-populated areas of the state, bridges and roadways are inadequate to move all the people to safety in the event of an approaching storm, Frank said.

For example, he said, the two-lane bridge to Amelia Island off Fernandina Beach can accommodate only about 700 cars an hour. At that rate with two people in each car, it would take nearly 11 hours to evacuate the island.

"Another problem is that a majority of the residents are not aware of the full force of a major hurricane," he said. "Of the 5.5 million who live along Florida's coasts, 4.3 million have never seen the fury of a tropical storm."

Frank is scheduled to deliver his speech before about 200 scientists, educators and researchers.

Flight attendant job fits today's lifestyle

by LYNN ASINOF
Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 28-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

"The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

THAT'S WHY LOTS of people apply for training but few people quit the job. Only 378 of United's 8,000 flight attendants left last year. "We are now down to training pretty much for attrition," Buening said.

That, however, is an improvement over the past few years when no one was trained. United stopped training for about 2½ years when work force changes and the energy crunch left the airline with an oversupply of attendants.

This spring is the second class to go through since that freeze, and Buening said he thinks training will become "a very, very regular thing."

Training takes place in the spring at United because the heavy flying season is during the summer. This year the classes started in February and will run through June.

It's a once a year thing for United, but for many it's a lot more than that. It's a whole new way of life.

FLIGHT TRAINEES use mock-ups of real planes to learn public address announcements, food service and safety. Plaster food is used in most courses, but in one course trainees actually practice on a real roast beef and green salad.

Virginia and Kris Capling are grateful . . .

Rex is coming home to U.S. soil

VIRGINIA CAPLING after her husband's body was released by Vietnam: "I just try to believe this is a beginning of an accounting."

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND the remains of 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubts that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she hears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners were released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over. "What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering," Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

Minton rips charge of 'big city' politics

Mount Prospect mayoral candidate Michael H. Minton Wednesday night denied charges he is using "big city" politics in his campaign.

Minton, denying the "unfounded allegations" made Tuesday by his opponent, Edward B. Rhea Jr., counter-attacked, saying Rhea has created controversial issues that do not exist.

"We have never accepted any financial assistance from any political groups inside or outside the boundaries of Mount Prospect," Minton told about 50 residents at a coffee at 1107 Alder Ln. "We have sought to broaden our support by reaching as many people in Mount Prospect as possible."

MINTON CRITICIZED Rhea for campaigning on "rumor, speculation and innuendo" rather than issues. He invited residents to his campaign headquarters, 601 W. Golf Rd., to study records of his supporters and contributions.

"I will not stoop to Mr. Rhea's level to conquer," Minton said. "He is more concerned with the title of mayor than with the duties, responsibilities and obligations that go with it. Mr. Rhea is reckless with the facts. He's got a reckless disregard for the truth."

The village must get "back to basics" by welcoming citizen involvement in all areas of local government," Minton said. He accused Rhea of ignoring matters important to Mount Prospect residents.

"It's unfortunate he has chosen to run his campaign in this manner," Minton said. "He is a flip-flop candidate who says different things to different people depending on who he is talking to and working with."

Minton said a key issue in the April 9 election is maintaining the present level of services by sharing and exchanging them with other towns, townships and social agencies. Cooperation with other Northwest suburban communities is essential for future acquisition of Lake Michigan water in the area, he said.

In addition to supporting the recently adopted downtown redevelopment plan and the purchase of Citizens Utilities Co. water and sewer lines, Minton pledged that he, as mayor, will vote on every matter considered by the village board. "It will be your checklist for my performance as mayor in the next four years." The mayor traditionally votes only to break a tie.

MINTON ALSO charged Carolyn H. Krause, a third mayoral candidate, with not standing behind her campaign promise to examine thoroughly the village and curtail run-away spending.

"Not one suggestion came from Mrs. Krause on how to cut one dollar" during a recent public hearing on the village's proposed $12.2 million budget for 1977-78, he said. "You've got to start looking not only at what a person says but at what they will do."

All three mayoral candidates are running as independents. Mrs. Krause is chairman of the zoning board of appeals, and Minton and Rhea have been trustees since 1975.

Country livin'—don't bet on it

by DEBBIE JONAK

Benedict Solis stared into his hand-built fireplace, which was crackling with the last few embers of a late morning fire.

He was worried. Outside, his ducks and hens huddled in their small red barn, out of the snow covering his neatly landscaped acre-and-a-half.

Solis, his wife and three children have raised small farm animals for almost a decade. And they have planted a garden with a corn patch every year.

Solis built his house at 509 Grego Ct. in the county so he could run his construction business from his home and his family could enjoy a country living.

Pump own gas? Station owners say it's bad idea

A Herald staff report

Service station operators in the Northwest suburbs say they don't support the idea of self-service gasoline pumps.

"Personally, if self-service was legal today I wouldn't do it. At least I wouldn't go to it right away," says Bob Franz, owner of Bob's Union 76, 5 W. Palatine Rd., Palatine. "I think you lose contact with the customers."

Franz's comments came after a brief self-service period in Rockford, where the issue was approached via home-rule powers. Later Wednesday, however, the self-service stations closed down voluntarily in a city licensing dispute.

A Circuit Court order this week upheld the Rockford ordinance permitting gasoline stations to offer self-service to their customers.

But Wednesday, Associate Winnebago County Circuit Court Judge Alfred Penniman ruled in a suit by city officials that the gas station operators had not received specific city approval to run self-service operations. Such approval is required under the National Fire Safety Code, so the owners shut down.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Palatine and Hoffman Estates, all home-rule communities, presumably could adopt similar ordinances.

Self-service gas is allowed in 47 other states, including all of the states surrounding Illinois. Gas at the self-service pumps is usually several cents cheaper a gallon than at the attended islands.

Local municipal leaders, however, are uncertain if their towns would use home-rule powers to adopt an ordinance permitting self-service gasoline pumps.

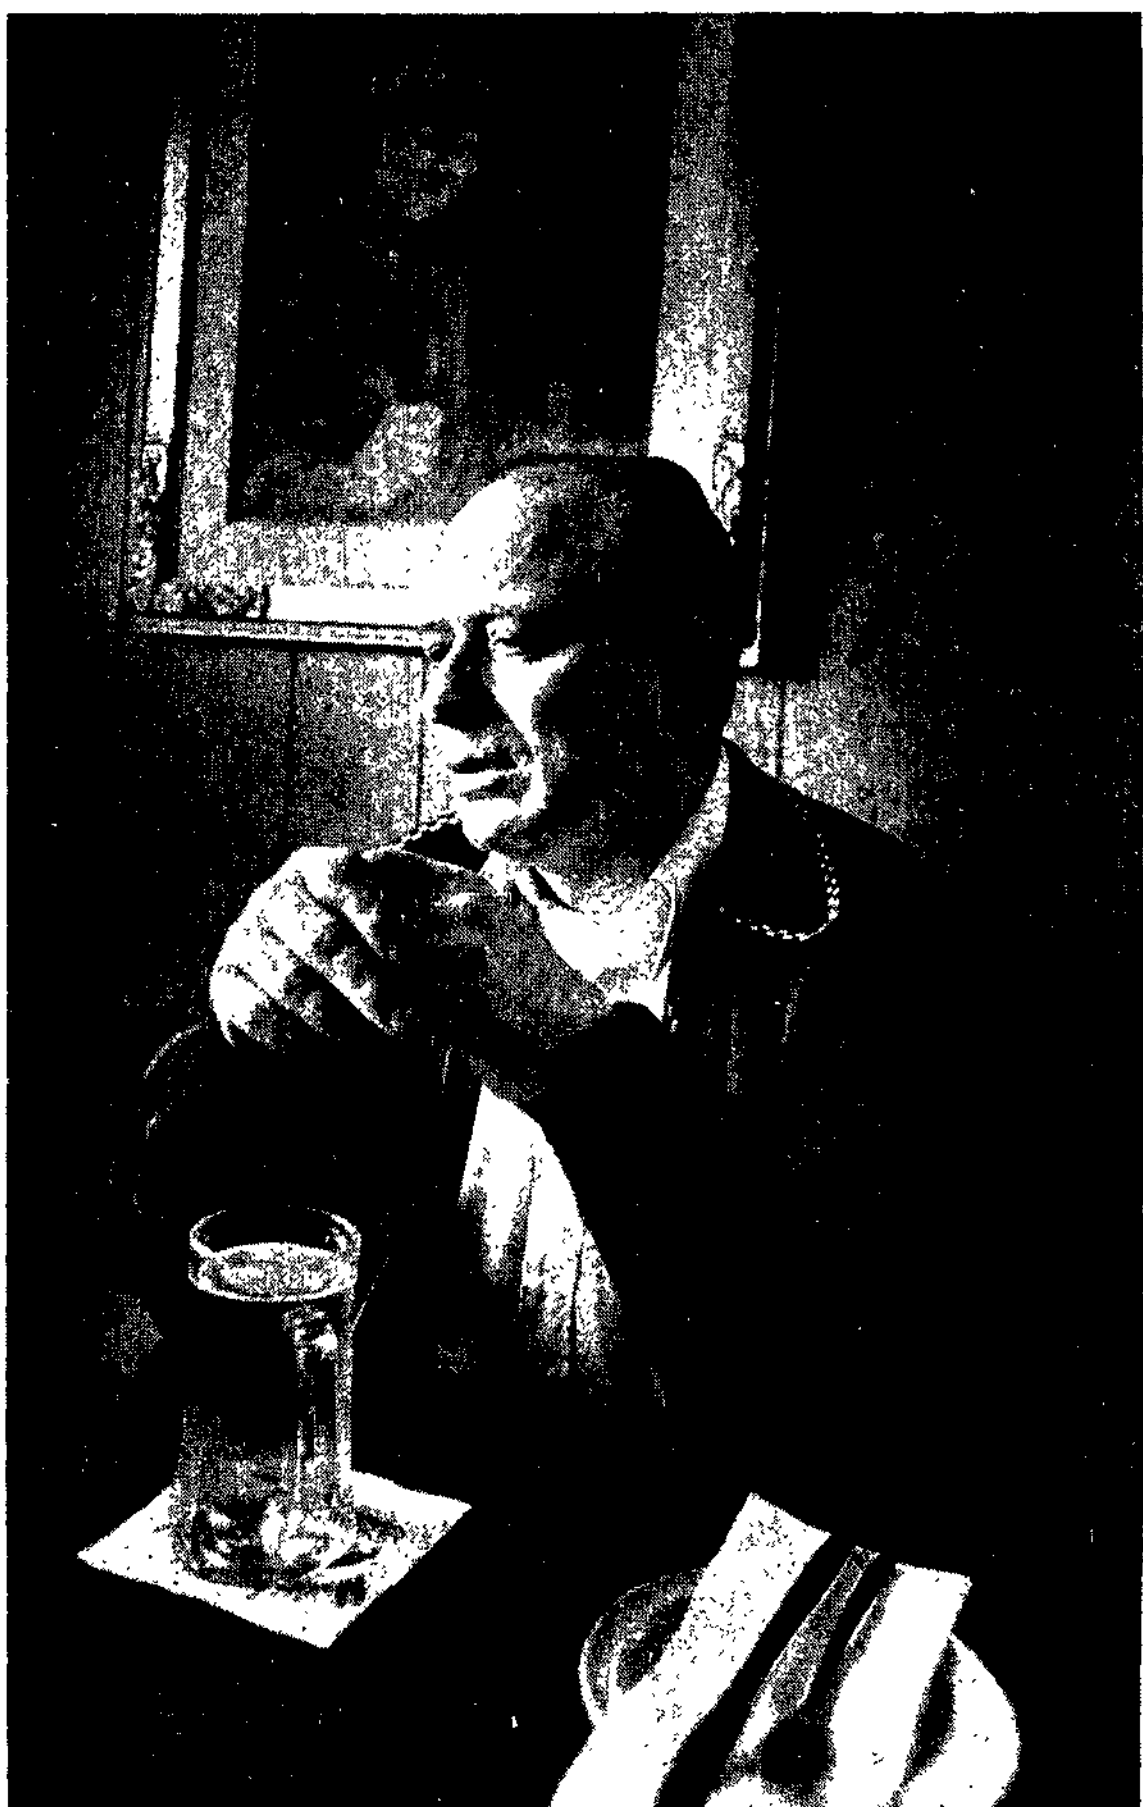

"If there were requests by gas stations for it, I'm sure we would look into it. But we would have to weigh it against the possible safety problems," says Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said he really had no opinion for or against self-serve stations.

ILLINOIS SERVICE stations recently have set up "mini-service" islands where the gasoline is cheaper, but where attendants do not clean the car windows or check the oil.

"We're already being hurt by the mini-service. We're pumping more gas and making less money," said Roger Grandt, owner of Grandt Shell, 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

"I don't think most people want self-service because 'self-service' means exactly that. I don't think the people are ready for it. For years, they've told us our business is service. Now they're telling us to do a sloppy job and just sell gallons," Grandt said.

The City of Des Plaines is considering a self-service ordinance proposed by Mayor Charles J. Bolek. The proposal was referred to a city council committee this week.

Jerry Ray seeks new trial for famous brother in jail

by STEVE BROWN

Sitting across a narrow table in a Lake Zurich bar, he speaks with certainty about the innocence of James Earl Ray, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr.

It is more than casual conversation for the middle-aged watchman, who works at a Lake County country club, because for nearly nine years, Jerry Ray has been involved in an effort to get a new trial for his brother.

Letters, telephone calls and trips to the Tennessee prison where his brother is confined have become a dominant part of his life.

"There ain't no doubt about it, if he can get a new trial, he will be out of jail," said the 41-year-old who admits he looks older than his 48-year-old brother.

LATELY, HIS largely peripheral role in the case has changed. A news magazine article contends Jerry is Raoul, the mystery figure James blames for the Memphis murder of the civil rights leader.

"I was working in Northbrook at the time and I have witnesses to prove it," Jerry said, noting he plans to sue the magazine for libel.

Names, dates and places roll off Jerry's tongue with apparent ease. He talks freely and specifically about the government's case against his brother and the efforts to refute the allegations.

"You get used to it and it comes to you," Jerry said.

While he is open about efforts to have James testify before the U. S. House committee investigating the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy, Jerry said there are a few facts he will not talk about.

"There are some things that we have kept between ourselves. You can't give them to an investigator because they will just leak them to the press and they can be covered up," he said.

Jerry has worked in the Chicago area since 1960, usually at golf courses, because "they give you room and board. I am single and you know what rents are." Besides work, Jerry said he spends several hours a day writing letters and watching television.

TIMOTHY KING

Boy's death tied to 3 others

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Police Wednesday linked the slaying of 11-year-old Timothy King to three earlier child kidnappings in Detroit's northern suburbs and said the boy had been sexually molested.

Police said that in all four slayings the killer bathed the bodies of the victims before disposing of them and, in all but one of the cases, left no visible marks of violence.

Three other suburban youngsters also have been abducted and killed in the area in the past 14 months.

TIMOTHY'S FULLY clothed body was dumped in a ditch Tuesday night — only hours after his death — alongside a lonely road in Livonia.

Police said he had been held captive for nearly a week, with his hands and feet bound for at least part of the time, following his abduction near a Birmingham drug store where he had bought a candy bar.

An autopsy showed the boy was suffocated — the same cause of death in two of the earlier slayings.

Police were operating on the theory that Timothy's assailant was the same person who abducted and killed Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkley, in January, Jill Robinson, 12, of Troy, in December, and Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale, in February 1976.

MISS ROBINSON was the only one of the four victims who was not suffocated. She died of a shotgun wound in the head inflicted at close range.

Stebbins was sexually molested. The two girls were not.

"We're operating under the (theory) that Mihelich, Stebbins, Robinson and King all are connected and they were committed by the same person," said State Police Lt. Robert Robertson, head of a special task force that has been investigating the slayings.

"We're going on the theory that one person was responsible, but we're not discounting the fact that there may have been a partner."

THE POLICE task force was virtually doubled in size following the latest slaying.

"We want to get that animal off the street," Birmingham Police Lt. Jack Kalbfleisch said.

Timothy's parents issued a public statement thanking police and others who helped in the weeklong search for their son.

"Our neighbors and friends surround us with love and made the time of waiting bearable," they said. "We are truly thankful for the prayers and concerns by everyone and for the respect and sensitivity accorded us by the media."

Emergency ruling asked on Dist. 59 unit vote

High School Dist. 214 is seeking an emergency court ruling on the constitutionality of the April 9 unit district referendum.

At the same time, the district also is seeking a preliminary injunction to delay the referendum until a ruling on its constitutionality is handed down.

Dist. 214 Atty. Gerald Brooks said a request for an emergency hearing on the constitutionality of allowing only Elk Grove Township residents to vote on establishing a unit school district within Dist. 214's boundaries will be filed in Illinois Appellate Court today.

If the lawsuit cannot be heard and ruled on within the next two weeks, Dist. 214 is asking for a preliminary injunction to stay the April 9 unit district referendum until the court can rule, Brooks said.

UNIT DISTRICT opponents will have until Monday to file written legal briefs with the court, Brooks said. Dist. 214's briefs will be filed today.

Brooks said he does not know whether the court will hear oral arguments in the case or rule on the written briefs.

"The law is so clear that anyone who reads it with any measure of comprehension has to rule in our favor," he said. "I'm very optimistic."

Cook County Circuit Court Judge George Schaller two weeks ago denied Dist. 214's request for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the lawsuit.

According to current state law, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote in the unit district referendum.

A BILL THAT would amend state law and allow all residents of Dist. 214 to vote in the referendum passed the Illinois House Education Committee Tuesday and may go to the full House this week. Senate committee hearings and Senate action is needed before the legislation can be presented to Gov. James Thompson.

The bill will become effective immediately if signed by Thompson.

Frozen axle stops train; traffic tied up

A Chicago and North Western Ry. commuter train tied up rush-hour traffic Wednesday evening in Arlington Heights when it stalled.

Police said an axle on the locomotive froze.

Police said the crew of train No. 631 from Chicago noticed problems in one of the axles after the train pulled out of Mount Prospect shortly before 6 p.m. The train made it to Arlington Heights before the axle froze.

The train, which ran on the south track, blocked crossings at Vail, Dunton and Evergreen avenues. Commuters were transferred to another northwest-bound train. Other out-bound trains were rerouted on the center track.

Crews uncoupled the locomotive and moved it west of the Vail Avenue crossing, opening the crossing to traffic.

Crews worked late Wednesday night to replace the axle.

Country livin'—not under new city zoning ordinance

31, 1976, when Prospect Heights was incorporated.

NOW SOLIS FEARS the new city's proposed zoning ordinance will change his and many of his neighbors' lives drastically.

All but three of the ducks and chickens would have to go. Three is the maximum number of animals permitted under the proposed law. The corn patch would violate plant height regulations.

But more importantly, the proposed zoning ordinance would force Solis to move his business from his home to a business site in another town—a change he said would cost him $15,000 annually.

"THIS WOULD FLATLY drive people out of town," Solis said, explaining incorporation campaigners promised residents could keep their home occupations if Prospect Heights became a city. Solis was an unsuccessful city council candidate.

Almost one in five Prospect Heights households have home businesses, Jack Gilligan, zoning commissioner, said at a recent public hearing on the ordinance.

The home business regulations are intended to retain the residential character of neighborhoods, Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said. Exposed equipment, large signs, large home classes and work buildings can compromise the atmosphere, he said.

Home operations for office work generally would not be in violation of the proposed regulations. Bases for tradesmen and small truckers, however, could face major changes, Solis said.

"FOR MANY OF THE tradesmen this means making a living or not making a living," he said. "They have used their home property as their base of operation."

The proposed ordinance would force tradesmen to establish their base elsewhere, he said.

If the new law is adopted, a businessman could not store or deliver any material requiring use of a commercial vehicle.

For instance, Solis said he could not perform emergency repairs on a customer's door at home because he would need his pickup truck to get it here and back.

He could not store a load of lumber overnight for an early morning job. He also could not park his pickup truck in his driveway—it would have to be parked in the garage or hidden from view in some other way.

THE SMALL AMOUNT of work he performs in a storage building would have to stop. The proposed ordinance would not allow use of an accessory building for home businesses.

While the ordinance would cut into their businesses, it also would hurt residents' home life, Solis said.

"Many people in the area raise pet rabbits, chickens—I've even seen some bee hives," he said. "This is why most of the people have half-acre lots—so we can do more things on them."

"Some of the things we have done, probably did not concur with Cook County laws," he admitted. "However, they did not seem to enforce their codes. There seemed to be the thinking out here by small businessmen that it was OK."

Lax enforcement and less stringent laws are the factors that brought about the large number of home busi-

Zone hearings

to end this week

Public hearings on Prospect Heights' proposed zoning ordinance will end this week.

The last two will be at 7:30 p.m. today and at 9 a.m. Saturday, both held by the zoning commission at the Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 W. Camp McDonald Rd.

Residents challenging home business and recreational vehicle regulations are expected at both meetings. Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said his group will discuss residents' comments after the hearings and revise the proposed ordinance as they see fit.

They then will send it to the city council for final review and approval.

Some residents at last week's two hearings indicated the ordinance may be too stringent.

"One man's meat is another man's poison," Darmstadt said, explaining laws which seem too strict to some are considered too lax by others.

The commission will try to weigh both sides and come up with the solution best for the whole community, he said.

nessmen in Prospect Heights, he said.

ALTHOUGH PROSPECT Heights' proposed laws differ little from the county's, he expressed fear the city will enforce them—if not this administration, then maybe the next.

The city will have to deal with violation complaints, he said, warning. "As soon as some neighbor has an ax to grind with another neighbor, it's a cute way to look into the ordinance for harassment or revenge."

Solis and his neighbors live together harmoniously. No one has complained about his business, his pets or his plantings, he said. And when a nearby residents' rabbit hops over to his door or when he awakens to the call of a distant rooster, he does not complain.

He enjoys it. And he wants to keep on enjoying it.

Halas heads USC service unit

George J. Halas Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Halas, 408 S. Maple St., Mount Prospect, has been elected president of the Trojan Knights, an honorary service organization for junior and senior men at the University of Southern California.

The 24-year-old alumnus of St. Viator High School, Arlington Heights, is the grand nephew of Chicago Bears owner George S. Halas. As president of the Knights, Halas, a senior majoring in psychology, will oversee all of the organization's activities including blood drives, and rallies and card stunts for USC football games.

Halas graduates from USC in June and would like to write comedy, produce records or study psychology or business in graduate school.

Attendant's job fits new lifestyles

by LYNN ASINOF

Someday Mike Regan and his wife may fly together. But for now it looks like Regan will fly out of Cleveland, his wife will fly out of San Francisco and the couple will live in Lake Tahoe.

It's the kind of life that's only possible in the airlines industry. And that's just why Regan is now training to be an air flight attendant at United Airlines Training Center in Elk Grove Township.

The Regans have planned it carefully. Mrs. Regan has seniority, having worked as a flight attendant for eight years. And Regan has use of unlimited flight passes, having worked at United in management for 10 years.

"I just decided to make a career change," he said. "We thought this would offer us the most free time and the most flexibility."

THEY'VE EVEN considered how to fit children into their schedules. "We could still be home together three nights a week and have one of us home with the kids the rest of the time," he said.

Regan, 36, sounds like an unlikely candidate for flight training school, but stories like his are surprisingly common.

Bettie Whitlock, 33, has two teenage daughters. She will be based out of New York and her children will live with family in Detroit. The job will give Ms. Whitlock a lot more flexibility and a lot more time off, and she says it won't disrupt family life.

One look around United's training center makes it clear that "coffee, tea or me" vanished with the title "stewardess." Flight attendants today come in all varieties, and they view their job as a career.

"The average age now is 26 or 27 years old," said Chuck Buening, training program development manager. "The average age used to be 21 or 22."

IN THE 1960s, the turnover rate was 30 per cent, because women had to leave when they married and had children. Today turnover is 3 per cent, and about 25 per cent of the flight attendants are married.

Nearly 10 per cent are men, and about 75 per cent of the men now in training are married.

"The work force is changing very much, and the trend is to more stability," Buening said.

Susan Gunderson, supervisor of in-flight services training, has lived through a lot of the changes.

"When I started I was 20 years old and I wasn't thinking in terms of a career," the 28-year-old flight attendant said. "At that time there was a big turnover every 1½ years. The average turnover now is eight years."

THERE HAVE BEEN other changes, like grooming requirements and uniforms. When Ms. Gunderson went through training, everyone had the same hairstyle and there was even a regulation way of applying eyeshadow.

"Today what we are looking for is a natural look that complements the uniform," she said.

The 4½ week training program covers every aspect of a flight attendant's job from food preparation to liquor inventory to packing a suitcase.

The first thing trainees learn is how to tell the 727's from the DC-10's. Special courses also are provided to explain the workings of the airlines industry and the flight attendants' contract.

FOOD PREPARATION and service are taught for both the narrow-bodied and wide-bodied planes. A special food course teaches the flight attendants how to carve a roast, chill wine glasses and toss a salad.

Appearance counseling is a large part of the program. Women have the opportunity to experiment with hairstyles and makeup while men learn how to give themselves manicures and pack a suitcase.

The airlines still have weight and height limits, in large part determined by the airplanes themselves.

"If you are 6-foot-1, you start bumping your head in the galley," Buening said, noting that persons under 5-foot-2 can't reach the overhead racks.

THE WEIGHT requirements at United vary according to height, but everyone weighs in when they arrive at the training center. A 5-foot-2 woman who weighs more than 117 pounds will be sent home, as will others considered overweight.

Those who made it into the training program are the elite. "We take maybe one out of every 30 we interview," Buening said.

Lots of people want to be flight attendants because the benefits are glamorous, the hours are flexible, and the pay is good. Starting flight attendants make about $11,000 a year and have 10 or 11 days off each month.

The job is highly desirable. It fits into many people's lifestyles," Buening said.

THAT'S WHY LOTS of people apply for training but few people quit the job. Only 378 of United's 8,000 flight attendants left last year. "We are now down to training pretty much for attrition," Buening said.

Virginia and Kris Capling are grateful...

Rex is coming home to U.S. soil

By JOHN LAMPINEN

Kris Capling was only 4 when her father went off to war.

She remembers a few things about him, but nine years can cloud a lot of images a preschooler may have had in her head.

"Mostly, I think she remembers not having her father," her mother, Virginia Capling says.

Within a couple of weeks, he will be coming home. But there will be no celebrations by the Roselle family, no welcome-home parties, no warm embraces.

What is left of Rex Capling will be coming home in a box.

HIS REMAINS AND the remains of 11 others who were, until last September, listed as "missing-in-action" now are in Hawaii. The military will spend the next three or four days trying to confirm the identification of the 12 that was provided by Vietnam when the government released the bodies last week.

Mrs. Capling says she has no doubts that the Vietnam identification is accurate. The government has waited too long to risk embarrassing itself with a mistake, she says. It wouldn't make an identification unless it was sure.

It is for her, the end of years of uncertainty as the wife of an Air Force pilot who was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1968.

The most difficult part, she says, has been to help her daughter understand when she sees the 12 bodies delivered to the United States in small, black boxes, when she hears that her father had been buried in a cemetery the Vietnamese refer to as Hades.

"My daughter is 13," Mrs. Capling observes, "and suddenly she has to learn her father was buried in a cemetery called Hell and that he was in a three-foot box."

MRS. CAPLING refuses to dwell on the unexplained manner in which her husband died, that he had parachuted to the ground and radioed to rescue planes that could not land.

Instead, she says Vietnam's release of the bodies is proof of what she and other MIA relatives had said all along — that Vietnam does have records of the fates of those who have remained unaccounted for.

"I just try very hard to believe this is a beginning of an accounting," Mrs. Capling says.

Her nine years were "cruel," she adds. It was a time when her hopes continually were raised and then lowered.

"They keep extending this," she says. "It's never over and every time they do this, you live it over again."

She remembers watching to see if her husband was included every time information on prisoners were released. She remembers Lyndon Johnson's bombing halt and the prospects for peace.

SHE REMEMBERS when Richard Nixon revealed that secret peace negotiations were going on — how it got her hopes up again. She remembers the long, drawn-out formal peace talks and wondering if every day would bring news that her husband was coming home.

Now it is over.

"What it means is neither I nor my daughter will ever have to wonder if Rex is still being held against his will, being mistreated and suffering," Mrs. Capling says. "People can face death, but as far as the other families, it's the not knowing that is intolerable."

She says she is undecided about funeral arrangements. She doesn't know when the body will be released to her, and she doesn't know whether burial will be here or near other relatives in another part of the country.

She has had time to adjust. Vietnam released a list of the names of the 12 in September. Now, almost seven months later, her feelings are hard to describe.

"It's a feeling of frustration," she says. "There isn't anything I can really do. North Vietnam has even taken that away."

"There's very little I can do except be grateful that he's out of that cemetery. That, he did not deserve."

Do Not Pass Up Tax-Deferred Retirement Accounts

Make your retirement years more secure while you save on income taxes today! If you are not currently participating in a company-sponsored retirement, pension or profit-sharing plan, each year you may be eligible to set aside the lesser of $1500 or 15% of your annual wages in a Central Federal Savings Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Neither the funds you deposit nor the high interest you earn would be taxed until you withdraw them upon retirement (as early as age 59½).

Keogh Retirement Accounts are available for self-employed persons, too. For details call Central Federal today!

Passbook accounts earn interest from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. Funds withdrawn from savings certificates before maturity are subject to a substantial interest penalty as required by federal regulations. Early withdrawal from Individual Retirement Accounts and Keogh Accounts is subject to income taxes and additional taxes under the Internal Revenue Code and Internal Revenue Regulations. No minimum balance is required by Central Federal on any IRA or Keogh account.

Ex-con tied to Ariz. fraud

by United Press International
In the eleventh copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said Ned Warren Sr., an ex-convict who arrived in Arizona in 1961, has been a dominant figure in Arizona's land boom and has participated in various land frauds.

The IRE article said:
• As puppet master of a maze of corporations, Warren refined land fraud into a multimillion dollar industry that spawned an army of imitators. He proved to have a shrewd eye for making friends, especially rising political stars, sometimes getting them in on land deals.

• When real estate commissioner J. Fred Talley resigned under fire, Arizonans learned the sordid side of the land fraud business — the corruption of public officials with payoffs and bribes. Bribers apparently had little trouble finding takers.

• One source who partied with Talley, Warren and Associates said: "Anybody that could be bought, their name was brought up at the parties. They found so many people here at such low prices — I'm surprised how cheap some of these local people went. If they would have held off a little bit, they could have got some big money."

• Until recently, Warren operated with virtual impunity. While a few associates went to prison, Warren dangled from one corporate entity to another like a broken field runner, several steps ahead of the prosecutors.

"I LIKE TO BUILD UP companies for 18 months or so and then sell them and walk away from them," he told IRE reporters. That was his explanation for why he remained free while others were convicted. The projects that went bad, such as Cochise College Park, Lake Montezuma and Great Southwest Land & Cattle Co., were all projects he technically had sold to his colleagues, who then ran them into the ground.

But in most instances, he actually directed those companies in various consultant capacities.

The IRE is a group of 300 investigative journalists who sponsored nearly 40 journalists from 25 news organizations who spent six months probing crime in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.
